"It's very convenient, especially the one in Cohasset," said Allain. "In a big parking lot, you can pull up in a big boat trailer or landscaping trailer."

Ice is available for free for charities and other non-profit organizations that simply ask; they may receive 200 pounds of ice for an event at no charge.

"I donate to any charity that has a function," Allain said, asking organizations to email him at gallain@mac.com.

Gerry Allain ties up a 20-pound bag of ice from his ice machine.

The ice machine is designed after the cotton gin.

Water commission

The Water Commission reported to the Board of Selectmen Tuesday night that the Aaron River Dam needs a new valve. There is currently a temporary 4-inch valve in place, replacing the 24-inch valve. The new part will cost $75,000.

"This is a capital expenditure and needs to go to Town Meeting," said Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. However, since it will take 18 weeks to get the new part in, Milanoski urged the board to approve the expenditure that night. "We want to get that part ordered and installed as soon as possible."

Milanoski added that the water commission feels this is a public safety issue. Water Commissioner Leonora explained that the 39-year-old slide gate has had extensive pressure on it since it was installed.

The cost for the new part will be paid by the ratepayers, said Milanoski, tied into water operations.

AROUND TOWN

'Movie Queen' was filmed in Cohasset

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Ah, August

Hello Cohasset...I cannot believe that this is the first Friday of August, 2012! For me, July was a bit of a blur overall with a bit of surgery/recovery and now, I have August to make the most of this summer before school and, gulp, COLLEGE for Callie, something I am definitely not prepared for emotionally. Because of this, I guess I will share the reminder to everyone including myself to make all the moments count this month, big ones, small ones, even the ones that make you crazy and feel like saying, "I cant wait until school starts again..." Before we know it, all to soon, it will be here. I for one, am not looking forward to it at all. Callie on the other hand...well, I am sure she is a bit sad too...right??? Anyway, on with this week's column.

Movie memories

Here is a great event for Cohasset residents both young and old to enjoy with family and friends. In conjunction with the Cohasset Historical Society, Cohasset Elder Affairs is delighted to announce a second showing of "The Movie Queen." This 1939 silent movie, about 40 minutes in length, was filmed locally and features citizens of Cohasset as they welcome "The Movie Queen" and escort her around the area.

If you grew up in town, this is an amazing way to connect with folks you may remember, including relatives and friends. Even if you are "new" to Cohasset, the film captures the images and spirit of the town area during this important time in history. The film will be shown on the "wide" screen, at 11 a.m. on Wednesday, August 8, at Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St., followed by a homemade lunch prepared by one of our "Celebrity Chefs." Please call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112 to reserve your spot!

Charleston

Hats off to Katherine Baker of Cohasset, who received Distinguished Honors from the College of Charleston, Charleston, S.C., for the 2012 spring semester. Distinguished Honors are awarded to students enrolled in at least 14 credit hours who maintain a grade point ratio between 3.60 and 3.79.

Bates grad

Meghan B. Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas N. Anderson of Cohasset, received a bachelor of arts degree in psychology from Bates College on Sunday, May 27, 2012. During her time at Bates, her undergraduate activities included captain of the women's tennis team and a senior admissions fellow. Meghan was a 2008 graduate of Cohasset Middle High School. Congratulations!

UMass-Lowell

UMass-Lowell announced the names of students who achieved academic distinction for the 2012 spring semester. Named to the dean's list was Myles Ross Collins-Wooley of Cohasset. To qualify, students must have completed at least 12 graded credits for the semester, have at least a 3.25 grade point average with no grade lower than C and may not have any incompletes.

Great work, Myles!

Auditions

Coming up this month is some very exciting news from a local club here in town. The Cohasset Dramatic Club announces auditions for the first production of its 91st season, the critical and popular Broadway success, "Steel Magnolias" by Robert Harling, directed by Theresa Chiasson.

Auditions take place August 20 & 21 at 7 pm, with callbacks if necessary on August 22 at 7 pm. at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. The director requests that auditioners prepare a one-minute monologue. (This is requested but not mandatory). Auditions will also consist of readings from the script. This sharp witted play calls for 6 women ages 18 - ?. The story centers on a group of gossipy southern ladies in a small-town beauty parlor. For character descriptions, go to: www.cohassetdramaticclub.org/currentshow.html or contact them at info@cohassetdramaticclub.org with questions.

"Steel Magnolias" runs from Nov. 9 - 18 on Fridays and Saturdays at 7:30 pm and Sundays at 2 pm. at the historic Cohasset Town Hall Theater.

Church camp

Looking for free summer fun for your children and their friends? Crafts, snacks, songs and stories are being offered to all children entering grades 1-5 at Beechwood Congregational Church, 51 Church St., on August 13-17 from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. Spread the word, and register your kids today. Call Sue at (781) 383-6836 for more info. or go to: www.groupvbspro.com/vbs/ez/beechwoodvbs.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

'Tri for Jett' tops at Marsh Madness Triathlon

"I have been to a lot of triathlons and I can tell you that this was one of the best relay team performances I have ever witnessed."
Race Director Chris Hebert

The "Tri for Jett" relay team of Mark Maggi, James Hughes and Jim Frame cruised to a commanding win at the Marsh Madness Triathlon on Duxbury bay on July 22.

James Hughes of South Boston, a former division 1 collegiate swimmer, gave the team an early lead, exiting the water at the front of the first wave of swimmers in a time of just 4 minutes and 58 seconds. Jim Frame of Cohasset then opened up the team's lead by an even greater margin as he finished the 11-mile bike leg in 24 minutes and 51 seconds, at a blistering pace of 26.6 mph. By the time Boston Marathon qualifier Mark Maggi of Cohasset entered the beach for the 3 mile portion of the race, the team's lead was so wide that Mark made the turn for home at the halfway point with no other runners even in sight. Mark's pace of 5:34 per mile was even more remarkable given that the race took place in the sand. The team's overall time was 47:09. The second place team finished in 59:48.

Marsh Madness Race Director Chris Hebert says, "I have been to a lot of triathlons and I can tell you that this was one of the best relay team performances I have ever witnessed."

Together, the larger "Tri for Jett" team of 18 individuals raised over $14,000 on behalf of the Jett Foundation, a Kingston based organization that is committed to finding a cure for Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy, the most common, progressive, life-limiting disorder diagnosed in childhood.

Race co-director Richard Berard says, "The 'Tri for Jett' team has our full support and we were happy to see a group competing for such a worthwhile cause. They brought a lot of positive energy to our event and we look forward to hosting them again next year."

The team wishes to thank all their individual contributors as well as the following corporate sponsors: Axeda Corporation, BMW Gallery of Norwell, Carol McKean Events, Granite City Electric, The Ink Spot, Leslie Smith Design Decisions, Mike Ward Electric, Pilgrim Bank, South Shore Bank and Quincy Mutual.

Food Pantry launches Fresh Produce Program

Since the beginning of the Fresh Produce Program in June, more than 75 pounds of fresh vegetables have been donated to Cohasset Food Pantry. Recipes are provided to clients, who are excited to have fresh produce available every week.

Gardeners are asked consider donating extra vegetables. They can be left in the cooler at the Pantry behind St. Anthony's Rectory on Mondays. For those shopping at the Farmer's Market, consider buying a little extra and bringing it to the Food Pantry Table at the Farmer's Market from 2 to 6 p.m., on Thursdays.

The Food Pantry's goal for this growing season is to distribute more than 300 pounds of fresh produce. Let's work together to make it happen. The Food Pantry is also happy to accept canned food and monetary donations.

NEWS UPDATE

CSCR students take on Meetinghouse Pond problem

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Students from the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) gave a presentation to the Board of Selectmen Tuesday outlining potential causes and solutions to the algae problem in the Meetinghouse Pond.

The initiative stems from a new partnership between the CSCR, a student-run organization that allows high school students to participate in local environmental research, and Cohasset's new Health Agent, Felix Zemel. The team has met to determine what has been plaguing the pond, which has displayed troublesome amounts of algae growth since spring.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that this partnership creates an opportunity for young Cohasset citizens to help solve a town problem.

The pond was cleaned out and drained by the town's Department of Public Works (DPW) last week.

"We decided to close it down until we figure out how to solve this issue," said Milanoski.

In a relatively short amount of time, the high school student volunteers have already come up with some solutions.

Along with Dr. Ann Thomae, CSCR lab manager Ashley Howard, and students Alexandra Lamier, Christine Guinee and Erin Driscoll explained what they believe the nature of the problem to be, explaining the issues through a Power Point presentation.

The students sought to find out where the algae was coming from and why it was forming, since, according to Howard, "There are no other years on record where algae growth is noted."

However, Howard said the state's Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) reported a statewide increase in algae blooms due to above-average temperatures this summer, which could account for the increase in the town common's pond.

"Algae likes warm temperatures," said Howard. "It creates the ideal environment to grow further."

The students also think last year's pond restoration could be partially to be blame. "It's possible some of the construction materials used negatively impacted the pond's ecology," Howard said, referring to the concrete added to create a new sidewalk around the pond. She also noted that the ecological impact was not accounted for in the construction plans.

The pond was also given a new rubber membrane at the bottom, which could have "impeded bacteria growth," creating "a better environment for algae."

The students also considered the lack of moving water in the pond and the fountain shut off; the stagnant water, too, creates an algae-friendly environment, Howard explained.

CSCR tested the pond water's pH a few weeks ago, separating the pond into four different quadrants. The average pH was 10; seven is considered to be neutral, so this amount was "very high," said Driscoll. However, after much of the algae was scooped out last week, the pH dropped to 6.5

The pond tested negative for nitrates and phosphates, indicators of fertilizers and pesticides, and Gunnie said "all other testings we took were normal."

Whatever the solution might be, it's clear that fixing and preserving the community resource that is the common pond is a town priority.

The first step to getting the pond back to its natural, healthiest state has already been taken: draining it. The next step is to clean the re-circulating pump, which has been clogged with algae, then to add sand to the bottom.

After that, the pond will be refilled with de-chlorinated tap water and the pumps will be turned on again. CSCR will continue to monitor the water quality. Once the pond is stabilized, the town can look into adding aquatic life.

"We're looking at the long-term picture," said Milanoski. "We want [the pond] to survive on its own."

Whatever the solution might be, it's clear that fixing and preserving the community resource that is the common pond is a town priority.

As Lamier put it, "During summer events, like the arts festival and the farmers' market, the pond is really a place where kids can come – and adults too – enjoy the weather and have fun."

OUR VIEW

CSCR to the rescue

We do not know of any other area towns that have a non-profit, student-based environmental group that is as in-tune with critical, quality-of-life issues as the Center for Student Coastal Research, right here in Cohasset.

Over the past weeks, CSCR has jumped into the Meetinghouse Pond issue. While the pond was restored with monies approved by Town Meeting from the Community Preservation Fund with the best of intentions – the project became problematic once the pond became overwhelmed with algae.

While there has been plenty of jokes about the pond that also recently featured a plastic alligator – Meetinghouse Pond is one of the most iconic places in our town. Along with the flagpole, First Parish Church, and the buildings that surround the common – it is a centerpiece of one of the most pristine town greens in the entire country.

Nothing says quaint New England better than Cohasset Common. The pond is a central part of that scene. Losing it is not an option.

We applaud CSCR for helping to determine what is going on below the surface environmentally that could turn such a lovely pond into a stagnant, slimy place.

This week CSCR was also involved in cleaning out the culvert that connects the Gulf River and Cohasset Harbor. We are indeed blessed to have this organization in our town.

Not so dark

We applaud the fact that the town, police and fire departments have found a way to keep our police station from "going dark" during the evening, overnight and weekend hours. We feared that if the station did indeed "go dark" during that time – meaning it would be unmanned – it could create a public safety issue.

Soon our dispatch service will "migrate" over to the South Shore Regional Emergency Communications Center in Hingham. That move and the center itself are bound to have some growing pains and adjustment issues. Let's hope that public safety will be enhanced and ultimately the four towns involved will realize some monetary benefits from the regionalization.

Anyone who has been in New England longer than five minutes knows how parochial we are. Here on the South Shore — travel from Cohasset to Hingham to Weymouth, for example — and you immediately know which town you're in because each has its own unique character.

The SSRECC will be a test case to see if regionalization can succeed in our area.

Algae bloom in Inner Little Harbor takes on strange, confusing shape

HAMILTON

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Heartfelt thanks from Dykas Family

Dear Cohasset families/friends of Mr. Dykas,

As many of you know, my brother-in-law David Brazil recently died at the young age of 45 of sudden heart failure. A number of caring and wonderful Cohasset families sent out an email that mentioned a scholarship fund that was established in honor of David's two children, Hanna, age 8, and Jason, age 10. My family and I received an outpouring of donations to the Hanna and Jason Brazil Scholarship Fund.

My family and I have been struggling to understand such a tragic loss in our lives. The outpouring of donations, caring thoughts, kind words and letters have helped in the healing process and will support Jason and Hanna in their future years. David was an extremely generous and caring person who was always willing to lend a hand. He was dedicated to his family and would be truly grateful that so many families found it in their hearts to help his children.

We are all deeply touched by your sincerity and generosity and express the utmost gratitude and thank you to all.

Kevin Dykas and Family

COMMENTARY

Shedding light on Cat Dam

JEFF WAAL

I read the Mariner article on Cat Dam in last Friday's Mariner and feel that some of the statements in the article need to be addressed and corrected.

This saga of Cat Dam began a few years ago when the Board of Selectmen decided to appoint a committee to change the existing schedule for the opening of the tidal gates at Cat Dam, not "accidentally left open for two days" as reported in the Mariner. Upon hearing of this new schedule, Elizabeth Koulaheras, Chief of the Wetlands and Waterways Programs at the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection, sent a letter to the Cohasset Conservation Commission. In her letter, dated March 12, 2009, she stated, "Through a copy of this letter the MassDEP urges the Town to file a Notice of Intent for any work that may have been conducted on the tide gates and to include in that NOI a tide gate Operation and Maintenance Plan."

She goes on to say, "The MassDEP also recommends that the Town consider redesigning or reconfiguring the tide gates to increase tidal exchange. MassDEP is very supportive of projects, which propose restoration of tidally restricted coastal wetlands. The MassDEP would like to take this opportunity to suggest a comprehensive plan be considered by the Town to address tidal habitat/saltmarsh restoration in Inner Little Harbor."

As a result, the Town appropriated $17,000 at the 2009 Special Town Meeting for the purpose of preparing the requested Notice of Intent. The NOI was prepared and filed with the DEP on Sept. 10, 2010, (DEP File #013-1026). The E20, a group of abutters that opposed this original filing by the Selectmen, convinced the Selectmen to withdraw the NOI and replace it with one prepared by their engineer. The second NOI, paid for by the E20 was submitted on Jan. 21, 2011, (DEP File #013-1040). It was not a compromise solution as suggested in the second paragraph of the article.

A hearing was held on the new NOI. Seven state and federal agencies weighed in on the E20 supported schedule. All of them stated that the E20 supported schedule does not meet the performance standards of the Massachusetts Wetlands Protection Act, the Cohasset Wetlands Bylaw or federal water quality standards. The engineering firm hired by the town has stated, "The practice of opening all three gates for some period of time to be followed by closure of all three gates is not in compliance with the performance standards of the Wetlands Protection Act or the Cohasset Wetland Protection By Law and Regulations and will not help ILH meet the Massachusetts Water Quality Standards." Yet, the Town pressed on because that's what E20 wanted them to do.

To be clear, our group has never been approached by the Town to see if a compromise could be reached. The only option given to us was to withdraw our appeal. That's not a compromise by any stretch of the imagination.

Many of the commentators state that the NOI mischaracterizes or misinterprets water quality data presented in the NOI. Eric Hutchins of NOAA stated, "I am not aware of any other tide restriction project in the Gulf of Maine where substantiating a case where the level of daily, weekly and seasonal manipulation such as proposed for the Cat Dam site would be environmentally beneficial. I view the proposed management of the tide gate as a clear negative impact to the functions and values of this wetland." The original NOI paid for by the citizens of Cohasset had no negative comments from state and federal agencies.

That's why the citizen group, of which I am a member, appealed the resulting Order of Conditions issued by the Conservation Commission. The E20 supported NOI is not good for Inner Little Harbor and it is not good for the Town.

To be clear, our group has never been approached by the Town to see if a compromise could be reached. The only option given to us was to withdraw our appeal. That's not a compromise by any stretch of the imagination.

The new chairman of the Conservation Commission stated, "Any dissatisfied property owner on Inner Little Harbor has the ability to block any change to the conditions as they presently

Voter registration deadline is Aug. 17

The last day to register to vote or change party enrollment for the State Primary is Friday Aug. 17. The Town Clerk's office will be open 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. The State Primary is Thursday Sept. 6. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Absentee ballots are now available for a registered voter who will be unable to vote at the polls on election day due to:

- Absence from Cohasset during normal polling hours.
- Physical disability preventing one from gong to the polling place.
- Religious belief

The voter or a family member can complete the absentee ballot application. Ballots are voted in the Town Clerk's office or mailed to the voter.

HEALTH NOTES

WN Virus and mosquitoes

STEVE BOBO

A positive case of WNV in Scituate appeared recently. The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) announced that an adult dead crow tested positive for West Nile Virus (WNV) at the State Laboratory Institute. The bird was found May 21 in Wakefield, Mass.

A representative of the MDPH stated that "Although WNV has been found this year, a single WNV-positive bird is not a prediction of the nature of the encephalitis season that will occur in Massachusetts. The MDPH Field Surveillance Team collects specimens regularly and MDPH will provide an early warning to the public should the risk of human disease arise this year."

The finding of other cases of WNV in Massachusetts this year is expected, although the infection of this single bird is earlier than the first indication of WNV activity last year. This year WNV activity already has been reported from other states with infected birds found in New York (1 crow), Pennsylvania (1 crow), District of Columbia (1 crow), Virginia (2 crows) and Florida (1 crow and 3 other species). The WNV-infected crow from Albany, NY was found on May 1, and there have been no other infected birds found to date in New York.

The MDPH Mosquito-Borne Disease Surveillance Program (MDSP) field activities began a few days ago and mosquitoes and additional birds from the Wakefield area will be tested next week. There may not be many additional birds found with infections in late May and early June, but MDPH will be testing appropriate samples to identify virus activity wherever it may arise, and keep the public informed. The purpose of the MDSP is to provide early warning of the risk of human infection, and provide advisories on how to reduce the risk of infection.

Risk of human disease is low before the later summer season.

Reducing your risk:

- Check window and door screens to assure they are in good repair.
- Remove standing water near homes, clean gutters and drains, change water in birdbaths every several days and properly maintain swimming pools.
- Take precautions to limit exposure to mosquitoes:
- Limit your time outdoors when you notice high levels of mosquito activity (biting); or if you remain outdoors, wear clothing that provides more coverage of your skin (such as long pants instead of shorts).
- Use mosquito repellents containing DEET. Follow label instructions for repellents, do not overuse (repeat applications should be limited to label recommendations) and use appropriate low concentration products for children. Repellents should not be used on infants.
- Mosquito netting can be used to cover carriages and playpens and sleeping areas..

For other information on EEE and WNV encephalitis see the MDPH website from a link on the MDPH homepage at: www.state.ma.us/dph. or call the Cohasset Board of Health.

ONE-DAY ADVENTURES

Beautiful setting, great music

JOHN MCMAHON

Newport Folk Festival worth the trip

Rodriguez performing on the intimate Museum Stage on Sunday afternoon. PHOTO/JOHN MCMAHON

I vividly remember stepping out of my mid-sized rental car into several inches of wet snow outside a Courtyard Marriott on February 29. An ordinary business trip to the mid-west interrupted by the familiar ding sound of my iphone, letting me know I had a new e-mail. The subject line read "Newport Folk Festival Line Up Announced" and I quickly clicked on the attachment and scrolled through the amazing list of almost 50 acts. Suddenly summer did not seem so far away. The Newport Folk Festival, 78 miles to the southwest at Fort Adams State Park, was calling my name.

George Wein, who had already established the Newport Jazz Festival in 1954, with the support of Folk Music legends including Peter Seeger and Oscar Brand, founded the Newport Folk Festival in 1959 and (at age 86) he still runs the non-profit event today that has produced numerous memorable moments. That first year an unbilled musician, 18-year-old Joan Baez, performed two songs with singer/songwriter Bob Gibson and was dubbed "The Barefoot Madonna" by the delighted audience. In 1965, Bob Dylan played the first plugged in set of his professional career at the Newport Folk Festival, signaling a polarizing shift in style for "The Voice of a Generation" (sections of the crowd booed during his set that day).

Two things really make the Newport Folk Festival unique.

The first thing is the beautiful setting of Fort Adams Park. The 10,000 fans in attendance are treated to panoramic views of Newport Harbor, the Claiborne Pell Bridge and a seemingly infinite number of sailboats (several boats will drop anchor and blow their air horns in lieu of applause for popular songs). Fort Adams, an architectural wonder built in 1824, serves as the backdrop for the main stage as fans spread out their blankets and beach chairs over six acres of green grass.

The second thing that makes this festival unique is mutual admiration that the artists, young and old, seem to have for one another. Jackson Browne, who was performing at the Newport Folk Festival for the first time, claimed it felt more like a family reunion than a music festival. Brittany Howard from Alabama Shakes joined My Morning Jacket on stage during their set on Saturday and Johanna and Klara Soderberg from the Swedish act First Aid Kit joined Connor Oberst on Stage Sunday just to name a few of the amazing collaborations. The sides of the main stage were always jam packed with artists wanting to catch other performances. Festival Founder George Wein established a philosophy early on, for every up-and-coming band you program, book someone who likely influenced them. This philosophy has paid huge dividends.

Strong clock management skills are required for the Newport Folk Festival. There are four stages spread across the vast state park. Most likely two bands you desperately want to see will be playing at the same time on two different stages. Map out your game plan with the group en route to the venue, upon arrival set up home base at the main stage then move around as needed. Definitely set aside some time to explore all of the distinctive jewelry, clothing, artwork and hand-made musical instruments in the tents set up just inside the main entrance. Guaranteed you will find a special memento for you or a family member. Finally, and most importantly, bring your kids! The festival is 100 percent kid friendly with sing-alongs, arts & crafts tables, hula-hoops and face painting. Tickets for kids 3-15 are significantly cheaper too.

What to Know When You Go:

- Leave the cooler at home. Dozens of food vendors provide everything from oysters to Thai food to crepes.
- Post-show traffic can be painful. Take a water taxi from Perrotti Park round trip to add to the adventure.
- Get tickets in advance. Saturday and Sunday sold out three months in advance this year.

Unfortunately Newport Folk Festival 2013 is 12 months away but Newport Jazz Festival, with The Tedeschi Trucks Band headlining Sunday is THIS WEEKEND at the same beautiful venue with tickets still available. Make a spontaneous weekend out it by taking in the spectacular views on the 3.5 mile cliff walk, reserve a grass court at the International Tennis Hall of Fame (yes, even the stadium court is available on a first come first serve basis) or try your hand at glass blowing at Thames Glass (they will ship your creation to you two days later).

More good news, based on the performances I saw at the 2012 Newport Folk Festival I have some recommendations to add to you summer play list via itunes or Amazon.com depending on your preferred format.

- Alabama Shakes (Boys & Girls): Debut album from ragged garage soul outfit from Athens, Alabama channels Janis Joplin.
- Gary Clark Jr. (Bright Lights): Twenty-eight-year-old Austin, Texas blues rocker was Spin Magazine's Breakout Artist of the Month in November 2011.
- Rodriguez (Cold Fact): The subject of Sundance Film Fest documentary "Searching for Sugar Man" blends psychedelic rock and folk.
- Tallest Man on Earth (There's No Leaving Now): Swedish singer-songwriter with American Folk influences in a mostly acoustic mode on his third album.
- Sharon Van Etten (Tramp): The indie rocker describes her music as diary entries and will take the stage at Lollapalooza this weekend.

SENIOR SCENE

We were impressed by Marshfield Senior Center

LOUISE SMULLEN

The Center is an attractive, freestanding building with plenty of parking space.

On one of those hot, humid July days about 30 seniors from Cohasset boarded a bus and rode in air-conditioned comfort to Marshfield, where we toured their Senior Center. We were accompanied by some of the CEA staff members, as well as representatives of the Social Service League, which sponsored the event. The Center is an attractive, freestanding building with plenty of parking space.

When we arrived a French lesson was in progress in one of the rooms. There is a computer room where some folks were making use of the computers. We met a gentleman who volunteers his expertise for those who need technical assistance.

In another room several people were making lovely hand-hooked rugs. In the art room were both men and women busy with woodcarving.

These are just a few of the many activities offered. There is a pool table, exercise room, and a cozy library.

The function hall is quite large and can be transformed into two spaces by means of a folding panel. At one end of this room is a commercial kitchen. At this end of the hall lunches are served five days a week.

The Marshfield COA is now feeling the need of more space and is beginning to raise funds for finishing the second floor of the building.

On the way home we stopped at P.J.'s restaurant for lunch, arriving back in town just in time to avoid being caught in the approaching storm.

Many young seniors of 60 plus now keep at their jobs beyond what once was considered "retirement" age. I myself was gainfully employed until the age of 76. The first thing I did was to go to our Center for lunch and have never regretted it.

When you do retire, wouldn't it be nice if you could have a place to hang out with old friends? A place where you could work on a hobby with others who shared your interest? A place where you could learn something new? As you no doubt know, plans are under way for a freestanding Senior Center here in Cohasset. Let's all pull together and make the dream a reality.

Activities

Also in July, we enjoyed the annual barbeque at Allerton House in Hingham. We were joined by two Cohasset friends who now make Allerton their home. After lunch there was a quiz about what Allerton House offered. Prizes were awarded to those who knew the answers.

Although some of our activities have slacked off until September, we are still enjoying those tasty lunches three days a week. Don't forget Scrabble at one o'clock on Thursdays, and be sure to sign up for a monthly massage.

On Aug. 8 there will be an 11 a.m. showing at the Center of "The Movie Queen." This movie was filmed in Cohasset in 1939, and all the actors were Cohasset residents, some of whom you may have known. You may recognize some of the scenes – the Fire Department at the Harbor, Poland's Garage, the old Osgood High School on Elm Street and more. If you attend you may want to stay for lunch. In that case, be sure to make a reservation (781-383-9112).

Cohasset Food Pantry needs donations

Cohasset Food Pantry is a 501 (c) (3) nonprofit, volunteer organization, located in the rear of Saint Anthony's Rectory at 129 South Main St. The pantry operates on charitable donations from Cohasset churches, private citizens, business and community organizations.

The Food Pantry may be reached by calling 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Leave a message and calls will be returned. The mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. It is open every Tuesday morning. Clients may come from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Donations may be left at the pantry before 9 a.m., on Tuesdays, or by contacting the Food Pantry. Donations may also be left at any Cohasset church on Sunday mornings. There are several Cohasset donation boxes located throughout the town, including St. Anthony Parish Hall, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Cohasset Police Station, Shaw's and Stop & Shop Supermarkets.

Cohasset Food Pantry provides food and other necessities to any Cohasset resident who demonstrates a need. New clients may call the pantry to arrange a meeting with one of the directors and complete the required paper work. Each client must provide two forms of identification such as a current Massachusetts driver's license, and one other legal document, showing proof of residence.

The pantry can use the following items.

Coffee, tea, fruit juice, canned fruit-no sugar added, pancake mix, maple syrup, school-size snacks, cereal, corned beef hash, beef stew, chicken/vegetable/beef broth, strawberry/raspberry jam, diced tomatoes, ketchup/mayonnaise/relish, laundry/dish detergents, car soap and cleaning products. The wish list also includes fresh fruit and vegetables such as carrots, celery, green beans, lettuce, tomatoes, spinach, potatoes-white/sweet, oranges, apples, or any fruit in season.

Cohasset Food Pantry appreciates the continued support of family, friends and neighbors in the Cohasset community.

FOR THE RECORD

What's going on in the neighborhood?

GREGORY MATHIS

Have you ever asked yourself the question, "I wonder what's going on?" as sirens pierce the air and police cruisers and fire trucks go speeding by?

It probably goes without saying, but police and fire news of all types is among the most popular content on our websites.

From mundane, sanitized police log listings we get from police departments, and short stories on various incidents of interest, to big stories on big crimes, police and fire news generates a lot of online viewer traffic.

In the spring we added another layer of police and fire content, this time coming directly from the source. Check it out if you haven't already.

The police and fire scanner on your Wicked Local site will not only keep you informed about what's happening in your neighborhood and community, but in nearby communities as well. Each scanner includes the police and fire frequencies for six neighboring towns to keep you up to date with public safety activity in your region.

After a couple of clicks on your Wicked Local website — first on the News tab in the top navigation on the homepage, then to the tab below that reads "Police & Fire Scanner" — you'll be listening to dispatchers and public safety personnel relaying information about incidents they're responding to.

You can keep the buttons green for each community to listen to all of them, or you can select certain communities to block by clicking the button to red on the towns you're not interested in.

Full instructions on how to use the scanner and take advantage of its multiple functions can be found below the scanner player on your Wicked Local website.

Police and fire scanners are nothing new, especially for news organizations. We count on them to keep us informed about major accidents, fires or other breaking news. And many residents have police and fire scanners at home to keep up with what's going on in town, especially in their own neighborhood.

Our online police and fire scanner, powered by Rangecast, takes police and fire coverage to another level. Not only can listeners hear what's happening as it happens, but you will also be able to rewind the scanner much like an audio DVR to listen to calls and incidents that happened hours or even days ago.

So the next time you hear a fire engine or police cruiser pass by your house or place of work with sirens blaring, see smoke off in the distance or drive past a bad accident scene, turn to your Wicked Local website for news and updates and launch the police and fire scanner to hear for yourself what's going on.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Going beyond the barnyard

JON BELBER

"When will we get back to the farm?" is a question I sometimes hear when out walking with kids at Holly Hill Farm. Holly Hill Farm has about three and a half acres of growing fields currently under cultivation. We grow a wide variety of vegetables, flowers and herbs, and a little bit, not enough, of fruit. There are another few aces that could be devoted to growing crops, if time and labor allowed. here are about four acres of buildings, barns and homes.

And much to the surprise and delight of many visitors, families, school groups and summer program participants, there are about 130 acres of woods and trails for people to walk, explore and discover.

Our school groups try and visit the different natural environments and farm operations to gain a better understanding of what it means to grow local, organic produce using sustainable means, but it is thanks to some of the teachers at the farm, that we are able to go beyond the barnyard and immediate entrance to see what we can find and study in other natural areas.

Our summer programs allow for lengthy visits to the salt marsh, historic ice pond, marked and unmarked paths and open fields that double as large meadows with insects, wildflowers and diverse, competitive growing species. On a summer day, you might find children prancing as hoppy toads or dancing as praying mantis as they head with nets, boots, backpacks, and a willingness to immerse themselves in nature. To spend the better part of three hours of a morning in a new and fascinating place is a nice addition to the typical weeding, sowing and harvesting that usually occur in the gardens and growing beds.

So, the question of when one will return to the farm is usually met with the reply, "we are at the farm," and a bit more explanation of the many aspects of the farm, fields, woods, brooks and field edges. An even larger article could try and explain just how important the woods and these natural areas are to the concept and practice of organic farming, and what one could learn from theses other parts of Holly Hill.

But it is also great to hear that during and after most of these programs, children are exclaiming that this is the best camp or that even though a new sandal was swallowed by the changing tides, the fun experience of the adventure was far more important than worrying too greatly about the lost shoe, since the soul (and perhaps the sole) remain intact. Kids are excited by nature and many parents were unaware that Holly Hill Farm was home to these unique places.

Even though I too often seek to make more compost and grow more kale, it is important to remember there is life teeming beyond the barnyard. Just as one participant cleaned and brought his own net, so as to better seek and scoop in the fresh water pond versus the salt water pond, arriving ready and eager are terrific skills for "seeing" the whole farm and its many parts, along with the trees in the forest.

LIBRARY CORNER

Basic word workshop Wednesday

Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. Call 781-383-1348 to register or for more information or visit the website at www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Basic Word Workshop - Learn how to use Microsoft Word to type documents and letters at this hands-on workshop for novices at 10:30 a.m., Wednesday, Aug. 8. Seating is limited. Reserve a seat by calling the reference librarian at 383-1348. Free.

Museum Passes Available - Summer is the perfect time to visit museums in the Boston area. The library has a variety of museum passes available to checkout to Cohasset library cardholders. Explore the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston Children's Museum, Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, the U.S.S. Constitution Museum or a number of other museums. Visit the library's website at www.cohassetlibrary.org or call the library to reserve a pass.

Foreign Film Collection - Next time one visits the library, browse the growing foreign film collection for provocative, award-winning movies from Mongolia, Germany, China and Israel as well as a number of other countries. Most films have English subtitles and are not recommended for those younger than 17. All movies circulate for one week.

Art Exhibit - South Shore Art Center will present an exhibit by Ted Polomis at the library through Aug. 31. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wednesdays and Fridays; and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays. Free.

YOUNG ADULTS

Required Summer Reading - Come discuss the required summer reading from Cohasset Public Schools. Gather ideas about summer reading assignments, and get the opinions of classmates.

Saturday, August 11. Times vary by grade level. Sixth grade: Wonder discussion from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. Seventh grade: Schooled discussion from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Grade eight: "Diary of a Young Girl" discussion, 1 to 2 p.m.

Saturday, Aug. 18. Times vary by grade level. Ninth grade: "Animal Farm" discussion 9:15 to 10:15 a.m.; 10th grade: "Epic of Gilgamesh" discussion 10:30 to 11:30 a.m.; 11th grade: "Ethan Frome" discussion, 1 to 2 p.m.

Teen Advisory Board Meeting - Monday, Aug. 6, at 5 p.m. Come discuss program ideas and collection development. For more information, contact Meaghan at mthompson@ocln.org.

CHILDREN

Summer Reading Program - Dream Big - READ! program ends today!

Participants in the Dream Big – READ program should return their logs to the library to help earn a sheep from Heifer International for a family somewhere in the world.

Deer Hill students are reminded to have their Passport to Literacy stamped by Mrs. Moody or a staff member when returning the summer reading log.

Summer reading is funded by Friends of the Cohasset Library.

CAT DAM

exist." That's not entirely true. An abutter can appeal an Order of Conditions issued by DEP, but they cannot block anything. A property owner has the right to authorize or not any activity on their property. Except in this case, the Town has an easement on the two properties on which Cat Dam is located. So the Town has the right to request changes to the flushing schedule of Inner Little Harbor.

The Con Com chairman argues that "The only way in which the existing compromised position approved by the Con Com can move forward is if the appellants drop their appeal. If not, the town won't pay the money to challenge their appeal, in which case if the appeal is successful, it will block the compromised position." Again, that's not entirely true. If the Town files the necessary reports requested by DEP and the appeal moves forward, the DEP will issue a Superseding Order of Conditions, which will agree with the E20 flushing schedule, modify the E20 flushing schedule, create a different flushing schedule or tell the Town to "try again."

The Interim Town Manager stated, "Because of the appeal, we're into this project for well over $50,000 of town money." I would like to see an accounting of that money. After our appeal was filed, the only time that the Town was involved was to have an attorney write a letter to DEP suggesting that a MEPA filing was unnecessary, to bring an attorney to the MEPA site visit and to bring an attorney to a meeting with MEPA in Boston.

The Interim Town Manager also stated, "There was a compromise made (the NOI); that was appealed. Due to the appeal, the (tide-flushing) could go back to the old way of doing things." That wasn't a compromise; the Selectmen caved in to the E20. The old way of doing things still exists (or should anyway). The new schedule, whatever it is, cannot be implemented until a Superseding Order of Conditions is issued by the DEP.

So, the Cat Dam saga continues. Why would I be willing to withdraw our appeal? My only concern is the environmental health of Inner Little Harbor. I only wish that the Town would listen to the recommendations of the seven State and Federal agencies whose experts have spent a significant amount of time reviewing this project and who all agree that our environment will suffer if the interests of a small private interest group are followed.

CAT DAM

No compromise for neighbor dispute

Selectmen vote to take no further action on Cat Dam

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Years of conflict, packed public meetings, and heated debate between two neighborhood factions came to an abrupt end Tuesday night in the final hour of the Board of Selectmen's meeting.

The Selectmen voted, under advisement of the Acting Town Manager and Conservation Commission chairman, to take no further action on the inner Little Harbor tidal gate, also known as "Cat Dam."

Cat Dam is a tide gate mechanism with three gates that has been used to control the water flow in inner Little Harbor for over 100 years. It is located on Nichols Road, but affects the properties that border inner Little Harbor.

Neither group seemingly "won" the battle over Cat Dam; rather, the selectmen's decision means the matter is "case closed," for now. The board voted 4-1 to take no further action because, as officials put it, the town has spent too much time, money and resources on Cat Dam.

Background

Two distinct factions, the abutters group known as the Environmental 20 or "E20," and a group of citizen appellants, have disagreed over the opening and closing of the tidal gates since the flushing schedule was changed in April 2008. The previous flushing schedule was reportedly in place for over 30 years; the new schedule allowed for 50 percent more flushing, which the E20 was in favor of (see timeline). This schedule was included in a Notice of Intent (NOI), or plan for maintenance and operation of Cat Dam, paid for by members of the E20. The selectmen voted 3-2 in 2009 to approve this NOI; after changes were made in July 2011, the Con Com also signed off on the E20-sponsored schedule. Then in August last year, a group of 18 concerned citizens appealed the NOI, stating that it was harmful to the harbor's environment; the appeal asked for the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) to issue a superseding order of conditions.

Two weeks ago, the Con Com met and discussed a recent letter from DEP asking how the town plans to proceed with Cat Dam. If the town did not soon issue an Environmental Notification Form (ENF), the DEP would deny both the current NOI and the citizens' appeal.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski attended the Con Com meeting and asked the commission to support taking no further action on Cat Dam, explaining that the project has cost the town a total of $50,000 over the years. Con Com chair Jack Creighton then asked the appellants to withdraw their appeal, unless the two opposing groups could reach a compromise.

Creighton came before the selectmen Tuesday night and explained the conclusion he and the Con Com had reached. First, Milanoski went over a brief history of the Cat Dam debate, chalking the matter up to a "two-day infraction" of the tide-flushing schedule, when the gates were left open for two days longer than usual by accident. Reports indicate that the change in schedule was unauthorized by the selectmen, who had appointed a Cat Dam committee to manage the schedule.

Milanoski further explained that the NOI the selectmen approved in 2009 was the version that "appeared to have the support of most who live at inner Little Harbor." This NOI was subsequently appealed by the opposing citizen's group, which led to the DEP review and required a review by the Mass. Environmental Protection Act (MEPA) office. While officials met with MEPA in March and were told the town must file an ENF, little has been done since then; the matter came up again after DEP wrote a letter asking where the town stood.

Milanoski stated the reason for the hold up: a spending freeze he issued when he took the helm as Acting Town Manager in March. The town's legal budget for the fiscal year had already been expended by January; when Milanoski enacted the spending freeze, he considered Cat Dam to be a non-essential item.

The town manager also stated that since the Cat Dam debate is essentially a dispute between neighbors, that DEP said they preferred the town resolve the issue.

Coming to a compromise

Creighton said that the Con Com has been embroiled in Cat Dam "for a long period of time." The commission's July 19 meeting, during which Creighton was voted chair, stretched until 11 p.m. so that "all parties were given the full opportunity to discuss" their sides of the issue.

"On a positive note, although feelings are very strong, the discussion kept to the facts, and people were polite in most cases," Creighton said of the meeting. At the meeting's end, the chair said, all seven commissioners agreed that enough time, money and resources had been expended on Cat Dam, and did not see a need to move forward any further.

"I think the conservation commission has gone above and beyond this issue," Creighton said, adding that they weren't optimistic that the two opposing groups could come to a compromise. "Any solution that requires unanimity of two parties that have been at each other's throats for three to four years is not likely to be resolved."

If they did reach an agreement, the town could ask MEPA for extension on the ENF. However, members of the appellate group said that they have no intention of withdrawing the appeal. Former selectman Karen Quigley, one of the appellants, said that her group simply wants the DEP to decide what the best flushing schedule for inner Little Harbor would be, whatever is best for the environment.

Both Milanoski and Creighton seemed concerned the appeal would continue to cost the town money. If the town cooperated with MEPA and published an ENF, it would simply be too expensive, according to the town manager.

As Creighton put it, "Either party could put the town on the hook for a bottomless succession of legal costs... the passions on both sides are so extensive, it will result in nothing but further litigation."

The Con Com chair concluded that his board came to their decision "very, very reluctantly," as having the DEP drop the appeal and the NOI means the end of years of hard work on creating a flushing schedule that works.

"The proposals that came to the conservation commission were hard-fought," Creighton said, adding that the commission "wrestled with this and got the best deal we thought for the environment and health of that thing that we could." Now, he added, whether or not the increased flushing would have improved the water quality, no one will ever really know. However, the algae blooms that were apparently the source of the original complaint on the water quality are "virtually nonexistent this year." The harbor has also been sewered since the debate began, and raingardens have collected run-off.

"I would've been hopeful, in a better world, that this NOI with increased flushing would go forward," Creighton said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said that if the town did submit an ENF, it wouldn't necessarily go on to a MEPA review: "You don't always need extensive legal counsel."

Milanoski responded that he has drafted multiple ENFs in the past (Milanoski was appointed to the Con Com as an associate member last July but resigned when he became Acting Town Manager in March) and explained the town is required to file an expanded ENF and Environmental Impact Report (EIR), which could cost the town $400,000-$500,000. This was the amount estimated by conservation agent Paul Shea, Milanoski said.

Creighton added, "We're now in a situation where the town has to decide [whether] to spend money to continue to fight the appeal" and submit the ENF or EIR. "When you start getting into a variety of regulatory bodies, the town has to spend a lot of money to save the original compromise."

"You reversed your stance on it," Gjesteby said of the Con Com's position on the NOI.

"We still support it," Creighton replied, "but we can't ask the town to continue" to expend money for litigation.

Selectman Diane Kennedy seemed to agree, stating the Cat Dam saga has been "detracting and distracting" from other town issues.

The selectmen were going to vote to take no further action unless the two groups could come to a compromise, but Kennedy pointed out "the compromise isn't really a compromise — it's full acceptance of the NOI from last year."

Milanoski said the compromise is "somewhere between the historic opening [of the gates] and 50 percent — that's the compromise."

"All parties would have to enter into a very complete agreement on this," said Creighton, plus "there would have to be another NOI... we'd have to go through the process again. It's a daunting task."

Kennedy said she felt any further action should go to Town Meeting; Creighton said he was in favor of that.

Both sides lose

Selectman chair Paul Carlson then turned the floor over to members of both citizen groups who sat through the meeting, waiting for the end of the agenda to say their piece on Cat Dam.

Quigley wanted to correct some of the information presented, including the notion that the flushing schedule change in 2008 was an oversight.

"I can attest it wasn't just an inadvertent opening," said Quigley, adding that there "is not enough time in the world to go through the history."

She further wished to dispel the notion that the appeal would be successful if the NOI is denied; neither side would succeed, said Quigley. "The purpose in doing the appeal was not to block the NOI, but we hoped the DEP would be an independent body... the intent of the appellates [sic], whatever DEP decided, we would've been in line with."

Quigley also argued that according to seven state and federal agencies that reviewed the E20-backed NOI, "this NOI would not improve the environment, in fact the existing conditions are better than the NOI."

Furthermore, the appellants don't want to expend any more town money on the matter, either. "We are taxpayers also; nobody wants to spend the town's money," adding that the legal expenses are not from the appellants, but from the town fighting the appeal.

Carlson responded that he was also on the board of selectmen at the time, and that "the infraction was indeed inadvertent... we were all chagrined when it happened."

George Charmillard, Atlantic Avenue, encouraged the selectmen to make a decision that night rather than waiting to see if the two sides would work things out.

"The notion that a miracle will happen in the next week, we'll all sing 'Kumbaya' and everyone will go off into the sunset holding hands is ridiculous... We're at an impasse." Several years of conflict could not reach a swift resolution in a mere seven days, Charmillard added. "No matter what the NOI will be, there will always be somebody in this town who won't sign off on it." However, he conceded, "This is America; people have these rights. If people don't want to sign off, they don't have to."

Adelle Janssens, Nichols Road, noted that because of the appeal, the schedule proposed by the E20's NOI was actually never implemented. "It's been the same... the water quality has gotten better with the existing schedule." She also noted that the NOI was only conditioned for three years.

Briscoe Rodgers, Nichols Road, said that he was relatively new in town, having moved to Cohasset last year, but already he'd become part of the Cat Dam debate.

"We tried as a neighborhood to come to a compromise," Rodgers said. "But as a citizen who pays property taxes, I'd really not like to see the town spending more time and money on this issue; I think it's a waste of time. The water quality is getting better... Let's put the issue to bed tonight, stop the NOI and further legal costs."

Milanoski made a closing comment, citing a letter from Town Counsel. "When the Cat Dam issue arose years ago, the town was counseled to let sleeping dogs lie," Milanoski said. "We've come full circle."

After being told they have the right to withdraw the NOI and appeal, the selectmen said they'd like to let DEP handle it. The selectmen voted 4-1 to take no further action. Gjesteby was the dissenting vote; although she stated she was "neutral" on the issue, she felt submitting the ENF would "clear the air."

Creighton said that was a good point, and "if we thought as the conservation commission we could proceed with what you're talking about, we would've proceeded... We addressed that, and agonized about that, but it's prohibitively expensive."

After years of a battle hard-fought by both sides, the Cat Dam debate ended not in a bang, but a whimper. While members from both sides reiterated their viewpoints once more, no names were called, nor fingers pointed; no further debated ensued. The end of the discussion signaled the end of the selectmen's meeting, and neighbors chatted with one another as they exited the meeting room.

Still, the mood was dismal, as neither side was the definitive victor Tuesday night.

The ABCs of Cat Dam

DEP: Department of Environmental Protection
EIR: Environmental Impact Report
ENF: Environmental Notification Form
MEPA: Mass. Environmental Protection Act
NOI: Notice of Intent

Cat Dam: Highlight reel

- Apr. 2008: An unauthorized change in the flushing schedule is implemented at Cat Dam by a four-member committee appointed by the Board of Selectmen; opposing citizens ask for a new, impartial committee to be formed; The Conservation Commission tells the BoS the town must issue an after-the-fact Notice of Intent (NOI) due to the change in the flushing schedule
- Town Meeting 2009: Town Meeting narrowly approves the allocation of $18,000 for an engineering firm to develop an NOI for Cat Dam
- Oct. 2009: Study by CLE Engineering is underway
- Jan. 2010: NOI submitted to Con Com
- Feb. 2010: Con Com public hearing on NOI
- Oct. 2010: Selectmen vote 3-2 to withdraw the engineer-issued NOI before the Con Com in favor of the E20-sponsored NOI, which was developed by Lucas Engineering and Harbor Engineering and paid for by the E20; the two dissenting votes supported the town-sponsored NOI by CLE Engineering
- Nov. – Dec. 2010: Cat Dam subject of debate at several selectmen meetings
- Jul. 2011: The E20 come before the selectmen asking to make a minor change in the NOI, a check in the box to indicate the project involves wetlands restoration or enhancement; the selectmen approve this NOI later in the month, but not before the same three selectmen who voted in favor of the E-20 NOI also vote not to reappoint three long-term Conversation Commissioners; one of the new members brought in is a member of the E20 and would have to recuse himself from deliberations on Cat Dam; the newly-formed Con Com approves the NOI
- Aug. 2011: A group of 18 citizens, two of whom are inner Little Harbor abutters, appeal the NOI, asking the DEP to issue a superseding order of conditions for the flushing schedule; the appeal also triggers MEPA action
- Sep. 2011: DEP conducts a site visit to Cat Dam, attended by members of the Con Com, selectmen and opposing citizen groups; DEP later issues a letter to the town stating that the project triggers the MEPA threshold, and the town must file an Environmental Notification Form (ENF) and a mandatory Environmental Impact Report (EIR); Town Counsel later writes to the MEPA office, stating that the town disagrees with the DEP findings that said the proposed project would alter the wetlands as defined by the state's Wetlands Protection Act
- Dec. 2011: MEPA responded to Town Counsel in a letter stating that the DEP has the final word in interpreting its own regulations. Arrangements were then made for town officials to meet with MEPA.
- Mar. 2011: Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, Conservation Commissioner Jack Creighton (who became chair last month), selectman Paul Carlson (who was appointed chair in May), and conservation agent Paul Shea met with MEPA for advisement on Cat Dam. Milanoski says the town will file an ENF with MEPA
- Jul. 2011: After receiving a letter for DEP asking how the town plans to proceed with Cat Dam, Milanoski attends the July 27 Con Com meeting and states that he recommends not taking any further action on the matter. The consequence of not going along with MEPA: the DEP will drop both the proposed NOI and the citizens appeal; the flushing schedule will go back to the way it was done for 30-plus years; Creighton asks the appellants to withdraw their appeal; some appellants state in interviews and letters to the Mariner that they will not drop the appeal; Creighton attends the July 31 selectmen meeting, during which he and Milanoski urge the selectmen to vote to take no further action on Cat Dam, stating that the town has spent more than enough time, money and resources on the project.

AMERICAN LEGION BASEBALL

Fun season comes to an end

Post 118 edged in exciting playoff series

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

Cohasset/Scituate American legion general manager Scott Arnold will tell you that the 2011 season was a lot of fun, but this year just did not fall Post 118's way.

A year ago Cohasset fought its way past Medfield in a battle of the third-seeded teams in Zone 6 East and West respectively on their way to reaching the final eight in the state.

They were able to fight their way to the fifth-seed this year in Zone 6 East and earn a best of three series with Zone 6 West regular season champion Norwood in what was a wacky series.

Post 118 kept fighting back as they tied the series, 1-1 with an 8-5 win in the second game, but they fell in game-3 by a 9-7 score and lost the series, 2-1.

"We made too many errors in the series," said Cohasset coach Bob Barrow. "We just did not make the plays. We told the players after the first game where we got home near 1:30 a.m. after the delays to relax and stay within themselves in the second game."

"Championship teams need to do it both on offense and defense and we did not do it," Arnold said. "Give credit to Norwood they were the better team."

Norwood was able to take advantage of Cohasset mistakes to win the first game 14-11. Post 70 jumped out to to a 14-3 lead and held on for the win.

Norwood was able to jump out to a 7-2 lead in the third and final game because of Cohasset errors. Post 118 came back and tied the game, 7-7, but Norwood bounced back with two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning and held on for the 9-7 win.

"Norwood had a big inning in the third game," said Arnold. "and I would say that three of their runs were unearned."

Tim Kensinger had three hits and scored three runs in the third game for Cohasset, which fought back from deficits of 2-0 and 7-2 to tie the game each time.

"Tim was our leader in the Girls U14 softball upsets Hingham, celebrates at Fenway

By William Wassersug

Over the past few seasons, the outlook for softball hasn't been too good. Two seasons removed from a Div. 4 South Sectional Championship, the high school team closed shop because there wasn't enough interest.

That may change soon.

On the farm, there has been some growth, and members of the U14 Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association team that plays in the South Shore Summer Softball League have shown that spark of interest that could bring a team back to the high school, especially since Cohasset Athletic Director Ron Ford is supportive of the idea.

The team, coached by Peter Vitello and Tony Talacci is an indication of good things in the future.

"Rob Spofford (who is now the current head coach at Emmanuel College and a former CHS coach) built the softball program," said Vitello. "When he left, the league sort of fell apart. I took over as softball coordinator for the town and we've brought it back."

Vitello's daughter Amanda (13) plays, as does co-coach Talacci's daughter Katie.

The girls have worked hard to bring the sport back.

"These girls have done a lot of hard work to build the program up," Vitello said. "They buid up each other and support each other. They are the future of the town."

Things are on the right direction.

"Cohasset, Norwell and Hingham all collaborate as a league," Vitekki said. "Hingham's

MARSHFIELD TRIATHLON

Hundreds compete in Marsh Madness Triathlon

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

A pack of some dedicated athletes, more than 400 to be exact, from Marshfield all the way to Hong Kong converged on Marshfield and Duxbury to take part in the second annual Marsh Madness Triathlon.

The race took place recently in Marshfield/Duxbury and had tremendous success. The numbers increased by 30 percent compared to last year's count of roughly 330 competitors in the inaugural race throughout the two towns.

"It was quite a high! Everybody says the adrenaline will kick in, and it does. "It was a gorgeous morning, the mood was so upbeat, and supportive. It was ffun to see a crowd of 400-plus people all so pumped up on 'runner's high' endorphins, doing something they really enjoy and to be part of it," Kate Coon said. "And I could never have done this a year ago, or even a few months ago. It was quite a high."

The race featured a 0.25-mile swim, 11-mile bike ride, and a three-mile run on what in picture-perfect conditions – a shade under 70 degrees with sunny skies at the 7:15 a.m. start. It went from Duxbury Beach Park for the swim, and then through the bike part of the race that took the athletes from Gurnet Road onto Canal St., then onto Careswell St., Ocean St., Parsonage St., Webster St., and eventually back to Canal and Gurnet. The three-mile run took the competitors onto the hard-packed sand, created

TALKIN' GOLF

Time is not on our side, go out and play a round

PAUL HARBER

Where did summer go?

How did August sneak in here?

Summer is on its back nine and there are still plenty of things you wanted to do, but time is running out.

I promised myself I would sneak down to Atlantic CC in Plymouth, savor a pleasant afternoon and enjoy a refreshment at their 19th hole.

I keep telling myself I want to scoot over to the Back Nine Club in Lakeville and see how the nifty par-3 is holding up.

And there is something about Ponkapoag. I always have that on my summer dance card.

Problem is, time is our enemy.

We take it for granted and before you can blink it is gone forever.

It seems like yesterday I played my first round of golf, wrote my first golf story, and covered my first tournament.

But those yesterdays were decades ago.

It seems like yesterday I walked into the Massachusetts Golf Association office for the first time.

It wasn't the upscale palatial address in Norton that backs up to TPC Boston; it was a function-oriented brick structure that fronted Leo J. Martin Golf Course in Weston. I was there to meet Dick Haskell, its executive director,

Both the building and Dick, who became a trusted friend in the golf community, have passed. So have so many greats I was fortunate to call friends.

Some are remembered by tournaments in their honor.

Others have scholarships memorializing them.

At Wollaston, in the clubhouse, there were tables at the 19th hole. Carved into the tables were names of members who passed.

Some clubs, like South Shore CC in Hingham, or Brockton CC, have erected benches named after well-thought-of late members.

Yes, so many good friends, who did so much for the local golf community, have passed.

I can remember lazy summer afternoons, sitting at the scorers' table, waiting for an endless procession of golfers to complete their rounds at one tournament or another.

There would be Haskell and the late Roger Barry, the Patriot Ledger golf editor. If it was an MGA tournament, fellows like Ray Bump or Dick Lambert of CC of Halifax, Biff Kelley and Fordie Pitts of Scituate would be roaming the grounds. If it was an NEPGA event, George Weymss and his black box and Buddy Young and his rulebook, would be on hand.

They did so much for golf in the region, each spending a good part of a half-century in the game.

And now they are all gone.

Today, their time on the golf scene seems so fleeting.

And like that, summer will disappear as quickly.

Do not hesitate. Go play.

Time is our enemy.

ACES, ETC.

Three's a charm for Mulcahys

Notes and quotes from around the region

John and Mary Mulcahy of Scituate are in the winner's circle at the MGA Father & Daughter Championship last week at Bass Rocks in Gloucester. COURTESY PHOTO/ MGA AND DAVID COLT

For the third straight year John Mulcahy and his daughter, Mary, of Hatherly Country Club in Scituate, can call themselves MGA champions.

The Mulcahys posted a score of 2-over par 71 to capture the Senior Division title at the 2012 Massachusetts Father and Daughter Championship at Bass Rocks Golf Club in Gloucester.

It was an all Southland day as Tom and Cora Bernier of Norton captured the Junior Division title by one stroke.

The Mulcahys first captured this title in 2010 and have come away winners every year since.

A year ago, they captured the junior division title at Red Tail Golf Club in Ayer and this time around they competed in the senior division (Mary turned 18 years old in May) and the result was the same.

"I really didn't play well last year, but this year I played a little better," John Mulcahy told the MGA's Becky Blaeser. He didn't think he could play this year after breaking two ribs in June.

For Tom and Cora Bernier, the smiles soon turned to tears when they learned that they had captured the junior division title.

It marked not only the first MGA Championship victory for the duo, but it also represented the first title they have won together as a team and the emotions were flowing over following the trophy ceremony.

"It means a lot to me," said Tom. "I never thought that I would see myself playing this sport with my kids and enjoying it as much as I do."

Despite playing a very challenging layout at Bass Rocks Golf Club, the Berniers enjoyed themselves from start to finish and recorded a winning score of 7-over par 76, which was one stroke better than the team of Mark and Erin Bugbee of Holden Hills.

The pair is quick to give credit to their home course of MGA Links at Mamantapett and their volunteer work with The First Tee of Massachusetts.

It all began when Cora was just 9 years old and looking to learn the game of golf.

It's déjà vu all over again

If you have an opening in your foursome for a tournament, you might want to ask Michael Power of Milton or Eddie Fitzgerald of Hingham, to join in. Both had a pair of aces in recent weeks. Power, who grew up playing at Presidents GC in Quincy, has two in the last five weeks. Fitzgerald has two in a 10-day period.

Power carded his first ace on June 11 in the James McDonough Four Ball Invitational Tournament at the Wollaston Golf Club. He was golfing with Michael Welch of Quincy and PGA pro Jim Renner. He used a 5-iron on the 175-yard sixth hole. He scored the second ace July 22 at Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills. On the 156-yard, second hole Power hit an 8-iron just short of the cup. The ball bounced once and rolled in. Power had a hole-in-one at age 14, playing after hours at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy, but there were no witnesses.

"One day maybe I can get on the Senior Tour, but for right now it's just about having fun playing local tournaments," he said.

Fitzgerald got both of his aces on South Shore Country Club's 11th hole. The first time was from the blue tees on July 17. He used a 6-iron for the deed. A week later, playing against Marshfield CC in the Old Colony League, Fitzgerald used an 8-iron from the white tees for his second ace.

Another 'Oui' For Khang

Megan Khang of Rockland shot a 3-under 69 to capture the women's division of the Ouimet Memorial Tournament at Woodland Golf Club last Friday. Khang, 14, won last year's Ouimet when she became the first female to ever shoot under par at the Ouimet with a 1-under 71, firing a sizzling 33 on the front nine and closing out her day with a 36 on the back nine. Julia Ford of Cyprian Keyes, also 14, came in second with a 1-under 71, while Kristin MacDonald of Thomson came in third at 3-over 75. Khang's win came just two days after she had also won the Stan Trojanowski Northern Junior Girls Championship by four shots with a 3-over par 147 at Ellington Ridge Country Club. Her 2-under par 70 was the best final round among all the golfers. Next week Khang heads to Ohio to play in the U.S. Women's Amateur Championship, the fourth USGA event that Khang has qualified for this year. Jack Whelan of Myopia Hunt Club won the men's Ouimet tourney. Whelan led wire-to-wire, ending with a total of 211 over the three-round men's tournament.

Replacing some fairway divots

It is good to see Nora Berard working at Poquoy Brook Golf Course in Lakeville again. Berard is coming back from surgery and hasn't missed a beat. She has strong golfing roots. Her father, Tom O'Leary, was the long-time head professional at Foxboro CC before retiring. His father owned farmland in Sharon that became Sharon CC. He worked there as a superintendent when it first opened. Berard has worked at several courses in the region as a general manager and is a golfing true blood . . .The MGA held its State Junior qualifier at Scituate Country Club last week and Evan Grills of Duxbury YC led everyone with a 5-over 75. Fellow Duxbury clubmate James Mattes was runner-up at plus-7. Patrick and Sam Jenkins of South Shore CC had matching 9-over 79s to advance to the championship, which will be held Aug. 6-8 at Oakley CC in Watertown. Also earning a berth at Oakley were Cohasset's Joe Cifrino, Widow's Walk Matt Robinson, Marshfield CC's Jack Ball and Justin Henriksen and Tyler Powers of the Harmon Club in Rockland. There was also a qualifying tournament at Sharon CC last week and two local players shared medalist honors. Rob Boush of Walpole CC and Adam Sawyer of Blue Hill CC carded 3-over 75s. Also qualifying were Kevin Gately of the Harmon Club, Joseph Lynch of TPC Boston, Christopher Hunter of Norfolk GC, Dan Howard of Walpole, Max Crooks of Sharon CC and Max Cantin of Norton CC.

third game," said Arnold. "He kept us battling back and even the one out he hit into was well hit and a couple of feet from leaving the ball park. They got two runs in the bottom of the sixth to win the game because of a long double."

Post 118 was able to control the second game despite the errors by staying within themselves.

Cohasset pitcher Jamie Faber allowed only one hit in his complete game win in the second game by an 8-5 score. He fought through some wildness and team defensive mistakes to get out of some jams.

The offense was able produce runs when they needed to gain control of the game.

"We were able to do some situational things on the bases," Barrow said. "We were able to run some double steals and some hit-and-runs. We did not make some plays and kept them in the game. Jamie pitched a heck of a game for us."

Faber also hit two doubles and scored two runs in the game as he was a key offensively for Cohasset.

Cohasset used a three-run second inning and they added four in the fifth to even the series at a game apiece.

David Podurgiel scored on a error, Cooper Davis walked with the bases loaded, Faber and Chris Murphy both scored on wild pitches that appeared to give Post 118 a commanding 8-2 lead after five innings. Norwood fought back with a couple of unearned runs that highlight a three-run sixth inning, but they never got closer than three, 8-5.

Post 118 had scored three times in the second inning to take a 3-1 lead.

Tim Kensinger's two-run single was the big hit the three-run inning.

Rich Roche also scored on a wild pitch in the second inning.

Cohasset in the first game got a two-run homer by Jordan Jenkins in the first inning.

The scored six times in the sixth inning as Chase Michaud (two hits and two RBI), Roche and Faber each had RBI singles. Connor Gibbons hit a sacrifice fly and Jamie Timothy had an RBI double for Cohasset in the sixth inning.

Post 118 fought back with six runs in the sixth inning and two in the seventh, but the rally fell short.

numbers have dropped a bit, but Cohasset is growing."

On the whole, softball has found itself competing with lacrosse, club soccer and even Irish Dance for participants over the past several years.

When Vitello and Talacci started to bring the sport back, the field at Barnes was in disrepair.

Now there is a commitment to getting it back into top shape.

On the field, the girls have bonded and shown talent, skill and desire.

"We went 6-4 this season," Vitello said. "In our last game of the year we had to play Hingham. They were undefeated and they beat us badly earlier in the season. The second time when we rolled onto the field, they (Hingham fans) were relentlessly cheering. They were outstanding. Our girls were too."

Hingham battled in that game and went into the sixth inning tied 6-6.

Cohasset picked up two runs in the top of the sixth, then held off the home team in the last of the inning to claim an 8-6 win.

"The girls acted like they won the championship," he said. "For us it was the last game of the year and they had beaten Goliath. They celebrated. After we shook hands and went off to left field, I told the girls that I've never been prouder of them. It was great."

The team is young. There's only one 14-year old on the team, Samantha Jansenn.

Jansenn plans on going to Notre Dame Academy next year.

After the season ended, there was still some celebrating to do, as a parent gave the team a suite at Fenway park Tuesday night to watch the Red Sox play the Tigers.

Vitello and Talacci, who also coach Coastal Stars youth hockey together, got a van and along with a small carpool spent the night watching the game.

The girls had a blast, and had some time to talk about their special season during a rain delay that eventually turned into a Red Sox win.

"We're all really good friends," said 13-year old Sophie Matthews while she was having her hair braided by Erin McElhinney and Betsy Faherty. "At the beginning of the season we weren't the tightest, but we got closer and closer during the season. It's been fun."

Faherty said the Hingham game was a highlight.

"They were undefeated," she said. "We knew we couldn't make the playoffs, but we really wanted to beat them. It was great when we did."

For Matthews, sitting in the luxury suite was a first.

"It's awesome," she said. "Really cool. I've been to (Red Sox) games before, but never like this."

McElhinney agreed.

"I've been to a few games, but this is different," she said. "I love it."

Faherty enjoyed the game and the season, especially because it was a higher level of play.

"Last year we couldn't steal or slide," she said. "Pitchers didn't throw that fast. This year they do. It's a little scary because when you hit it, you don't know where it's going to go."

Katie Talacci enjoyed her season too.

"This was my first year playing catcher," she said. "I love it when I catch the last out of a game. It's a fun celebration. I really like softball. I had a great year. I improved a lot."

TRIATHLON

by low tide, on Green Harbor Beach and straight to the finish line.

"I don't know any other event that runs on a beach," co-race director and Duxbury resident Chris Hebert said. "We're taking advantage of having the beach right there, and we time the run for low tide and that hard-packed sand."

The participants that finished the race said they had nothing but great experiences, and for some, finishing a triathlon was a dream fulfilled.

"Finishing was great," Coon said. "Co-competitor Carol Fairbanks (who won second in her age division) said to me a couple of weeks ago when I was confessing my pre-race jitters, 'compete to complete.' That was my mantra. And finish, I did. It was great to get closer and closer to that big blue shark that looked so far away on the beach run and then get all the 'glory' of coming across the line."

Several racers agreed, including triathlon rookie Patrick Duffy.

"I have done a few triathlons in just one year, so I am new at this," Duffy said. "There is a great deal of pleasure with all the training and hard work that every athlete goes through. Seeing individuals that work so hard is the miracle. Finishing a triathlon is just the finish line, but more importantly it makes that person a winner. Success with training, both physical and mental health, helps people grow. This satisfaction makes us all winners."

And that's exactly the feedback that Hebert and his co-race director Richard Berard from Cohasset love to hear. The two, as part of Fast Forward Race Management, enjoy the positive reactions and know that more and more people find satisfaction in the race each year.

"We're selling fun at these events," Berard said. "People are going to challenge themselves, but we want them to have fun doing it."

One local athlete said there's more to a triathlon that trying to win it all.

"Honestly, what makes a triathlon great is not the individual triumphs, but the camaraderie, cheering friends along the way, and celebrating together at the finish line," Jennifer LaPointe said. "Triathlon is about more than physical strength and endurance. It builds character and teaches us that we are only limited by our minds."

Kym Doherty never thought in a million years that he'd compete in a triathlon, but a little convincing went a long way.

"I never even considered doing anything like a triathlon until I was having a couple of glasses of wine with a friend last year. She suggested that I sign up for the Duxbury Triathlon with her," Doherty said. "Since it was eight months away, and I was feeling good, I agreed. I tried to back out of it the next day when I really thought about what I did. She wouldn't let me. So, I decided to entice my husband, Phil, and a friend to enlist. Over the next few months, we talked about what great shape we would be in."

But nerves hit Kym once the days got closer to that triathlon in Duxbury.

"What the heck was I thinking when I agreed to this," Kym said. "The panic really set in last June (the triathlon was in September). I needed to learn how to swim. That's where (local trainer) Lucie Rice came in. I can honestly say I could not have done the swim without her coaching. I also didn't like riding road bikes because I was hit by a car when I was a kid. My husband and friend put up with my anxiety, and slowly I was able to ride on the road."

Then she had to prepare, like any athlete. So she hit the pavement.

"I bought some good sneakers and started jogging," Kym said. "It was hard balancing work and the kids, but my husband and I would train at least twice a week. My kids were supportive and said they would have 911 ready on their phones during the triathlon, just in case. On the day of the triathlon, we saw Lucie and the other people from our swim class. It made such a difference to see them. The good news is that we all survived our first triathlon. It was hard, but what a feeling of accomplishment. Marsh Madness was our second triathlon. As I was nervously awaiting our wave, Carol Fairbanks, a friend from our swim class told me to, 'compete to complete.' That's what I was thinking throughout each phase of Marsh Madness."

Hebert said he first thought about putting together local marathons after having competed himself for decades.

"I competed for around 20 years, and as I stopped competing, it was something I wanted to do," he said. "Rich (Berard) said, 'we can do this.' We felt we were very organized and could put races out there that people would want to do. We have beautiful areas to do these races."

Berard said that when all is said and done, he and Hebert look for two key components, both that make their race complete.

"Number one is that everybody goes home safe. We want people to come and enjoy themselves," Berard said. "Number two, we are extremely detail-oriented and organized. To hear people say it's organized and a lot of fun, that's the satisfaction we get."

And that's what the competitors had to say. Praise kept coming in, even days after the triathlon was finished.

"It was so beautiful out there," Coon said. "The light, the water. It helped me stay in my 'zen' state. And the camaraderie and support (was great)."

Hebert and Berard also run The Mayflower Spring Triathlon at Plymouth Rock, which takes place Sept. 1, and the FUNtastic Nantasket Beach Triathlon, held Sept. 23 this year.

"The Plymouth triathlon, that's the only day of the year that you can swim in Plymouth Harbor," Hebert said. "What we do is try to improve (each race). We're very happy. We're looking to grow the race. We're expecting a few changes, if any, to the whole operation. We've got it dialed in to where we like it right now."

YOUNG STAR

Vigneau shines at AAU Championships

Congratulations to 10-year-old Lieren Vigneau, who went to Huntersville, N.C. last week to compete in AAU Diving Nationals. Vigneau placed fifth on the 3M springboard event and ninth on the 1M springboard event, earning "All-American" status on both events (top 10).

Vigneau dives with the South Shore under coach Craig Dolloff (out of Duxbury).

This is Vigneau's second year qualifying for Nationals. She was unable to attend last year because she hit her head on the board three weeks before Nationals, so she was particularly excited to attend this year.

HOOP STARS

Under the direction of former Cohasset High basketball state champions and current college players Lindsey Davis, Carly Haggerty, Rachel Fredey, Samantha Crough, and Meredith Kelly, nearly 40 girls in grades 4 through 8 participated in the Cohasset Basketball Boosters six week summer program that was held twice each week at Cohasset High. Pictured above are the girls with instructors Davis, Crough, and Haggerty at the conclusion of their final session this week which culminated in various competitions and the award of prizes for Most Spirited, Most Focused, and Most Improved. All of the girls enhanced their skills and their commitment to the game of basketball in hopes of following in the footsteps of their mentors and continuing the success of the Lady Skipper basketball program. Torrential downpours drown Chiefs offense

Defense plays well in 12-0 loss

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

Here is another story about the defense being ahead of the offense.

However, the tough part for the newly formed Hanover Coastal Chiefs is trying to put the pieces together. The even tougher part for the Chiefs from week one to week two was that they had to try to improve in weather conditions that were tougher than normal.

Hanover in monsoon conditions struggled to move the ball in its 12-0 loss to the Tri-City Charge. They were still trying to put together how they to use their players in their second game in their history, but the slick conditions made it difficult for both teams to execute consistently.

"We have to get better weather conditions to help the offense," said Chiefs head coach Jim Sullivan. "It is very difficult. We have two quarterbacks (Steve Farnick and Pat Burke) that have never played quarterback before in the first place. We then put them in a situation of putting them in against a big team (Tri-City) and they were also playing against the weather. It made it difficult."

The best opportunity for the Chiefs to score was in the final minute of the game. Andrew Farnick recovered a Tri-City fumble at the Chiefs 45.

They were able to run with the running of Tim Hajjar and Anthony Sargent inside the Charge 20, but a fumble stopped the drive.

The Chiefs battle for field position through the game as well. They were stuck inside their own 30 on each possession that they had.

"The big thing is that we have to get better offensively," said Sullivan. "They had nine men up in the box. We tried to pass it and this weather it was very difficult."

The growth of the offense will have to take place on the road as the Chiefs will battle with the Metro West Colonials in Marlboro on Saturday.

The Colonials finished last season with an 0-10 record.

The Chiefs defense has played well in the first two weeks of the season. They have improved in each quarter of both games.

The Chiefs forced two turnovers as Farnick and Bentley grad and Arena Football player Greg Ryan recovered fumbles.

"His football I.Q. is amazing - and no one understands this level of ball like Greg," said Chiefs owner Steve Santacroce. "He previously retired two years ago. After playing one season with him two years ago I gained as much respect for him as a player and a leader on and off the field as anyone I have ever played any sport with, or ever known as a person - at any time in my life.

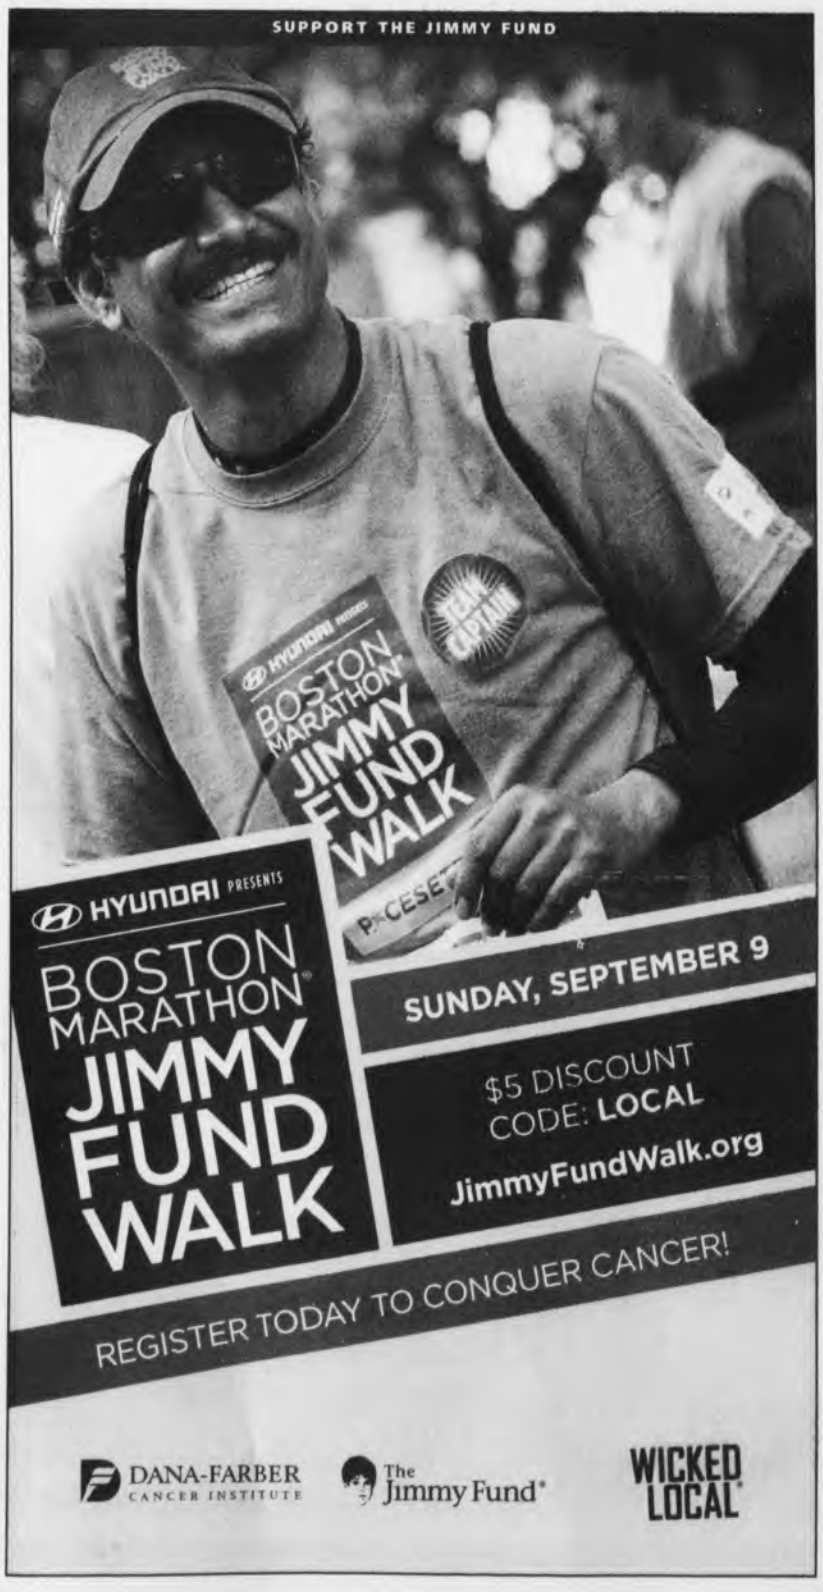
"He would dedicate Saturday mornings to help me deliver food to the needy back in Quincy at the food pantry, and sometimes was the only person with me. That was what drove me to start this team. Mr. Ryan literally reaffirmed my belief in the Human Spirit."

One of the best situations was end of the first half after the Charge picked off a pass inside the Coastal 20.

Luke Lohan, Jason McDonald and Farnick each came up with big plays in stopping a Charge scoring threat at the end of the first half with the Chiefs down by a 6-0 score.

The aggressive Chiefs defense made it tough Tri-City quarterback Dean Bidgood even when he held on to the ball to do anything positive.

"I will take the way that we played defensively," said Sullivan. "We had one mistake where we had 10 players on the field and they took advantage of it. We played very well defensively."



Brandon Bennett scored both of the touchdowns for the Charge. The first capped off a short drive before the heavy rain came in the first quarter and second was a 12-yard run in the third quarter.

The Chiefs will try to become road warriors and get the offense in gear this week.

GIMME SHELTER

'Marshmellow' is as mellow as they come

Marshmellow is as mellow as his name and once had a loving home. COURTESY PHOTO

Adoption fees for adults cats reduced

Marshmellow cordially invites you to come meet him and all his shelter mates during open hours.

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter of Marshmellow.

Marshmellow is a 12 years young, healthy Maine Coon. His previous owner had to give him up, due to unfortunate circumstances.

Marshmellow is as mellow as his name. It's obvious that he once had a loving home. He snuggles up to you will take all the petting you can afford him. Marshmellow cordially invites you to come meet him and all his shelter mates during open hours; Saturday, from 2-3 and Monday from 6:30 - 7:30pm. If these hours aren't convenient, please call Judy, the Adoption Coordinator to schedule an appointment, at 781-534-4902.

HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org. HSAR sends out a huge thank you to its many supporters.

The HSAR Board has reduced the adoption donation fee of adult cats from $100, to $25 from now through the entire month of August.

HSAR has so many adoptable felines, who have resided at the shelter and are so ready for forever homes. HSAR hopes this will help in acquiring homes for many of them during the slower summer months.

CSCR clears out Parker Avenue culvert

By Ashley Howard
Special to the Mariner

The culvert that connects the Gulf River and Cohasset Harbor was recently rebuilt with town, state, and federal participation. The old culvert had collapsed and therefore was preventing the flow of water between the Gulf River and the Harbor. Since this reconstruction, however, the new culvert has become clogged and many choke points along the cut, as the body of water is often called, have formed. It is vital that water is able to flow freely in between the Gulf River and the Harbor as this helps provide adequate tidal flushing, which in turn helps to create a healthy wetland environment.

The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) located on Parker Avenue has a research team that regularly does wetland monitoring on this site. After noting that the culvert was not functioning properly, the Parker Avenue wetland monitoring team, led by Dom Brennan and Bill Fish, decided to take action.

Jack Stanganelli, 16 left, and Dominic Brennan, 18, try to widen the tidal channel so that it flows better while working on the Parker Avenue Culvert project on Wednesday.

Danielle Martin, 16, proudly shows off her dirt-covered face and arms after a morning of hard work cleaning up the Parker Avenue Culvert.

The team received support from Coastal Zone Management's (CZM) Jason Burtner, who helped President Jack Buckley and the Parker Avenue wetland monitoring team formulate a plan, gain local town approval, and mark the choke points along the cut, all in preparation of the big cleaning event that took place August 1st.

Overall, the event was very successful. There were approximately 30 students that showed up over the course of a few hours to help move rocks and debris. In addition to the CSCR students and staff members, volunteers from NOAA, the Town of Cohasset, CZM, and United Water came out to clean the culvert. CSCR received such strong support from volunteers that the task was completed in three fewer hours than was planned. As the tide rushed in, it was apparent that the work done was already benefiting the wetlands. No longer getting caught up on rocks and sludge, the water was able to flow freely, helping to maintain the health of this salt-water wetland environment.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 13, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Relationships continue to thrive, but watch for any telltale signs of potential problems. Take needed action now to set things straight before they become troublesome later.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your powers of persuasion, backed up, of course, by your considerable expertise, help you establish your case even to the most dubious decision-makers in your workplace.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might still be a bit reluctant to face up to some less-than-pleasant realities. But the sooner you accept the facts, the sooner you can set about making some needed changes.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Expect to make adjustments, even when things seem locked up and ready to go. But cheer up: At least one change could lead to something you've been hoping for.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The success of a recent project should do a lot to boost your self-confidence. You might want to start now to check out ways to make that long-deferred bigger and bolder move.

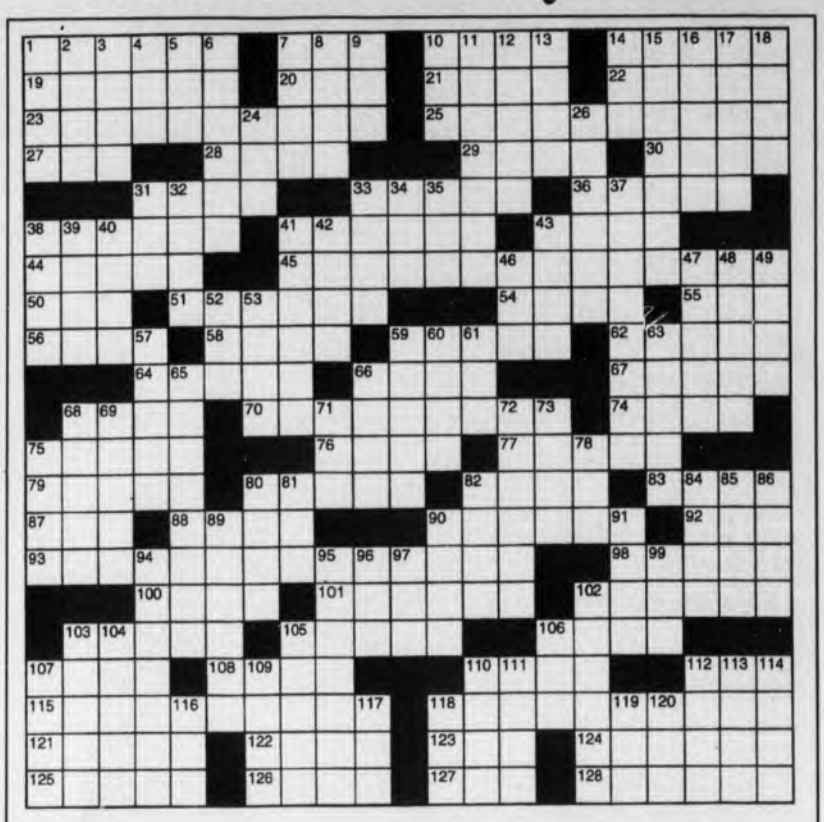
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Ease up on the pressure you might be putting on the new person in your life. It takes time for a budding relationship to blossom. Show more patience and understanding.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You have lots of inner strength in reserve. Use some of it to resist intimidation from those who might try to impose on your good nature for their own reasons.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The good news is that your on-the-job status is improving. The one cautionary note, however, involves a personal situation you might have been ignoring for too long.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Congratulations. Once again, your sharp Sagittarian "horse sense" helps you work through a complicated situation that would leave most people confused.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Plan on indulging yourself in some well-earned good times through much of the week. Then be prepared to face some thought-provoking issues by the 18th.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Positive factors continue to dominate following a recent change in both your professional and personal lives. Expect to make contact with someone from your past.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Workplace stability allows you to continue making progress on your projects. But don't ignore your personal life. Spend more quality time with those special folks.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have the gift for making people feel special. Maybe because you know how special you are.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Beechwood Church offers children's program

A summer kids' event called Sky will be hosted at Beechwood Congregational Church from Monday, Aug. 13 to Friday, Aug. 17. At Sky, faith and imagination soar as kids discover that everything is possible with God. Kids participate in memorable Bible-learning activities, sing catchy songs, play teamwork-building games, make and dig into yummy treats, experience electrifying Bible adventures, collect Bible Memory Buddies to remind them to trust God, and test out Sciency-Fun Gizmos they'll take home and play with all summer long. Plus, kids will learn to look for evidence of God all around them through something called God Sightings. Each day concludes with Fly Away Finale—a celebration that gets everyone involved in living what they've learned.

Sky is for children entering grades one through five and will run from 9 a.m. to noon each day. To register log onto www.beechwoodcc.org or call Sue at 781-383-6836.

HAPPENINGS

Farmers Market cooking demo

People can meet health coach Linda Storm at Cohasset Farmer's Market at 3:30 p.m., on Thursday, Aug. 16, for a cooking demonstration using locally grown produce from the Market. Those who tasted Storm's cooking last year at the Market know that she prepares delicious food featuring fresh, local ingredients. Gather round her table on Aug. 16 and watch her whip up zucchini spaghetti with chutney tomato sauce as well as Indian Summer succotash. Recipes will be available as well as samples.

Stay tuned for other special events at the Farmer's Market such as the Tomato Contest and the Dog Parade.

Summer Sunday Carillon concerts

The Cohasset Carillon is the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England and can also claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. In 1925, one year after the installation of the first set of bells (23), President Calvin Coolidge and his wife Grace stood on Cohasset Common, listening to Kamiel Lefevere play a program of popular songs, including "Annie Laurie."

• Aug 5: Lisa Lonie (St. Thomas Church, Whitemarsh, Penn.)

• Aug 12: George Matthew, Jr. (Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt.)

Cohasset Common, in the center of town, is one of the best listening places. Parking is ample and free. Bring your lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while the bells are ringing. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower is offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

The Carillon Concert Series is sponsored by St. Stephen's Church. This year's series is also supported in part by a generous donation from Alicia and John Seavey of Cohasset and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local branch of the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Museums open for the summer

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th Century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum. The museums tell of the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s. The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses. Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The museums are open 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

Maritime History Exhibit

The Cohasset Historical Society is celebrating Cohasset maritime history throughout the month of September. Save the date for Opening night on Saturday, Sept. 8.

Opening night will highlight a unique exhibit featuring relics of the many ships that were storm driven on the reefs off the Cohasset shores as well as artifacts from Cohasset's rich seafaring history.

Most wrecks occurred in the 19th century, when the shipping channel into Boston Harbor was narrow and passed close to many ledges. Ships were predominately powered by sail and at the mercy of the wind, which frequently blew them onto the rocks.

A cocktail party at the Society will celebrate Cohasset's worldwide shipping trade and current fishing and lobster industries.

For more details call 781-383-1434, visit cohassethistoricalsociety.org or email cohassethistory@yahoo.com

Outdoor film at Holly Hill

Holly Hill Farm's sixth Summer Outdoor Film Series free films shown on the back of the Tomato Barn continues with "Ingredients" on Wednesday, Aug. 22, at 8 p.m.

"Ingredients" illustrates how the quality, taste and nutritional value of the food we eat have dropped sharply over the past 50 years. Food is shipped across the world and consumers have lost sight of where food originates, losing a vital connection to the local community and public health. This film highlights the work of farmers and chefs around the country working to revitalize the nation's food system. This collaboration has resulted in great tasting food and an explosion of consumer awareness about the benefits of eating local.

Arrive at 7:30 p.m. for some local Nona's Ice cream before the movie. More information about "Ingredients" can be found at http://www.ingredients-film.com/

Fresh produce pantry program

Since the beginning of the Fresh Produce Program in June, more than 75 pounds of fresh vegetables have been donated to Cohasset Food Pantry. Recipes are provided to clients, who are excited to have fresh produce available every week.

Gardeners are asked consider donating extra vegetables. They can be left in the cooler at the Pantry behind St. Anthony's Rectory on Mondays. For those shopping at the Farmer's Market, consider buying a little extra and bringing it to the Food Pantry Table at the Farmer's Market from 2 to 6 p.m., on Thursdays.

The Food Pantry's goal for this growing season is to distribute more than 300 pounds of fresh produce. Let's work together to make it happen. The Food Pantry is also happy to accept canned food and monetary donations.

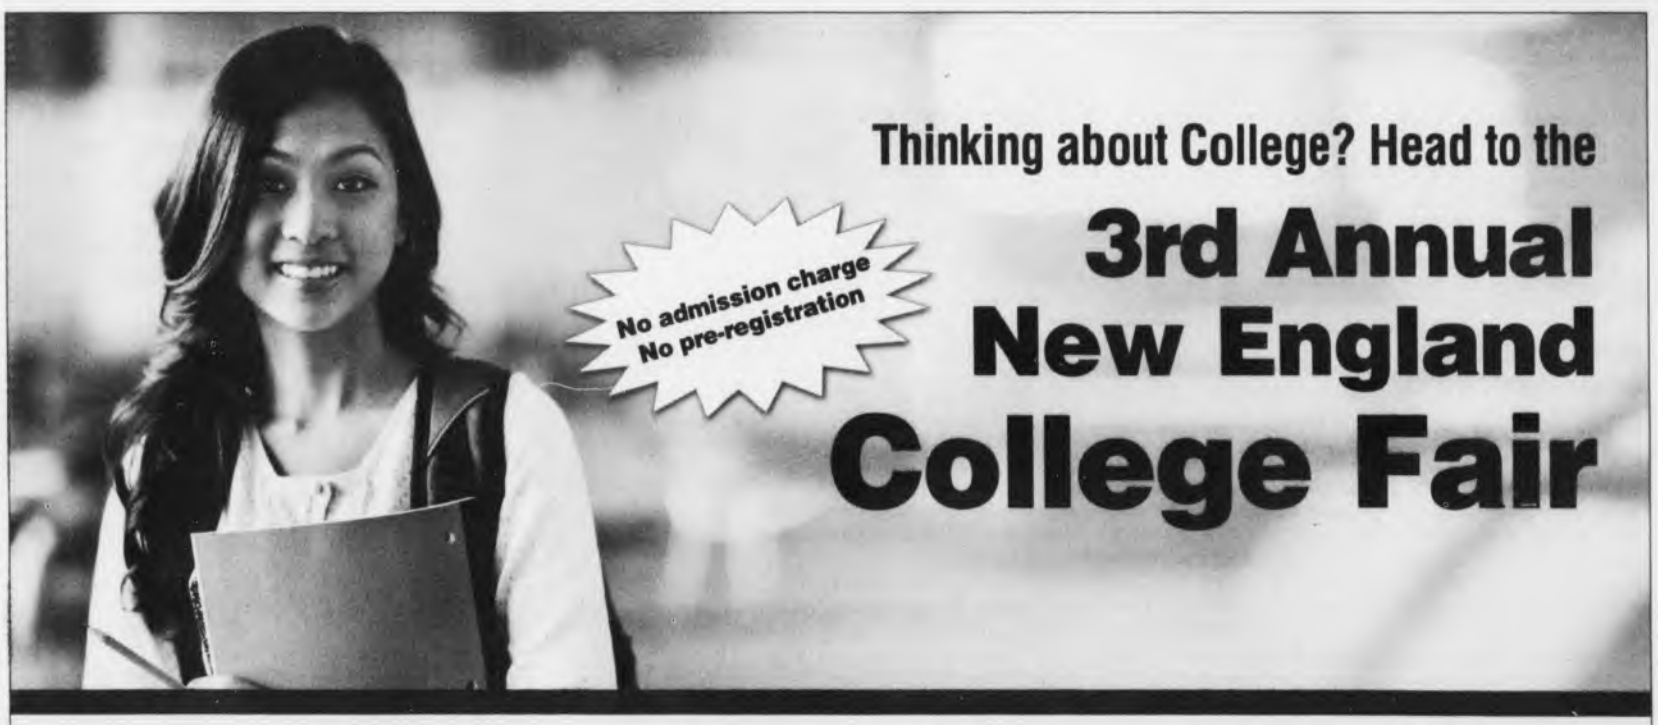
Stickers, trash bags are on sale

Stickers will be on sale during normal business hours at the Town Hall and the DPW garage. Stickers will not be sold on the weekend. Stickers are $65 for residents under the age of 65 and $35 for any additional vehicle registered at the same address. The sticker price for a person 65 and older is $25.

A copy of your current registration is required. If leasing your vehicle, you will need proof of residence in addition to the registration. This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach, as well as, include parking at all areas in town that require a sticker.

Please be advised that all Commercial Contractors and vehicles registered in a business name should pick up their stickers at the Department of Public Works

Residents must purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. A package of 16-gallon bags is $10 and a package of the large, 33-gallon bags are $20.



These bags are available at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town.

You are encouraged to purchase your sticker through the mail by providing the appropriate fee, a copy of your current registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

MEETINGHOUSE

Pond gets new sandy bottom

Restoration efforts underway

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Meetinghouse Pond is getting a makeover.

After dealing with troublesome algae growth, an unusually high pH of 10 and leakage, the pond is receiving some much-needed TLC. The pond was drained last week to allow it to start afresh; this week, the town's Department of Public Works (DPW) could be seen adding sand to the pond's bottom.

Students from the Cohasset Center for Coastal Research (CSCR) partnered with the Board of Health's new Health Administrator/Inspector Felix Zemel and Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski to explore what's been plaguing the pond and to try to come up with solutions. At the July 31 Board of Selectmen's meeting, a group of CSCR students presented their findings and plan to help recreate a healthy, natural pond.

"Kids are going headfirst into the pond... First we had bridge-jumpers; now we have pond-jumpers."

Peggy Chapman, Board of Health chair

Plans included draining the pond, the first step taken, then adding a sand bottom on top of the rubber membrane, which was added during last year's renovation project. The CSCR students believe the rubber membrane could have

LIBRARY DIRECTOR

For the love of books

Rafferty receives top honor

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Massachusetts libraries have their very own hall of fame, and Cohasset's library director was recently sworn in.

Jacqueline "Jackie" Rafferty, director of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, was inducted into the Mass. Library Association (MLA) Hall of Fame this past May. Rafferty has worked in both the public and academic library field for 26 years and has been Cohasset's director for the past eight.

For Rafferty, who has also served as president of the MLA, president of the SAILS and OCLN library networks, and as library director in Hanson, the recognition of her near three decades of dedication didn't likely come as a surprise. A lifelong library patron since childhood – "I'm grateful to my mother for bringing me every week; I tore through the entire collection" – Rafferty does her work for the love of libraries.

"I feel good because something my colleagues always note about me is I'm so passionate about libraries," Rafferty said during an interview in her office. "I believe in them so strongly and enjoy this advocacy...I have a fervent desire to bring the best public services that we can."

Out of her many accomplishments (see sidebar), Rafferty said that she was

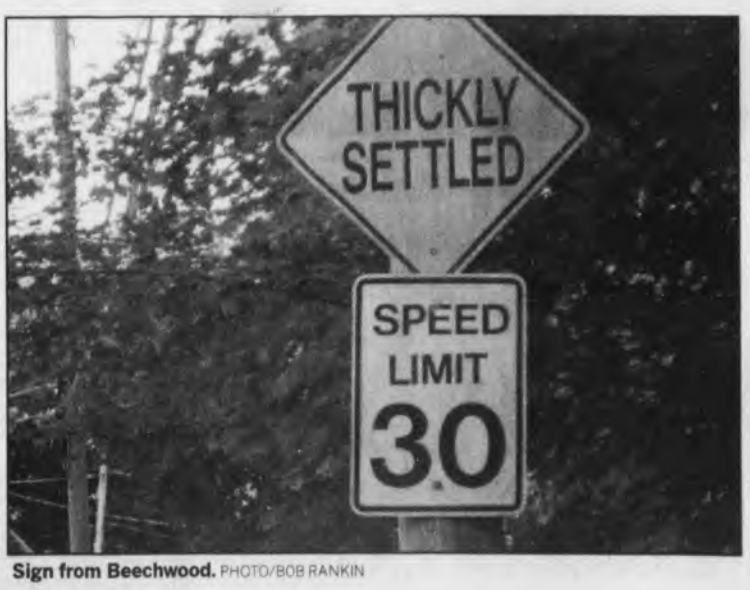
WHAT'S GOING ON HERE? | By Bob Rankin

Watch your speed around Cohasset

THICKLY SETTLED:
The 30 MPH speed limit rule applies to most of Cohasset, unless otherwise posted.

THE LAW READS:
A" thickly settled district" is an area where buildings are fewer than 200 feet apart for a distance of 1/4-quarter mile or more.

LOWER POSTED SPEED LIMIT AREAS INCLUDE:
Main Street and Ripley Road in the Village Posted 20 MPH speed limit. The Harbor waterfront and St. Anthony areas also have lower posted speed limits.



YOU'RE GOING TOO FAST:
Speed limits, unless posted otherwise, your speed would not be reasonable and proper if you drive over...

- 20 mph in a school zone
- 30 mph in a thickly settled or business district
- 40 mph outside a thickly settled or business district
- 50 mph on highway outside thickly settled or business district

Other speed limits apply to limited access highways, interstate & turnpikes.

Democratic state senate candidates square off in forum

The South Shore Democratic Caucus consisting of the town Democratic Committees representing Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield and Duxbury will host a forum for Democratic state senate candidates Steve May, D-Hull and Genevieve Davis, D-Norwell.

The forum will be Wednesday Aug. 22 at 7 p.m. in the Canoe Room at the Tufts Library in Weymouth.

All interested South Shore Democrats and Independents are invited to come and learn more about these candidates. There will be a Primary Election on Sept. 6, 2012. The winner of the primary will face incumbent Republican Bob Hedlund, R-Weymouth, in the November general election.

Members of the audience will have the opportunity to submit questions in writing, which will be read to both candidates.

The Mariner caught up with Special Police Officer James Hudson this week. If you see Officer Hudson around town, be sure to tell him you saw him in Picture This!
COURTESY PHOTO

James J. Hudson

Name: James J. Hudson

Occupation: Cohasset Special Police Officer.

Best day of your life: When I became a Special Police Officer in Cohasset. Becoming a Police Officer has been my lifelong dream.

Best vacation: A family vacation a couple years ago to Waterville Valley in New Hampshire.

Favorite season: My favorite season by far is the summer.

Favorite holiday: Christmas. I have a big family and all of us come together and celebrate at Christmas time.

Favorite junk food: I have always been a fan of M & Ms.

Best magazine: Sports Illustrated is my favorite magazine.

Best movie: "The Departed" is my favorite movie of all time.

Best TV show: I feel that "Southland" is my favorite TV show.

Pet peeve: When perfectly healthy people park in handicapped spots.

Most embarrassing moment: When I was younger on a skiing trip, I thought it would be a good idea to try a black diamond. I went down the trail a bit, only to find out it had moguls and before I knew it, my skis were at the top of the trail and I was tumbling down. Not only did I have to walk up the trail to get my skis, I could hear the laughter from the other people above me on the ski lift.

Fun fact: I will be a senior at Westfield State University in the fall and will be graduating in May 2013.

Goal: To become a full-time police officer.

Person you'd most like to meet: I think that it would be great to meet Kate Upton.

Biggest worry: Having something bad happen to my family or friends.

Best part of Cohasset: I have only been working in Cohasset for a short period of time and I was not familiar with the town. I can sure say that in this time many people and places have made a lasting impression to me and I feel this is a very nice town to reside and work in.

Accidents

• At 1:52 a.m., on Monday (July 30), police responded to an accident at the entrance to the train station on Route 3A. Police said a 1994 Toyota Camry was headed north when it veered off the road into the traffic island at the entrance to the train station. The Camry had to be towed. The operator, a 37-year-old Bridgewater woman, is being summonsed to court for operating with suspended registration and for marked lanes violation.

• At 1:30 p.m., on Monday (July 30), there was a two-car accident at lower King Street and Route 3A. Police said a 2007 Ford pickup truck, operated by a 21-year-old Cohasset man, was attempting to make a left out of lower King Street onto 3A when he failed to yield to a 2008 Toyota Scion that was headed north. A 22-year-old Marshfield woman operated the Scion. Police said the operator of the pickup did not judge the speed the Scion and was hit broadside. Neither vehicle was towed and there were no reported injuries. The Cohasset man, operating the pickup, was cited for failure to yield.

• At 10:24 p.m., on Monday (July 30), there was a two-car accident at North Main Street and Forest Avenue. Police said a 2002 Mercury Sable, operated by a 21-year-old Cohasset woman that was headed north on lower King Street, attempted to make a left onto N. Main Street into the path of a 2011 Nissan Altima that was headed down Forest Avenue straight across the intersection. A 21-year-old man from Scituate operated the Altima. The cars collided in the intersection. Police said the Nissan was towed and there were no reported injuries. The Cohasset woman in the Mercury was cited for failure to yield.

• At 8:15 a.m. on Tuesday (July 31), an Abington man went to the police station to report an accident in the Town Parking Lot. Police said a 2010 Ford Fusion, operated by the 62-year-old Abington man, was traveling in the lane in the parking lot when a 2011 Toyota Prius, operated by a 78-year-old Cohasset woman, hit the Fusion. Police said the Prius was cutting through the spaces when the collision occurred. There were no injuries and neither vehicle was towed.

• At 11:23 a.m., on Tuesday (July 31), a police detective's car was hit when it was backing out of a parking spot at Shaw's Plaza. Police said the car was struck by a 2005 Dodge pickup truck, operated by a 45-year-old Scituate man. There were no tows, no injuries and only minor damage, police said.

• At 1:20 a.m., on Wednesday (Aug. 1), a 9-1-1 caller from Jerusalem Road reported a crash in front of her house. Police said a 2000 Volvo S70 sedan, operated by a 28-year-old Hull woman, was exceeding the speed limit and crossed over the double yellow line into a utility pole and stonewall. There were no reported injuries; the Volvo was towed and the operator was cited for speeding and failure to stay in marked lanes.

• At 9:51 p.m., on Thursday (Aug. 2), police responded to a single-car crash on Sohier Street. Police said a 2012 Nissan Versa, operated by a 27-year-old Cohasset man, drove off the road into a utility pole near the Deer Hill School. The vehicle was towed; the Cohasset man was transported to the hospital with minor injuries. He was cited for failure to drive in marked lanes, police said.

• At 4:26 p.m., on Friday (Aug. 3), there was a two-car accident at S. Main and Summer streets. Police said a 2010 Chevrolet Equinox, operated by a 79-year-old Cohasset man, was coming out of Spring Street to cross over S. Main onto Summer Street when he cut off a 2005 Lexus RX330, operated by a 59-year-old Norwell woman who was headed north on S. Main Street. The cars collided and the Lexus had to be towed. The 79-year-old was cited for failure to stop at a stop sign, police said.

Skateboarders

Police spoke to young skateboarders on Sohier Street after receiving a report on Monday (July 30), at 2:15 p.m., that they were traveling down the hill toward the Music Circus and weaving in and out of traffic. An officer located the youth and had a conversation with them, police said.

Prank

Police responded to a report on Tuesday (July 31), at 9:08 a.m., that traffic signs had been left on one of the courts at the Beechwood Ballpark. Police said it looked like some young folks had gathered up temporary traffic signs from all over town, such as no parking, no-left turn, and construction signs, and left them there. The DPW was notified.

Drunken patrons

Police put a BOLO (be on the lookout) to area towns but were unable to locate the Audi that left Tedeschi Plaza at 4:35 p.m., on Tuesday (July 31), after its occupants – two men and a woman – were refused service at Curtis Liquors because they were drunk. Police continue to praise Curtis Liquors for their vigilance and for notifying police about these incidents as soon as possible.

Verbal warning

Police gave the 45-year-old Pembroke man, who was operating a 2005 Chevrolet Silverado, a verbal warning after locating him in the parking lot at Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza off King Street. A caller reported the Silverado running a red light at about 1:15 p.m., on Wednesday (Aug. 1), at Route 3A and upper King Street, almost colliding with the caller's vehicle.

Vandalism

A 20-year-old employee from Scituate, who works at a local establishment, reported to police at 9:45 p.m., on Thursday (Aug. 2), that his father's car, a 2003 Toyota Camry that he had taken to work, was vandalized in the parking lot. The plate was bent, the door handle smashed, the paint on the car carved into and the tires slashed. The matter has been turned over to Cohasset police detectives who are investigating.

Assistance

Police assisted the mother of a 19-year-old who was taken into protective custody by Hull police and released to her parents. The mother called at 1:17 a.m., on Saturday (Aug. 4), because the girl refused to go into the house. The mother asked for someone in authority to tell her daughter to go inside. Police helped resolve the matter.

Unlicensed

Cohasset police stopped a 2010 Toyota Scion at 1:30 p.m., on Saturday (Aug. 4), operated by a 57-year-old Marshfield woman after Scituate police reported it was being operated erratically in their town. Further investigation revealed the woman's license had expired. Her car was towed and she is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation. Police said she was not impaired but apparently had not been paying attention to the road.

Checks out

An 81-year-old Cohasset woman whose car had been reported as being operated erratically checked out fine, police said. Police got a call at 9:40 p.m., on Saturday (Aug. 4), with a plate number and went to the woman's house where she was just getting out of the car. Police suspect the caller was in too much of a hurry and the elderly woman was not going fast enough.

Sailboat

Police said the Coast Guard conducted a compliance check of a 28-foot sailboat that was not properly equipped to sail at night at about 11:30 p.m., on Saturday (Aug. 4). There were no safety lights, police said. The 52-year-old Maryland man on the boat was about to sail from Hingham to Maryland. He was provided with a transient mooring in the harbor until his boat was properly equipped, police said.

Warrant

A 29-year-old Cohasset man was arrested on a warrant on Sunday (Aug. 5) for violating the terms of his probation, police said. He was not at home but was picked up at his place of employment.

CHOKE/SAVER LAW

Board of health supports change

All restaurants would need to train staff

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Board of Health is joining other Massachusetts communities in taking a new stand on the state's Choke/Saver law.

A current state statute requires all restaurants and food establishments with 25 seats or more to have at least one staff member trained in choke saving methods, such as the Heimlich maneuver. There's a movement in the legislature to change that status from businesses with 25-plus seats to any restaurant.

Cohasset's Health Administrator/Inspector Felix Zemel told the Board of Health Tuesday that this entails a one-word change to the statute.

Zemel went on to explain that the city of Newton is a big proponent of changing the Choke/Saver bill and is asking other communities to sign off their support. Cohasset's Board of Health could sign off on Newton's letter to the legislature or submit one of its own.

Board of Health chair Peggy Chapman wondered how changing the bill would affect businesses like Dunkin' Donuts, which typically experience high turnovers in staffing. Zemel said that even places like Dunkin' Donuts would have to get on board with this change.

The law says one person has to be trained in case they're willing to help someone who's choking, said Zemel, they have to be able to perform obstructed airway relief.

Training takes about two hours and costs $25 per person, according to Zemel.

Chapman wondered if the Board of Health would be able to assist vendors with training costs, as $25 per person "can be very steep."

Zemel responded that in his former position in Framingham, he dealt with a 24-hour Dunkin' Donuts, and the franchise owner there opted to send all of the supervisors to choke saving training, and also made sure at least one person per overnight crew was trained. "They trained in bulk to lower the per person cost," Zemel explained.

Board of Health clerk Robin Lawrence said, "I don't see any downside to giving support" for the bill change and suggested the board send a letter of its own to the state legislature.

Chapman agreed, "It will have more punch if we write our own letter."

Zemel said that he would draft a letter based on Newton's and will sign it as health administrator.

The timeframe for the statute to take effect could take a few months, Zemel said.

Boat Form of List mailed

Cohasset Assessors' office has mailed the Boat Form of List to be completed by any person who owns a vessel as of July 1, 2012. In accordance with Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 60B, the deadline for filing is Aug. 1, 2012. Failure to timely file this return could adversely affect the owner's abatement rights. The Assessors' appreciate cooperation in providing the necessary information. For more information, call the Assessors' office at 781-383-4114.

Cemetery application withdrawn

Committee will use private funds for fence repairs

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Despite recently securing a favorable recommendation from the Community Preservation Committee to fund a fence and gate restoration project, the Central Cemetery Committee has decided to go it alone.

Glenn Pratt, a member of the committee, confirmed this week that Central Cemetery has withdrawn its application to the town's Community Preservation Committee (CPC) and will use its own funds to pay for the project.

Central Cemetery, located on North Main Street and Joy Place, is a privately owned, 501(c) 3 non-profit organization and is therefore independent of the town. The cemetery also has a $1.4 million endowment, which is used for grounds maintenance.

Following an inspection DeAngelis Iron Works (DIW) last August, the cemetery committee was told the estimated cost to repair all of the gates and fences would be $100,000. The committee decided to focus on the areas in most need of repair, including the Lothrop Fence, which is the one most visible from the street; fixing just the high-priority areas would cost $25,000. In its application, the cemetery committee asked the CPC to fund $20,000 and planned to use $5,000 from the cemetery's budget.

After discussion, CPC members present at last week's meeting agreed on splitting the costs 50-50, agreeing to allocate $12,500 of CPA funds. The cemetery committee members present, Richard Swanborg and Richard Toll, said they were grateful for any amount the CPC was willing to contribute.

The funding would still need to go to a Town Meeting vote in the fall.

On Tuesday, CPC chairman Russ Bonetti received an email from Pratt stating that the cemetery committee decided to withdraw its application to the CPC. In the email, Pratt thanked Bonetti for his support, but said that ultimately, the cemetery group decided to complete the project with their own funds.

"We hope to be able to make your committee believers in the value of good restoration, after this initial phase is complete," Pratt wrote, "and may apply again for another project."

Bonetti said in a phone call Tuesday that while he wasn't sure at the time why the cemetery committee decided to withdraw, he didn't think the issue was "being cut back" from $20,000 to $12,500.

"I said I have no problem with the $20,000, and neither does Alex (Koines, another CPC member)," said Bonetti. "I think it's a worthy project, and want them to know they're welcome, if they change their minds and want to come back in before Town Meeting, I'd be glad to hear them again."

Pratt said in a phone interview that funding wasn't so much the issue; it was more about waiting for the CPC to place a Preservation Restriction on the cemetery property. Bonetti said that a restriction is required by law and would have to be approved by the Massachusetts Historical Society, which could take several months.

Members of the Central Cemetery Committee said at the meeting they were already moving ahead with the work in order to complete it before the winter months. Swanborg said the disrepair of some of the iron fence created a safety issue and made the repairs more urgent.

"The requirements, the restrictions that have to be placed on the property, we don't want to get into that for $12,500," said Pratt. "It's already on the National Register of Historic Places."

The decision to go solo on the project's funding was "no big deal," Pratt added. "We've been talking about this project for 10 years. We're going to plug away, we're still going to do it."

Since Central Cemetery is using its own private funds and is not town-owned, the project does not require a Town Meeting vote.

The cemetery's committee initially approached the CPC for help with its restoration project because they felt it was a historic venture.

"Restoring the fences will add to the historic character of the cemetery," the committee wrote in their request for to the CPC.

Many of the fences at Central Cemetery are between 100 and 200 years old; the age alone made them a candidate for CPA funds, but the cemetery was also added to the National Historic Register 10 years ago.

New application policy

Conservation Commission chairman Jack Creighton has implemented the below policy to provide conservation and storm water applicants better service. All applicants will be provided a list containing:

- ll qualified firms that have provided services on Cohasset conservation or storm water projects at any time in the last two years
- Website or reference point for applicants to find qualified firms that provide conservation/storm water permit services
- ll qualified Cohasset based companies

This list will be provided to anyone wishing information about qualified firms. It will be noted that while the Conservation Commission can make the list available, it is not their policy to make recommendations nor will they make recommendations

Drainage at North Main Street fields

Last Thursday, the Conservation Commission unanimously approved a Notice of Intent (NOI) from the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association (CYBSA) to fix drainage issues at the North Main Street Little League Field.

Representatives from the CYBSA said they would like to get the drainage project done this year.

Cohasset Historical Society museums open

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th Century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum. The museums tell of the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s.

The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses. Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The museums are open 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays.

For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

Maritime History Exhibit

The Cohasset Historical Society is celebrating Cohasset maritime history throughout the month of September. Save the date for Opening night on Saturday, Sept. 8.

Opening night will highlight a unique exhibit featuring relics of the many ships that were storm driven on the reefs off the Cohasset shores as well as artifacts from Cohasset's rich seafaring history.

Most wrecks occurred in the 19th century, when the shipping channel into Boston Harbor was narrow and passed close to many ledges. Ships were predominately powered by sail and at the mercy of the wind, which frequently blew them onto the rocks.

A cocktail party at the Society will celebrate Cohasset's worldwide shipping trade and current fishing and lobster industries.For more details call 781-383-1434, visit cohassethistoricalsociety.org or email cohassethistory@yahoo.com

Benny

Benny is a very nice, happy dog with a 'be my friend' nature. He came to us from another shelter and seems to be a smart boy that really enjoys being around people. Benny is about 4 1/2 years old and we believe he'd be best matched to a home where any children are 10 years old or older (since we don't know if he has had experience with younger children). A fenced yard is not required but would be recommended given the tendency of beagles to follow their noses! Benny would also need a home without cats.

Call (781) 544-4533 for more information or stop by the Scituate Animal Shelter during open hours to meet Benny!

Green Plate Jeopardy

Is the RMV (aka MADOT) recalling green plates? Yes? No? When? Well… Here is the story: The RMV is NOT recalling green license plates.

You can lose your green plate IF:

- It is NOT readable from 60 feet away (Massachusetts state law.)
- Any passenger plate, green or red, which has lost its reflective coating or paint, must be replaced. (You can be cited by law enforcement for this violation.)
- This is also a criterion for passing your annual inspection.

Besides these scenarios, you green plate drivers are safe for the foreseeable future.

Treasurer/ Collector gives update

The town's new Treasurer/Collector Jane Lepardo has been busy since starting her new job in Cohasset three weeks ago. At the July 31 Selectmen's meeting, Lepardo gave an update on her department, including new policies and her overall vision.

This included hiring a new deputy collector located in nearby Scituate (both Lepardo and Finance Director Mary Gallagher came to Cohasset from Scituate's Town Hall); implementing lock boxes for citizens to send their payments to; canceling the department's P.O. Box and consolidating bank accounts. Lepardo also said she would like to make it easier for folks to pay town bills online and conduct business with town hall in general.

Acting Town Manager said that he is impressed with the work both Lepardo and Gallagher accomplished so far.

"We've been very fortunate to have two professionals that have come in fixing the financial system in the town," said Milanoski. "It has been broken for a long time. They're working to solve all the past problems so when we go forward, we will be running like a 21st century entity."

Charging for public records

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski reported at the last selectmen's meeting that a New York firm recently paid the town of Cohasset a bill for assembling, printing and mailing public records. The firm made a public records request, and the town manager's office provided the information that was asked for, charging the firm $178.15 to complete this request. The firm submitted a check in full, Milanoski said.

Under the state's Public Records Law, town government is required to maintain a public correspondence system that is easily accessible to any citizen. The Public Records Law, which is available online, also makes it clear that emails and other electronic correspondence are also public records and should be readily accessible.

Milanoski said in a phone call, "It doesn't matter whether you live in town or Boston or New York City; anyone can file a public records request." The town manager reiterated that the "process works. They paid for the work they needed."

Senior Center study underway

A consultant from UMass Boston will conduct a feasibility study for the proposed Senior Center project. Part of the study includes a computer survey for all residents age 18 and over, asking citizens what they would be looking for in a senior center. Student volunteers will provide computer training at the library for those interested in taking part in the survey but do not otherwise have computer access. The study is being paid for by $15,000 in funds allocated by Annual Town Meeting.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson, who also serves on the Senior Center Planning Committee, said it's important for the town to "reach out to elderly who are not computer friendly" so that they can still participate in the survey.

The townwide survey skews various age groups because the planning group feels it's important to survey the town's entire voting population, not just seniors.

"It's important because it's a town service," selectman Diane Kennedy said of the planned center. "All of us are going to be seniors someday."

Town RFPs going out

A request for proposals (RFP) for the Our World Children's Museum (40 Ripley Road) is going to be published next week. The museum's current lease was given a one-month extension. The museum is housed in the back of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, in what was a condemned wing of the former Osgood School. Library trustees said during a May selectmen's meeting, which was held at the museum, that they would like to expand the library into the museum space once Our World's lease expires. Our World co-founder Mary Larson said that she had no intention of giving up the space once the lease is up.

RFPs for the Sailing Club and Treat's Pond are also being published, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said recently. The Sailing Club is a privately owned building on town land, so "there's a process we have to go through to develop a long-term lease with the successful bidder," said Milanoski. The town is also going out to bid for a contractor to mitigate the ongoing flooding problem at Treat's Pond.

Technology officer to present townwide plan

The town and schools' Chief Technology Officer Robert Bonnell will present his townwide technology plan at the Aug. 21 Board of Selectmen's meeting. The presentation will outline Bonnell's implementation plan for technology in the community over the next few years, said Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

Bonnell has made the rounds at various town departments since starting his position in June and has already made "multiple improvements in the school structure," said Milanoski.

Bonnell's plan, according to the town manager, is "going to develop a solution for whole town to be more efficient as we move toward the 21st century."

Hiring update

Town Hall will soon welcome a full-time Director of Project Management and Planning, who will work in the town manager's office. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said during the July 31 selectmen's meeting that he had interviewed six candidates for the position and selected three finalists; those finalists were interviewed by a committee comprised of one representative from each of the following boards: Capital Budget Committee (Jack Keniley), Board of Selectmen (Leland Jenkins), Sewer Commission (John Beck), and Planning Board (Clark Brewer).

Milanoski said in a phone call that the group shared their recommendations with him, and that he is "moving forward with the consensus."

Cohasset students build relationships with homeless

Trevor Schramn, Blair McGowan and William Patsos of Cohasset, current seniors at Boston College High School, were three of the 33 students who fed and befriended the hungry and homeless on the Boston Common in a homeless outreach program that takes place every Thursday for 2 1/2 hours after school.

This project was founded by Schramn and three of his classmates, under the guidance of campus minister Jessica Meyer. Named the St. Louis Project after St. Louis of Toulouse, the group hopes to increase awareness of the human dignity of the homeless, hungry and impoverished within the community, advocating through the program respect and love for those in need.

"The St. Louis Project" said Meyer, "is both an interactive and spiritual project, in that it not only entails direct service work but through reflection and the building of lasting relationships with the people we serve, we are living out the mission of BC High to create leaders of "competence, conscience and compassion," – "men and women with and for others."

WEDDING

Gratta — Spencer

Emily Christina Spencer and Joseph James Gratta were married on June 30, 2012, at the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset.

The bride is the daughter of John W Spencer and Diana Temple of Hull and Karen Spencer of Boston. Emily is a graduate of Brookline High School and Boston University. She is a professionally licensed mortgage loan officer with Residential Mortgage Services.

The groom is the son of Joseph and Janis Gratta of Quincy. Joseph is a graduate of Hingham High School and Boston University, School of Engineering. He is the production manager for Mammoth Media of Hingham.

After a honeymoon in Costa Rica, the couple will live in Weymouth.

Team Shea

Rick and Gitte Shea sent in this photo of their three children, who biked in the Pan-Mass Challenge this past weekend, Aug. 4-5. They biked 190 miles over two days from Sturbridge to Provincetown, together raising more than $13,000 for cancer research and treatment at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Emilie came in from Denver, Erik from Brooklyn, and Julie from Somerville. PHOTO COURTESY OF RICK AND GITTE SHEA

SOUTH SHORE ART CENTER

Polomis paintings on exhibit through Aug. 31

The South Shore Art Center presents an exhibit by artist Ted Polomis at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, through Aug. 31. Gallery hours are Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays 10 a.m.-8 p.m., Wednesdays and Fridays 10 a.m.-5 p.m., and Saturdays 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Polomis is a realist painter working in the medium of oils. He attended The Rhode Island School of Design and was elected to the European Honors Program in Rome, Italy, where he spent his junior year. He visited every museum and collection he could, not only in Italy, but 13 other countries as well, so that he could study the works of the Great Masters.

He paints from his home studio in Marshfield Hills. Working exclusively in oils, he creates paintings with a sophisticated sense of balance and depth. He is captivated by the interplay between objects and their environment, and the quiet harmony that results from balancing form, color, light and shadow. His works have received numerous awards, and have been featured in many publications including American Art Collector, International Artist and The Artist's Magazine.

FARMERS MARKET

Cooking up a 'Storm' with farm fresh foods

Health coach Linda Storm to demo on Aug. 16

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset Farmers Market patrons are in for a savory treat.

During the Thursday, Aug. 16 market, local health coach Linda Storm will be serving up a fresh-made meal using the produce sold at the market that day.

Storm, who is a certified health coach and yoga instructor, is a fixture at local markets and demonstrated her culinary skills on the Cohasset common last August. Last year, locally-grown kale and tomatoes were the stars of the menu; this year, zucchini and corn will steal the show.

If you go:

WHAT: Cooking demonstration at the Cohasset Farmers Market featuring Linda Storm.
WHERE: Cohasset Town Common.
WHEN: Thursday, Aug. 16, 3:30 p.m.
WHY: Local health coach Linda Storm uses locally grown produce from the farmers market. If you tasted Storms's cooking last year, you know that she prepares beautiful, delicious food featuring fresh, local ingredients. This year, Storm will whip up zucchini spaghetti with chutney tomato sauce and Indian summer succotash.

"People have lot of zucchini this year," Storm said in a phone call. "It's easy to grow. People have it in their garden and it all grows at once."

While the demo's recipe is "all in my head right now," Storm plans to have copies available for folks at the market. Storm plans to prepare zucchini spaghetti with a chutney tomato sauce and "Indian Summer Succotash." But the specific vegetables that end up in the chutney and succotash depend on the produce available that day, Storm said.

The succotash dish "might have squash this year, or sweet potato; it depends on what they have at the market that day," said Storm. "It makes the menu planning a little difficult, but I would rather use what they have."

The health coach predicts the succotash will be a family favorite.

"We have a vision in our heads of what we had as kids, and it's not too appealing," Storm said of the dish. "But using what they have at farmers market, it makes a great side dish. Kids usually enjoy dishes with fresh corn; it's usually a bit hit with the kids."

Storm's zucchini "spaghetti," meanwhile, doesn't include actual spaghetti at all. Rather than boil pasta, Storm will shred the zucchini and cook it, "mix some other vegetables in there, add tomato sauce on top, herbs to make it yummy."

Making healthy food taste delicious – to even the pickiest eaters – is one of Storm's goals as a health professional.

"Trying to live a healthy lifestyle doesn't have to be boring," she said. "Once you start cooking with fresh foods and ingredients, food tastes much better to your palate.

Linda Storm blends red onions that she had cut for her gazpacho during her cooking demonstration in 2011.
STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

The health coach explained that while she understands that folks are busier these days than ever, juggling work and family obligations, creating nutritious meals doesn't have to be overwhelming.

"It's easy to fall into 'let's just order a pizza because it's easy,'" said Storm. "If you plan ahead, you can make great meals in the time it takes to order pizza and go pick it up."

It's all part of the whole foods and exercise lifestyle Storm advocates, and the health coach practices what she preaches.

"Everybody, I think, has a pivotal point in their life when they start to look at their health differently," Storm said, stating that for her, it was when her father suffered a heart attack and endured bypass surgery at the age of 62. "When I saw him in the hospital hooked up to machines, I thought, 'He seemed healthy; how did that happen?' It took me on journey, and I started changing my lifestyle. I quit smoking, started going to the gym and exercising, which led to an interest in nutrition and led me on a beautiful path. Yoga was another piece that I found, and added a mind-body-spirit component."

Linda Storm sautés kale with pine nuts and dried cranberries during her healthy food demonstration.

For Storm, the healthy switches did the trick. "At this time, I'm the only one in my family not on medication for cholesterol and high blood pressure," she said.

Now, Storm is bringing her passion for delicious and nutritious fare back to Cohasset. In addition to next Thursday's demonstration at the farmers market, she will do a cooking demo at Cohasset's Holly Hill Farm on Saturday, Aug. 25.

This September, Storm is partnering with the farm to create a healthy back-to-school lunch program. The farm will offer "healthy lunches on the go," said Storm. "We want to send the kids back with healthy foods without additives and preservatives."

Details for the program will be posted online at www.healthcoachlindastorm.com and www.hollyhillfarm.org.

Storm hopes those who visit her at her cooking demos "come with an appetite and an open mind."

"I like people to know that healthy can taste good," said Storm. "It doesn't have to come from fast food to taste good."

FROM THE ARCHIVES

A view of Brush Island taken ca. 1880 when Edward Cunningham's summer estate graced its rocky shores.

Heroic rescue rewarded

The following was provided by the Cohasset Historical Society.

The King instructed the Danish College of Commerce to issue 14 large medals, four of gold and 10 of silver, to those who had rescued the crew of the Gertrude Maria.

During the 19th century the small ledges and islands off Cohasset shore were the site of many shipwrecks. Particularly during winter months, the prevailing winds often blew large vessels aground on the "Cohasset Rocks" as the small ledges became known.

The earliest shipwreck about which we have detailed information was the wreck of the Gertrude Maria in 1793. The 400-ton Gertrude Maria sailed from Boston bound for her homeport of Copenhagen fully laden with hemp estimated at $40,000. Driven by gale force wind and high seas, the Gertrude Maria glanced off one of the small ledges off the Cohasset shore, and then crashed headlong into the granite shores of Brush Island. The ship quickly broke apart and sank. An initial attempt to reach shore resulted in the death of one of the crewmen. Those remaining on board sought shelter high on the island's icy rocks. They shivered through the cold and stormy night until Cohasset residents at the shore discovered their plight at daybreak. The residents, experienced at lifesaving, launched small boats into rough seas from the area now known as Sandy Beach. Through several launchings, some of which failed, 21 crewmen and the Gertrude Maria's captain were brought safely to shore.

Upon his return to Copenhagen Danish Captain Klien spoke of the heroic efforts and hospitality of Cohasset residents to King Christian VIII. The King instructed the Danish College of Commerce to issue 14 large medals, four of gold and 10 of silver, to those who had rescued the crew of the Gertrude Maria. The Royal decree read in part "To Reverent Shaw in Cohaset near Boston in Northernamerica bewitness him Our and The Fatherlands gratefulness for the love of mankind, generosity and bravery he, as well as the others in the presentation mentioned, showed by the rescuing of the men of the stranded Danish ship Gertrude Maria and of its cargo..." The medals given to the Cohasset men were exceptional as it was that few non-Danish persons were ever so honored.

chosen for the Hall of Fame because of her work in trying to help libraries have better access to electronic content, including e-books, from major publishers.

"I was seeing a crisis with e-books," Rafferty explained. "The six major publishers were refusing to give libraries e-book content."

"As more and more information translates to digital, it's important that libraries are able to continue to serve people by making this material available."

Jackie Rafferty, library director

As the Mass. chapter councilor to the MLA, Rafferty co-authored a resolution that led to creation of an American Library Association (ALA) presidential task force to examine the problem and find a resolution, Rafferty explained. She was also appointed to that task force.

This led to the formation of the ALA's Digital Content and Libraries Working Group (DCWG), and Rafferty was asked to be chair of its publicity sub-group.

Rafferty explained that in her experience, these publishers are reluctant to allow libraries to access digital content out of fear that customers will cease paying for e-books. The library director cited Pew studies that show the fears are unwarranted.

"These studies determined that most people are buying e-books anyway," said Rafferty. "Having them at libraries is not a threat to the publisher's bottom line."

The rapid creation of digitalized information has been a challenge for modern libraries, the director explained.

"The main tenant libraries share and believe in is that everyone should be able to have access to information, especially those who cannot afford to buy what they want to read. As more and more information translates to digital, it's important that libraries are able to continue to serve people by making this material available."

Rafferty has made some major strides on the local level as well. Cohasset's library has e-books available, and the director is working with the board of the Mass. Libraries Committee to implement Cohasset's own e-book server. The plan is based on a model from the Douglas County libraries in Colorado, Rafferty explained, which partnered with independent publishers and authors to create their own e-book servers and content.

"We'll be replicating that in Massachusetts," said Rafferty.

The director added that the library received a $5,000 grant from the South Shore Music Circus to create a searchable Cohasset Mariner database on the library's website, "with the Mariner's permission." This enables users to search through for archived, electronic versions of past Mariner articles.

While she's still a lover of print, the library director said it's important for libraries to embrace electronic content, too. Rather than choosing e-books over print, Rafferty figures, why not have both?

"I love the variety," Rafferty said. "All these different multi-formats are wonderful options. I believe libraries as institutions will continue to thrive."

The library director said that she sees how busy and popular Cohasset's town library is, and notes that teens, especially, continue to flock toward the books.

"It's a wonderful community to be working in a library," said Rafferty. "It's a very literate community; people are avid users and readers of all ages. It's very rewarding to work here."

Jackie Rafferty, director of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, was recently inducted into the Mass. Library Association Hall of Fame. PHOTO/ERIN DALE

Jackie Rafferty: Biography

Jacqueline Rafferty is the director of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset. She is a member of the Phi Beta Mu International Library Science Honor Society and holds a master's in Library Sciences from the University of Rhode Island. Rafferty is past president of the Mass. Library Association (MLA) and also served as MLA chapter councilor to the American Library Association (ALA).

Currently, Rafferty chairs the MLA Intellectual Freedom Committee and the ALA's Digital Content and Libraries Working Group (DCWG) publicity sub-group.

As MA chapter councilor, Rafferty co-authored a resolution that led to the formation of an ALA presidential task force, Equitable Access to Electronic Content (EQUACC), and subsequently served on the task force. EQUACC was created to study challenges and recommend potential solutions in libraries for improved electronic content access, distribution and preservation systems.

In May 2012, Rafferty was inducted into the MLA Hall of Fame in recognition of her longstanding dedication to advancing the cause of librarianship and Massachusetts libraries.

Library Hall of Fame requirements

Inductees to the Hall of Fame are practicing or retiring librarians who have made at least a 10-year, substantial, sustained, statewide contribution to advancing the cause of Massachusetts librarians or librarianship. Inductees' contributions may be in the fields of public service, education, advocacy, mentoring, service to the profession, or other areas. Inductees' contributions should be recognized on a regional, statewide, or national level. Inductees may work or have worked in school, public, special, or academic libraries, in library education, agencies, or associations.

POND

impeded bacteria growth and created an algae-friendly environment.

The sand should act as a "breeding ground for beneficial bacteria," Zemel said during Tuesday's Board of Health meeting.

Once the pond has been sanded, it will be refilled with dechlorinated tap water and the pumps will be turned on again. CSCR will continue monitoring the water quality, checking the pond bi-weekly until the water is stabilized; they hope it will be by mid-September. Once the pond is considered stable, CSCR will check on it as needed until November, or the end of the season.

"We're hoping it will be stabilized by then," said Zemel.

Then, the town can look into adding aquatic life; many residents recall that the pond used to have goldfish.

In a phone call Tuesday, the town manager said that he hopes to have the pond filled "by this time next week." Milanoski said last week that he asked the Water Department to consider donating or reducing the cost of the 4,000 gallons of water needed to re-fill the pond. The town owes the water dept. an outstanding balance of $60,000 from last year.

Milanoski said that he is in the process of negotiating with the Water Commission.

"I've asked them to provide the water to us at their variable cost," he explained, meaning the cost of how much electricity it costs to generate that much water, the cost of the chemicals used to treat it, and the cost of how much sludge the water generates. The incremental cost would not "have any impact to the ratepayer," said Milanoski.

This "creates a win-win situation," the town manager continued. "We're just paying that variable cost; the ratepayers aren't picking up any extra cost. That will get us through this calendar year until we figure out how we want to fill the pond, whether we dig a well or whether or not next year we purchase water through the water company as well. These are the short-term and long-term solutions, since a well is not on the table right now."

Adding sand this week should deter youths who have turned the empty pond into an impromptu skate park; kids could be seen this week riding their bikes and skateboards in the pond, even bringing a wooden board and creating a ramp for doing jumps.

Board of Health chair Peggy Chapman said during the board's meeting, "Kids are going headfirst into the pond... First we had bridge-jumpers; now we have pond-jumpers."

Cohasset's DPW filled the drained Meetinghouse Pond with sand on Wednesday, Aug. 8. The pond was drained last week in response to a high pH and significant algae growth this summer. COURTESY PHOTOS

The sand is anticipated to encourage the growth of beneficial bacteria, town officials said.

DPW workers even out the sand at Meetinghouse Pond earlier this week.

BUSINESSWOMEN

Cohasset company owners enjoy success

By Jennifer Magruder
Correspondent

In the past few years, a number of once successful businesses have failed due to a struggling economy. With "For Rent" signs continually appearing on storefronts, it is reassuring to hear about business owners who have made it and thrived through the recession. In Cohasset, several women have taken the risk and started their own companies to achieve their entrepreneurial goals despite the challenges. They have all flourished in the past years, managing to make this small town their own Silicon Valley.

Susan Bell has had a long history of working in health-care reform and public policy. Early on in life she was influenced by politics, especially by her parents who were both political activists. Due to this level of involvement, Bell states, "I respected what was going on in the country and was influenced by that." This interest continued as she began her career. After graduating from UMass Amherst, Bell went right to Capitol Hill to work in Senator Ted Kennedy's office.

Her career in health-care reform blossomed as she worked in different Massachusetts government agencies, including the Executive Office of Health and Human Services, where she worked as senior manager until 2009. It was at this time Bell decided she needed to make a change in her life.

Her husband had recently switched from a career in government to consulting, and she saw how interesting that was. She immediately thought, "I could do that!" Thus, after years of working for the government, Bell went off on her own and started Bell Advantage Consulting.

The main mission of her company is to provide "knowledge-based public policy consulting offering practical data-driven solutions." As the US healthcare system undergoes continual change from the Patient Protection and Affordable Health Care Act and the HITECH Act, Bell Advantage Consulting guides stakeholders in overcoming the challenges they face.

In order to help clients achieve their goals, Bell offers solutions such as new care models, patient empowerment, and care management transformation. With the transformation of the healthcare system, Bell strives to simplify the decisions of her clients and help them achieve their goals with Medicaid expansion and digitizing health information exchange.

In the past year and a half, Bell has had four high-profile clients. She credits some of her success to the Supplier Diversity Office, which lists minority- and women-owned certified business enterprises. Bell stresses the importance of the SDO program and believes it has proved highly beneficial for women entrepreneurs.

Although her job takes up quite a great deal of time (she sometimes works 17-hour days), Bell is happy with her decision to start her own business.

"It is very busy, sure," she said, "but you are able to call your own shots, and I like that."

Bell currently works out of her home office in Cohasset and is continuing to expand her company.

"It is a privilege to be a part of government service. It is something honorable, and I always wanted to make a difference," says Bell of her career choice. And she certainly is making a difference, not just in healthcare, but by setting an example for other women hoping to start their own business.

Darcy Schramm has always chosen her career paths by pursuing her interests and taking calculated risks. These qualities have allowed her to become a successful owner of two businesses in Cohasset in two different fields: court reporting and real estate.

Schramm first began working for a developer in property management in a low-income area. With the difficult work and challenges she faced, she decided to get her real estate license. After doing this, she worked as a real estate agent in Charlestown in the early 1980s. Unfortunately, after the market crash, the real estate market was down, so she decided to become trained in court reporting while continuing her current career.

Schramm worked as a freelance court reporter until 1995, and also continued her work as a real estate agent. As a single mother, though, she decided she needed to make some career changes in order to spend more time with her son. Thus, in 1995 she bought a court-reporting agency and renamed it Advanced Court Reporting. She also made the change to move back to Cohasset, where she grew up, and raise her son while working from her home office. Then in 2000, she decided to start up her own real estate agency, South Shore Properties.

No longer going out and actively court reporting on her own, Schramm deals with the administrative duties of the company such as advertising, marketing, and client retention. She stresses the continual need for court reporting, especially as technology changes. Advanced Court Reporting still utilizes stenography, but mostly uses verbatim reporting in which the court reporters repeat exactly what is being said. This is no easy skill and requires training, as they must pay complete attention to detail and know the names of everyone who is speaking in the room.

It is not in Schramm's nature to work a 9-5 corporate job, so that is why she went off on her own in real estate and started South Shore Properties.

"There are not a lot of real estate agencies that are not mandated by a franchise," she says. "I like having the autonomy."

Independence is truly the theme for Schramm. She explained the compromises she has had to make by owning her own companies.

"When you are self-employed, there are no paid vacations, and you do not have health insurance right off the bat, but you are able to do things the way that you want to."

This has been the most important aspect for Schramm, for she has the flexibility to be a business owner and a mother at the same time.

Schramm recognizes the South Shore Women's Business Network as a component of her success. She said it has been an incredibly helpful resource that generates knowledge and support.

She believes that women in this world should be supportive of each other, and she offers this advice, "Listen to the people who have made it and taken chances. We are all scared to death of something, and for me it is about pushing through that fear. Don't be afraid to fall."

Susan Hoadley and Corina Martinez (Hoadley Martinez Architects)

Susan Hoadley and Corina Martinez know how difficult it can be to balance work with motherhood. Before 2009, both Cohasset residents had worked for Shepley Bulfinch Architecture in Boston. With the commute and the long hours at work, there was not much time left to be with their children. So when an opportunity arose to work closer to home, they decided to take it. A small office in downtown Cohasset became available at the time when they were deciding to start their own business, and Martinez says, "It was like destiny."

In January of 2009, with very few setbacks, Hoadley Martinez Architects officially opened in Cohasset. Although the location is small, their geographic spectrum of projects is quite large. They have worked with clients across the country in California, and even across the ocean in London. They thank improved technology for allowing them to do these projects. "It's not like 10 years ago when geographic location was so critical," Hoadley said. "Now there are programs that transfer everything automatically."

Although they work quite a bit with residential projects, they also pride themselves on their institutional work. Hoadley's and Martinez's designs have been used at Harvard University, the Emma Willard School in New York, and most recently, the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Hoadley and Martinez are incredibly excited about the sailing club project. The design is ready; they are now waiting for the sailing club to raise enough money for them to start. Their hope is to begin building in the fall.

"The sailing club is a personal project," Hoadley says. "It will give back to the Cohasset community, and people will see how much attention we pay to detail and how that sets us apart from our competitors."

The Cohasset Sailing Club will also be the first LEED non-residential building in town, for Hoadley and Martinez strive to implement green technology into every one of their projects.

As mothers, Hoadley and Martinez believe that the decision to start their own business was one of the best they have made.

"If you want to do it," says Martinez, "you have to allow yourself to only [listen to] encouraging words, and not let people's personal fears become yours."

Hoadley agrees with her partner and adds, "It's amazing what you can do when it's only you."

Hoadley and Martinez believe this is one of the best things that they have done professionally, and they encourage other women and mothers who are interested in starting their own business to take the risk.

Tracey and Danielle Noonan (Wicked Good Cupcakes)

Nothing exemplifies mother-daughter bonding more than baking together. There is an added bonus if it can be turned into a profitable business. Tracey and Danielle Noonan did just that. They began by making their now-famous cupcakes out of their home for various corporate events. After some success and many compliments, they decided it would be a good idea to move out of their kitchen and open their own store.

Tracey and Danielle were initially looking for a location in Boston to open Wicked Good Cupcakes, but there were already so many gourmet bakeries in the city that they decided to set their sights elsewhere. The two looked around the South Shore and found the Cohasset location to be perfect.

"Cohasset was extremely welcoming to new business," said Tracey. "The board of health could not have been more helpful and the townspeople are wonderful, supportive, and loyal."

In October 2011 their hobby became profitable when Wicked Good Cupcakes officially opened. Although the business hasn't been open for a year yet, Tracey's and Danielle's expectations have already tripled. Their signature cupcakes in a jar have been especially popular, especially the "National Security Velvet," which captured the attention of the media when a customer got stopped by the TSA at airport security for trying to "smuggle" the cupcake on the plane because the icing qualified as a liquid. With this unplanned advertising, Wicked Good Cupcakes found itself having even more customers stopping by to taste the famous "TSA Cupcake."

Along with the cupcakes in a jar, Tracey and Danielle also make regular cupcakes in specialty flavors as well as cakes. Their trademark cupcake is "The Wicked Good" – a peanut butter cupcake with chocolate chips baked into it and peanut butter frosting. From personal experience, it definitely lives up to the name.

Tracey and Danielle differentiate their business from other bakeries in the area by the fact that they both have an art school background and they use fondant.

"This gives us an edge besides just the quality of the product," Tracey said, "as no one else around the area uses it [that we know of]."

Also, everything that they make is homemade. Nothing comes from a large batch, and they offer unique flavors – how many other bakeries sell bacon maple cupcakes?

Danielle believes their determination also sets them apart, for they sometimes work 14-hour days to ensure everything they bake is fresh and ready to ship.

Opening a cupcake store had been a dream of the Noonans for a while. Tracey expresses how thankful she is to be a woman in this country, for it has given her and Danielle the opportunity to achieve their goal.

"If you have a dream," says Tracey, "don't say no, and be prepared to work, work, and work some more."

As their business continues to thrive, Tracey and Danielle can say with complete certainty that their hard work has paid off.

OUR VIEW

A silver lining

With summer is fully upon us with its accompanying 80-to-90-degree heat and humidity, some may already be hankering for an early fall.

More than a few weary folk climbed the steps to the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square in recent weeks looking a bit overheated and fatigued from the sultry weather. They would pause to chat a while in our air-conditioned environs before venturing back out into hot downtown Hingham.

One thing we've observed from extended stretches of sweltering weather is meteorological matters seem to bring us staid New Englanders out of our collective shell.

Noted for being stuffy and rather cold in nature, with little small talk, weather conditions get us interacting with one another at the supermarket, gas station or just about anywhere around town.

Complaining about the weather is in fact a passion that we New Englanders all seem to share. Take a moment and think about how often you've grumbled about damp, dark and depressing winter or spring days to anyone who would listen.

Here in New England we have four seasons, although Mother Nature does trick us from time to time and forgets to give us one of them. You will recall that last winter was on her list of omissions.

Things could always be worse. Think about how hot it is in so many of our southern and midwestern states. We know from experience when the summer heat sets in, in Georgia, for example, it does not let up until well into the fall.

As Mark Twain said: "There is a sumptuous variety about the New England weather that compels the stranger's admiration-and regret. The weather is always doing something there; always attending strictly to business; always getting up new designs and trying them on people to see how they will go."

So what's left for us to do? Like good New Englanders, when our weather gets up to its old tricks, we continue to grin and bear it (and moan about it to whomever we can).

What do people talk about in places like San Diego where the weather is practically perfect?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Town's inaction a disservice to seniors

It is painfully evident that what is important to the Cohasset seniors of my acquaintance enjoys little respect from town government. Active seniors and the Social Service League appear to have the choice of accepting the indifferent dictates of town government or move ahead without their help and, hopefully, without their opposition.

It is clear both from the evidence of neighboring communities of the South Shore as well as from consecutive Cohasset Town Reports, ad infinitum, and from auditors as of June 30, 2012, that the genuine need of Cohasset seniors for a center has been more than ignored, and it has been treated with disrespect.

It was just a few years ago that seniors reject an override; because whereas town government seemed to view additional taxes on seniors' homes as entitlement revenue, thus requiring no benefit in return, the seniors' mantra was that they were being gratuitously deprived of their morning bagel by additional taxes on their home.

There is much justice in the disappointment seniors have with what town government has done with the 40 percent of town revenue of which seniors are said to be the source. May I quote from very recent town documents?

From the Cohasset Town Report 2011, Fiscal 2012 Operating Budge, page 33, Elder Affairs (this is the only budget item dedicated to seniors and is $184,710 or $24.63 per annum per resident). Senior revenue contributions per resident per annum amount to almost $1,500. This is not a freakish occurrence; it has been going on for years per the Statement of Net Assets, as of June 30, 2011 as issued by Roselli, Clark and Associates – CPAs – on Feb. 27, 2012 to the honorable Board of Selectmen. Depreciable capital assets (net): $70,824,575. How many of those millions are dedicated to the use of seniors except for two or three vans marked CEA? I think "none" is the correct answer. It is a shameful documented tale of neglect; certainly the town common pond did not suffer such an indignity and those funds could have excavated the spot on which the senior center is to be erected.

This dismal record goes back for many years and it would be unfair to hold present town government at fault for much of what has been documented. The fact is however that the efforts of active seniors and of the Social Service League, which has served Cohasset for 100 years, has been ignored, and we must go ahead.

I strongly suggest that an organization meeting takes place as soon as possible at which everyone is invited. The meeting should seek the advice of experienced citizens to advise how we proceed from this point forward with the objective in mind that Cohasset will have its senior center up and running by Oct. 1, 2013, at which we will enjoy our morning bagel nicely topped with cream cheese and grape jelly.

Cat Dam: Emotionalism vs. rationality

Inner Little Harbor (ILH) is a bit unusual in that it is not connected directly to the ocean, but instead connects by a narrow channel crossing Nichols Road to Little Harbor, which does connect with the ocean. Unfortunately ILH is at a slightly higher elevation than Little Harbor and drains almost completely and remains so for some hours at low tide, the resulting mud flats stink terribly under the hot sun in the summer, and had discouraged development as a result.

At one time the channel between ILH and Little Harbor had been blocked so salt marsh hay could be grown and harvested in ILH, but the channel was opened by a storm many years ago and allowed to return to its former odiferous state.

In 1957 developers addressed the problem rationally and installed the current Cat Dam where the channel crosses Nichols Road. It is not really a dam but rather a device to restrict outflow during a receding tide in order to retain some water cover over the mud flats at low tide. Physically, it is multiple side-by-side check valves, which allow unrestricted inflow to ILH, but restricts outflow so as to retain the desired water cover over the mud bottom. The gates (i.e. check valves) are opened fully once a month to allow full flushing of ILH.

For the many years after 1957 it has worked well to ameliorate nature's caprice in setting the elevation of the bottom of ILH high enough to be exposed to the sun for hours at low tides.

Some abutters seem to think that if Cat Dam is abandoned ILH would somehow not return to its former odiferous state. Others quibble about the timing and duration of monthly flushing, which might be improved by some adjustments but has worked quite well (compared to the odiferous state before 1957). One former town official, and some other foolish citizens, have tried to keep state agencies stimulated to interfere but the agencies seem to have tired of our squabbling. Our selectmen, (with one exception), have wisely voted to spend no more money on the issue. Everyone whose property is affected should focus on optimizing the rational and well-proven effectiveness of the E20 approach, and shelve the quibbles.

Work together on Meetinghouse Pond water issue

We have all watched the stand-off between the Cohasset Water Commission and the Board of Selectmen regarding the cost of water for Meetinghouse Pond, which remains shut-off. It is rather obvious that the Water Commission wants to maximize its income.

Further, the town has never had pond water as a budgeted item. In fact, in the past the water for the pond was provided at no cost by the Water Department, since there was no water meter on the pipe that fed the pond. The meter was only added during the pond reconstruction project. So, there are no historic records regarding whether the pond did or did not consume water, or if it did, how much water was used. In the meantime, the fresh water supply remains shut off.

In the commercial world, whenever one part of an organization purchases a commodity from another part of the same organization, that commodity is not purchased at full "retail" price. Instead, a "discounted" or "negotiated" cost is generally used. It would seem that a reasonable compromise, in Cohasset's case, might be to transfer the water from the Water Department to the town at the incremental cost of the water, not full "retail." That is, charge the town only for the direct cost to the Water Department associated with providing this additional water. This cost would cover all of the direct cost of additional chemicals, electricity to pump the water, etc.

Let's get the Water Department and the town working together to get water turned on and the Meetinghouse Pond water circulating again.

Tom Gruber, 100 Pond St.

Senior center funding a concern

I agree the town needs and should provide funds for construction and operation of a senior center.

This fund can come from real estate taxes as was reported by a commentary in this newspaper on Friday, July 22. Set the fund aside until there is enough money to build or borrow.

I endorse the gathering of the Advisory Committee, Selectmen etc., everyone.

We as seniors on a fixed income have nothing left, especially in this lean economy.

Talk it up yes, but working together and working out the numbers must happen. Changes can be done.

What is happening is a disservice to us as seniors but we are the payees that keep the town operating.

We as seniors and everybody in the town of Cohasset are affected. Let us go to work ASAP.

Gerard Reed Jr., 93 Beechwood St.

POLITICALLY SPEAKING

Senate candidates clash on immigration

MATT GREGORY

Prior to June 15, over 800,000 young men and women who had graduated high school, attended college, or served in the American armed forces, but had entered the United States illegally as children, faced the daily threat of deportation. However, on that day, President Obama signed an executive order ending the deportation of the children of illegal immigrants, providing a two-year period of amnesty in order to allow students and soldiers to complete their studies or service while applying for citizenship. While passed into law as an executive order, Obama's immigration decision remains an issue of contention in Congress and directly pertains to the Massachusetts Senate election between incumbent Senator Scott Brown and Dr. Elizabeth Warren. The two candidates' diverging views on the matter will continue to polarize the Massachusetts populace and in particular may dictate the voting patterns of a bloc with which I personally have much familiarity: young voters.

Mr. Obama's issuance of an executive order pertaining to illegal immigration came as a result of the failure of the DREAM Act, which would have granted permanent residence to certain illegal immigrant youth, to pass Congress, where it was blocked in the Senate by a group that included Senator Brown. While the June 15 executive order imposed less extreme measures than those of the DREAM Act, it was still considered a victory by the President and Congressmen on both sides of the aisle for the many young immigrants facing the threat of deportation. Declaring his support for the legislation, President Obama stated that these youth who would be protected, "study in our schools, play in our neighborhoods, befriend our kids, pledge allegiance to our flag...it makes no sense to expel talented young people who are, for all intents and purposes, Americans."

While the impact of the new immigration policy will reverberate throughout the nation, it has special significance for the Senatorial Election in Massachusetts, a state that over 220,000 illegal immigrants call home. Senator Brown and Democratic challenger Warren maintain starkly contrasting views on the issue, with Brown having voted against the DREAM Act and opposing Obama's executive order while Dr. Warren has applauded the President's effort to assist the young populations of Massachusetts and the United States. On her perception of the best means of addressing the issue of illegal immigration, Warren stated: "Many of these young people have gone to school here or served in our military, and they should be able to continue living and working here...Two years ago, Scott Brown denied the dreams of these young people. His vote to kill the DREAM Act cost our communities and our country."

On the other hand, Mr. Brown, a vocal opponent of illegal immigration who states on his website, "America...should not adopt policies that encourage illegal immigration...I oppose amnesty," has echoed the sentiments of his fellow Republicans by first voting against the DREAM Act in 2010 and then openly condemning the President's executive order in June. Speaking directly after Obama's June 15 declaration, Brown stated: "I opposed this policy in legislative form, and I oppose it today as an executive order. While I'd be open to allowing young people who have chosen military service to obtain citizenship...the administration's policy is too broad and would set off a new wave of illegal immigration..." By hinting that he might possibly consider a proposal providing amnesty to illegal immigrants in the military, Brown implies that his opposition mainly stems from a desire to prevent illegal immigrant youth from using a high school or college education as justification to remain in America, i.e. he wishes to reserve higher education for citizens of the United States. While Brown may see his position as protecting America from outsiders, it is a principle that Warren believes is "slamming the door on young immigrants."

As a student currently embroiled in the college application process, I, and likely other students, may have, amidst the sea of standardized tests, essays, and application forms, lost sight of the fact that the opportunity to attend any college is a privilege which, while possibly taken for granted in some places, is unavailable, even inconceivable for millions of young adults around the world. Hundreds of thousands illegally immigrate to America each year, many searching for better opportunities in employment and education; to the Bay State is home to over 220,000 of such migrants. With the passage of President Obama's June 15 executive order, 800,000 of the nationwide population of illegal immigrants were provided a chance to obtain higher education, a privilege reserved for a select few in many less affluent nations. However, should Scott Brown keep his word, upon election, he and many of his fellow Republicans will fight to overturn or pass legislation opposing Mr. Obama's order. While my peers and I may complain about the workload and plethora of assignments relating to the college application process, we must also consider the hundreds of thousands of young men and women whose parents braved inconceivable obstacles to provide their children with this same opportunity, and acknowledge that all they and Mr. Obama have fought for could be lost in the November election.

FOR THE RECORD

Blog Community page needs you

You may recall a request for community bloggers in this space last October as we were preparing to add that content to our websites at the start of 2012.

While we had many people respond, technical difficulties caused a delay and as time went by, those who expressed interest either lost interest or understandably became impatient and moved on to bigger and better things.

We were finally able to overcome our technical challenges by the end of March and brought a few bloggers into the fold to help anchor our Blog Community page on the Wicked Local website.

The Blog Community page may be the best-kept secret on our website. It's not all that easy to find off the homepage, but if you look in the top navigation you'll see "Blogs" near the right side of the page. We've done a better job promoting the blogs recently, but it appears our web audience is missing out of some informative and entertaining blogs from folks who have experience, passion and interest in a variety of topics.

Here's what you've been missing...

Cohasset High School student Matt Gregory, who is entering his senior year, has been writing a blog over the summer titled "The Wider World," a news blog focusing on international political events and current global crises. Gregory will be the editor of the high school newspaper, the Spinnaker, this year, but has been able to discuss international news and politics on his Wicked Local blog.

HEDLUND REPORT

An end to 'X-registration'

SEN. BOB HEDLUND

Often I am discouraged by the inaction on Beacon Hill when it comes to illegal immigration reform. For far too long a vast majority of them have been turning a blind eye as illegal immigrants register vehicles, operate on our roadways, receive taxpayer funded benefits and even receive preference over legal U.S. citizens for public housing.

However, during this year's budget debate the Massachusetts House of Representatives and Senate took a giant step forward by voting to include legislation that will close a loophole often used by those in our state illegally. For seven years I have pushed for reform of our motor vehicle registration laws.

Some illegal immigrants have been able to register and operate vehicles because the Registry of Motor Vehicles only requires applicants to include their name, address, proof of insurance and date of birth on the registration application to secure a so-called "X" registration. It is referred to as an "X-Registration" because the Registry of Motor Vehicles places an X before the registration number when an applicant does not produce a driver's license at the time a vehicle is being registered.

The policy of the Registry of Motor Vehicles effectively enabled unlicensed drivers and illegal immigrants to operate on the Commonwealth's roadways.

In 2005, I was alerted to the problem of "X-Registration" by local law enforcement officials who were routinely pulling over operators who had no license and an "X-Registration." Since that time, I have proposed state level immigration reform efforts that would make our roadways safer and make sure those who are here illegally do not receive benefits or preference over legal U.S. citizens.

The legislation that was agreed upon by both branches and sent to the Governor in the Fiscal 2013 budget requires any person that registers a vehicle in Massachusetts hold a license, Social Security number or other proof of legal U.S. residence. After reviewing the budget for 10 days, the Governor decided to amend this legislation removing the word "legal" and requiring only proof of Massachusetts residence to register a vehicle. This would allow an individual to register a vehicle using a cell phone bill, credit card bill, cable bill or even just a cancelled check.

On July 12, both branches of the Legislature again took a giant step forward toward real immigration reform by rejecting the Governor's changes on "X-Registration" effectively ending the practice retroactively to July 1, 2012.

I truly believe this was one of the most practical yet simple initiatives we have passed in recent years in Beacon Hill. This legislation strikes at the heart of the support structure that, among other privileges, has allowed illegal immigrants to register and operate motor vehicles all while avoiding prosecution for immigration violations.

There is a lot of work still to be done in order to achieve the immigration reforms the people of the Commonwealth deserve. Illegal immigrants are still being placed higher than legal U.S. citizens on the public housing list, receiving taxpayer funded benefits and allowed to stay even after breaking the law. While lawmakers in Washington, D.C., continue to fail the American people on comprehensive federal immigration reform, I will continue to lead efforts for state level immigration reform to make sure our roadways are safe, our streets are safe and those here legally who are in need of assistance are not playing second fiddle to someone who is here illegally.

Senior Center home-rule petition passed

GARRETT BRADLEY

Following passage of the Fiscal Year 2013 State Budget, the Legislature recently wrapped up work on the 187th formal session, approving a number of major bills dealing with topics including health care costs, economic development, consumer rights, and crime prevention. I will give you an overview of these and other issues affecting the district and the Commonwealth.

As always, I am available to meet with you in my State House office or in my district office by appointment or by phone or email. I also have monthly senior office hours that are covered by staff. I remain committed to serving you as your State Representative and welcome your feedback.

Right to Repair Legislation Passes — Thanks to the efforts of so many people, an agreement was reached among the stakeholder organizations to support a compromise Right to Repair bill, which was approved unanimously by the House and Senate and sent to the Governor's desk. The bill preserves choice for Massachusetts vehicle owners, protects manufacturers' intellectual property, preserves the integrity of the role of the dealer in the repair process, and continues innovation in motor vehicle diagnostics. It also protects small independent repair businesses and community dealers. The deadline for removing the Nov. 6th ballot question has already passed, however, all parties have agreed in writing to actively oppose Question 1.

Health Care Cost Containment — Recognizing the need to address escalating health care costs, the Legislature sent to the Governor's desk critical health care payment reform legislation. This bill is estimated to save $200 billion in health care costs statewide over the next 15 years by implementation of a new coordinated care model. It will empower consumers by providing comprehensive price and quality information via an online site to assist them in making health care related decisions.

Economic Development Bill — Designed to strategically focus economic development policies to make Massachusetts more competitive. The bill seeks to improve the Commonwealth's innovation economy, promote economic prosperity through infrastructure investments and streamlines permitting, facilitating the expansion of new and existing businesses. It also delivers tax relief to encourage start up businesses and creates the MassWorks Infrastructure Program, which will serve as a one-stop-shop for infrastructure funding, thus simplifying the process for municipalities and enabling the state to allocate the funds in an efficient manner. The bill suspends the 6.25 percent sales tax on most purchases made on the weekend of August 11th and 12th, a popular initiative enjoyed by shoppers for the last several years.

Local Bill Approved for Cohasset— Several home rule petitions were approved by the Legislature during the past session that affect local towns:

• On the last day of the formal session, a home-rule petition was approved allowing the new Cohasset Senior Center to be constructed on land off Sohier and North Main streets. Local officials provided valuable information and took action to respond when technical questions were asked about the land transfer. This legislation literally clears a path for a new senior center to be built, while preserving the ballfields enjoyed by so many local residents.

• Water Ratepayers Protection / Energy Bill - I am pleased that protection for water ratepayers and municipalities was included in the comprehensive energy cost containment legislation which was recently sent to the Governor's desk. This provision provides for intervention by the MA Attorney General on behalf of consumers when water companies file for rate increases and it mirrors a bill which Sen. Hedlund and I originally filed in June in response to the Aquarion Water Company's exorbitant rate hike proposal. This should result in a potential cost savings for private water customers and the municipalities as well. The bill also addresses competition among utility companies and the high cost of electricity which impacts consumers and impedes the growth of business in the Commonwealth.

Foreclosure Prevention Bill — New, first-in-the-nation legislation passed by the House and Senate, will give residents of the Commonwealth a leg-up in the fight against unnecessary and unlawful mortgage foreclosure. In order to avoid foreclosure, the bill requires banks to offer loan modifications to borrowers, including potential reduced interest rates or principal or an extension of the loan repayment period. Loan modification would be available for owner-occupied homes and apply to loans that are considered risky such as mortgages with teaser rates, loans made with no income verification and interest-only loans. By eliminating the biggest barrier to the Commonwealth's financial recovery, this foreclosure prevention legislation will give homeowners an opportunity to remain in their homes and get back on their feet financially.

SCITUATE JUNIOR REGATTA

25 years on the water

Founder Jim Logue looks back on the race

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Close to 100 small boats weave in and out of each other, narrowly avoiding a collision. They go back and forth, side to side, along an invisible line waiting for something to happen.

Then, a gun goes off. The crew yanks the sails into place, they fill with wind and the boats are on their way.

This is the moment Scituate Junior Regatta founder Jim Logue loves the most.

"At the start of that first race on that first day, that's when you know what you got," Logue said. Each year, he looks forward to heading up the race committee boat on the 420 line just outside the Scituate Harbor. Overseeing dozens of boats, full of young sailors, is something he has enjoyed bringing back again and again to Scituate.

Twenty-five years ago Logue, with help of friends and family, started the Scituate Junior Regatta. This past Monday and Tuesday, the 25th Scituate Junior Regatta was held in Scituate Harbor.

The first year was small – 16 boats – but it was the start of something. Or, in actuality, it was the return of something that had gone missing from Scituate Harbor.

Logue grew up on Scituate Harbor when he and his friends developed themselves into competitive sailors in the 1960s. The club's sailing program flourished and co-hosted the South Shore Junior Regatta with Hingham and Cohasset's sailing programs.

But, once these young sailors went off to college where many of them competed at the collegiate level and on to start their lives, the presence of a junior sailing program faded.

When Logue returned to the club in the early 1980s with a family of his own, he found that kids weren't sailing. They were playing tennis and swimming competitively. When he asked why, he received this answer: "kids don't like to sail anymore."

He didn't believe it, and neither did his peers who remembered the 60s when the program was one of the best in the region.

"We wanted a racing program and we were going down that road but we were having trouble selling it," Logue said. It took an outside influence to change the tide on youth sailing in Scituate Harbor.

In the winter of 1988, the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club was asked to host a film crew for the making of "Jenny's Song," a made-for-TV movie. The filming took place in early June of that year. The production provided eight new O'Day 16-foot sloops and the club's young sailors were asked to be the skippers and crews for the movie. There were cameras all over the club and a helicopter filmed many of the sailing scenes.

"The filming went on for a week and the excitement with the children and parents carried into the summer," Logue said.

Taking advantage of the renewed interest in sailing, Logue and other members of the club decided to invite Plymouth Yacht Club to come race later that summer. The club showed up with eight turnabouts. The junior sailors competed over two days, culminating in a barbecue and pool party.

This was the beginning of the Scituate Junior Regatta.

"The regatta gave us a platform to build a sailing program," Logue said.

In the early years, there weren't T-shirts or much fanfare, but everyone – parents and kids – had a good time.

"We made sandwiches, that was all," said Jane Logue, who has overseen the land portion of the regatta since its inception. That first year she and few other volunteers took the registration money, went to Angelo's (the then supermarket) and bought a pound each of ham, turkey, roast beef and cheese and some rolls.

"It took us a few years to get T-shirts," Jane said with a smile.

From 1989 to 1992 the regatta would grow to more than 100 participants and Hingham Yacht Club began bringing their best sailors. There were starting lines for Club 420s, Lasers, and Optimists.

They introduced a reception for parents as a way to get families to want to come back to the regatta year after year. The yacht clubs were then coming from all over the South Shore.

In 1994, the Scituate Junior Regatta hit its stride. The club hosted the Mass Bay Junior Olympics – a three-day event with 240 participants. Sailing programs from the North Shore brought 70 boats.

Later that year the yacht club was awarded the Leonard Fowell, Jr. award for the top yacht club in Mass Bay. A few months later, the club was asked to host the 1995 Optimist New Englands.

In July 1995, the yacht club hosted more than 200 optimists (single handed boats) over three days from all across America.

"At the time it was the largest one design fleet ever represented," Logue said.

The winner of the 1995 regatta was Zach Railey from St. Petersburg, Florida. And – to serve as inspiration to the young sailors in Scituate – Railey went on to win a silver medal for sailing in the Beijing Olympics and is on the Olympic team with his sister, Paige, currently competing in London.

"We had a lot of good sailors come race here," Logue said.

In recognition of hosting one of the top races, US Sailing awarded Scituate Harbor Yacht Club the top One Design Yacht Club in the US.

The roll continued in 1996 when the club hosted the Club 420 North Americans. Sailors from the Great Lakes, Annapolis and Florida showed up to race.

"People will travel the distance to sail here," Logue said.

The last major national level event hosted by the yacht club was in 2001 when the Ida Lewis Trophy – the US Sailing Junior Women's Double Handed Championship – was held in Scituate. There were 92 sailors involved, 25 from California, nine from Texas, eight from the Great Lakes and eight from Florida. Twelve Scituate sailors competed. The community hosted more than 80 people during the course of the event.

It was the largest US Junior Women's Nationals ever held, Logue said.

"We went from nothing to winning top yacht club in the US in just a few years," Logue said.

Each year, the Scituate Junior Regatta has been a great success thanks to many people's efforts.

"The volunteerism here is incredible," Jane said. Club members pitch in on inspecting boats, manning chase boats and making sandwiches.

This year is special for the Logues, not only because it was the 25th year of the race but also because it's the first year they had a granddaughter racing. "Now the next generation is taking part," Logue said.

After hosting national competitions, there isn't much more the club can do.

"I don't have any more goals outside of maintaining what we have," Logue said. "If you have 200 kids and they're all having a good time, you've done a good job."

"The building of (this race) was a lot of fun," Logue said.

July 30 - Aug. 3, 2012

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on seven roll calls and local senators on six roll calls from the week of July 30-August 3.

REQUIRE PROOF OF LEGAL RESIDENCE TO REGISTER AUTO (H 4238)

House 135-19, Senate 24-10, overrode Gov. Patrick's veto of a bill that would require applicants to provide proof of legal residence in order to register their cars.

Supporters of the bill said it would prevent illegal immigrants from registering their cars. They noted this loophole has allowed unlicensed drivers to legally register their cars and then drive illegally without a license.

In his veto message, Gov. Patrick said allowing an illegal alien to own a vehicle in Massachusetts does not jeopardize the public's safety. He argued the bill seems aimed at using the Registry of Motor Vehicles to identify and police undocumented people.

$10 MILLION FOR PROBATION DEPARTMENT (H 4200)

House 149-0, Senate 34-1, overrode Gov. Patrick's $10 million reduction (from $123.4 million to $113.4 million) in funding for the state's probation department.

Supporters of preserving the $10 million said the cut would result in the loss of 250 to 300 jobs They argued the loss would have a devastating effect on the probation system which is a useful, money-saving alternative to the expensive prison system.

In his veto message, the governor said he reduced the funding to the amount he feels is "necessary to meet agency responsibilities and caseloads."

(A "Yes" vote is for keeping the $10 million by overriding the governor's reduction. A "No" vote is against it.)

$3.5 MILLION FOR EDUCATION RESERVE (H 4200)

House 153-0, Senate 36-0, overrode Gov. Patrick's veto of the entire $3.5 million in funding for a reserve account for education aid for cities and towns. This so-called "pothole account" provides funds to communities that meet certain criteria including cities and towns with extraordinary enrollment growth and those with behavioral treatment residential student placements.

Supporters of the $3.5 million said it would fund grants for communities that are experiencing financial hardships. They argued these grants are an important safety net for cities and towns across the state and assist communities that are struggling with their education budgets.

In his veto message, Patrick said "the funding is not necessary given other related investments in fiscal year 2013."

(A "Yes" vote is for keeping the $3.5 million by overriding the governor's veto.)

CHANGES IN HEALTH CARE SYSTEM (S 2400)

House 132-20, Senate 38-0, approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a bill making changes in the state's health care system. A key provision establishes a statewide health care cost growth goal for the health care industry tied to the growth in the economy.

Other provisions require the state's Medicaid program and the state's employee health care program to transition to new health care payment models; implements new technology for expansion and maintenance of the electronic medical records system so all patients' medical records are accessible by all providers; provides $60 million to a newly created Prevention and Wellness Trust Fund to invest in community-based disease prevention, public health and wellness programs; and $135 million to community hospitals.

Supporters said this landmark bill would save the state $200 billion over the next 15 years while also saving billions of dollars for consumers and small businesses. They noted it would improve the quality of care and increase the transparency and accountability of the state's entire health care system.

Opponents said the bill includes good reforms but has many provisions which are a concern. They questioned the projected cost savings of the bill and the bureaucracy that it establishes.

$1.4 BILLION TRANSPORTATION BOND PACKAGE (H 4871)

House 151-2, Senate 36-0, approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a $1.4 billion transportation bond bill that includes the borrowing of millions of dollars for state highway, bridge, rail and other projects. It also includes dozens of local projects costing hundreds of millions of dollars sponsored by legislators to fund projects in their districts. The projects are actually more a "wish list": The Patrick administration is required to adhere to the state's annual bond borrowing cap and ultimately decides which projects are affordable and get funded.

Supporters said the package will ensure the state's roads and bridges are improved and safe. They noted the measure would also leverage hundreds of millions of dollars in federal funds for roads and bridges.

One opponent said he objected to a provision that would allow part of the M. Joseph Manning Park in Milton to be turned into a parking lot.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT BILL (H 4352)

House 153-1, Senate 36-0, approved and sent to the governor an economic development and jobs bill.

Provisions include a sales tax holiday that will allow consumers to buy most products under $2,500 without paying the state's 6.25 percent sales tax on Saturday, August 11, and Sunday, August 12; a tax credit equal to the current $456 minimum corporate excise tax for all corporations for their first three tax years; a two-year extension of existing state and local permits held by developers who had been unable to proceed with their projects because of tight credit markets; creation of an Innovation Investment Fund that offers matching grants to universities and research institutions for research and development projects ; and creation of a MassWorks Infrastructure Program, which will serve as a one-stop shop for infrastructure funding.

Supporters said the bill would foster job creation and make Massachusetts more competitive and business friendly.

The lone opponent offered no arguments.

PATRICK'S AMENDMENT TO HABITUAL VIOLENT OFFENDER LEGISLATION (H 3818)

House 23-132, Senate on a voice vote without a roll call, rejected Gov. Patrick's proposed amendment to a bill that denies parole eligibility for third-time violent felons for certain crimes such as rape and murder. The measure is dubbed "Melissa's Bill" for Melissa Gosule who was raped and murdered in 1999 by a repeat offender with 27 prior convictions. Patrick's amendment would give judges in the "interest of justice and upon a finding on the record of substantial and compelling reasons" the option to allow parole eligibility for these habitual offenders after serving two-thirds of the maximum sentence, or after 25 years in the case of a life sentence. The judge's decision could be appealed by the prosecutor.

In his letter to the Legislature, the governor said the law should include limited judicial discretion to ensure that this expansion of mandatory sentencing does not have unjust consequences. He argued, "The sentencing judge, who has observed all the witnesses and the defendant, heard all the evidence, and considered and ruled upon all the arguments throughout the course of the trial, is in the best position to appreciate all the facts.

Opponents of the governor's amendment said it would essentially gut the provision of the bill that is designed to keep the "worst of the worst" repeat violent off the streets in order to keep the public safe. They argued there should be no judicial discretion for these violent offenders who repeatedly prey on vulnerable people.

(A "Yes" vote is for Gov. Patrick's amendment. A "No" vote is against it.)

LIVING WELL

Vaccines are worth a shot

JOAN F. WRIGHT

The value of vaccines is limitless, with vaccine-preventable disease levels at or near record lows.

At my yearly physical, my doctor recommended I update my tetanus vaccine. My previous tetanus shots had been connected with mishaps that resulted in trips to the emergency room so I was happy to be pro-active this time around! In actuality, the vaccine is the Tdap booster, which also protects against pertussis – whooping cough. Best known as a child's disease that had been greatly minimized through the vaccine, it has recently resurged across parts of the country.

Whooping cough affects adults as well as children and if contracted by people over age 65, can often result in hospitalizations. So, it's important for everyone to be current with their Tdap booster. Most importantly, women who are planning to get pregnant and adults who may be in contact with babies under 12 months should be up-to-date with the booster in order to help protect the baby.

The value of vaccines is limitless, with vaccine-preventable disease levels at or near record lows. But surprisingly, many people still remain under-immunized, leaving themselves vulnerable to diseases such as hepatitis B, seasonal influenza, and pneumococcal disease. Some may think that recommended immunizations are reserved just for children, college bound teenagers and the required regimen for third-world travelers. But people of all ages should take note of the importance of keeping current with immunizations, in particular, people with chronic health conditions.

We're all most familiar with children's immunizations; the schedule running from birth to age 18 covering everything from measles, mumps, rubella, diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis to hepatitis A and B. In recent years, new vaccines have emerged to respond to new viruses including the HPV vaccine, which can be given as early as 9 years old, and the meningococcal conjugate vaccine recommended for incoming college freshmen, particularly those living in the dorm. (A complete listing of recommended immunizations can be found on the Center for Disease Control's website at www.cdc.gov/vaccines.)

Vaccines are now available to protect us from chickenpox and the shingles. According to the CDC, almost one out of every three people in the United States will develop shingles, with about half of the cases occurring after the age of 60. Shingles occurs in people who have had chickenpox, the virus remaining dormant for years until it is reactivated as shingles. Adults should discuss this vaccine with their healthcare provider.

As we approach the fall, we begin to prepare for the seasonal influenza season, which can be protected against with the flu vaccine. Everyone should consider this particular immunization and older adults and those with compromised health systems should also ensure that their pneumococcal immunization is up to date as well. Information on immunizations for adults is also available on the CDC's vaccine website.

Be sure to discuss your need for immunizations and boosters with your physician or healthcare provider. A little pinch in the arm can go a long way towards a healthier life!

Cohasset Food Pantry needs donations

Cohasset Food Pantry is a 501 (c) (3) nonprofit, volunteer organization, located in the rear of Saint Anthony's Rectory at 129 South Main St. The pantry operates on charitable donations from Cohasset churches, private citizens, business and community organizations.

The Food Pantry may be reached by calling 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Leave a message and calls will be returned. The mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. It is open every Tuesday morning. Clients may come from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Donations may be left at the pantry before 9 a.m., on Tuesdays, or by contacting the Food Pantry. Donations may also be left at any Cohasset church on Sunday mornings. There are several Cohasset donation boxes located throughout the town, including St. Anthony Parish Hall, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Cohasset Police Station, Shaw's and Stop & Shop Supermarkets.

Cohasset Food Pantry provides food and other necessities to any Cohasset resident who demonstrates a need. New clients may call the pantry to arrange a meeting with one of the directors and complete the required paper work. Each client must provide two forms of identification such as a current Massachusetts driver's license, and one other legal document, showing proof of residence.

The pantry currently is in need of the following items: Coffee, tea, fruit juice, canned fruit-no sugar added, pancake mix, maple syrup, school-size snacks, cereal, corned beef hash, beef stew, chicken/vegetable/beef broth, strawberry/raspberry jam, diced tomatoes, ketchup/ mayonnaise/relish, laundry/dish detergents, car soap and cleaning products. The wish list also includes fresh fruit and vegetables such as carrots, celery, green beans, lettuce, tomatoes, spinach, potatoes-white/sweet, oranges, apples, or any fruit in season.

Cohasset Food Pantry appreciates the continued support of family, friends and neighbors in the Cohasset community.

Cohasset Historical Society celebrates maritime history

The Cohasset Historical Society is celebrating Cohasset maritime history throughout the month of September. Save the date for Opening night on Saturday, Sept. 8.

Opening night will highlight a unique exhibit featuring relics of the many ships that were storm driven on the reefs off the Cohasset shores as well as artifacts from Cohasset's rich seafaring history.

Most wrecks occurred in the 19th century, when the shipping channel into Boston Harbor was narrow and passed close to many ledges. Ships were predominately powered by sail and at the mercy of the wind, which frequently blew them onto the rocks.

A cocktail party at the Society will celebrate Cohasset's worldwide shipping trade and current fishing and lobster industries.

Wolf Pack clinic

The South Shore Wolf Pack AAU basketball program is putting on a basketball clinic during the week of Aug. 13-16. The camp will be held at The University Fieldhouse (formerly the South Shore Fieldhouse) on 340 Oak St., in Pembroke.

There are many options for both boys and girls to enjoy themselves and learn a lot about the game of basketball from the areas top coaches.

Camp options: Monday Aug. 13-Thursday, Aug. 16: Full day session: 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.; the morning sessions (9 a.m. to 11:30 p.m.); and the afternoon session (12:30 p.m. to 3 p.m.).

Contact Mike Marre for more information, including costs, or to schedule time. There is also a registration form at http://www.southshorewolfpack.com/page/show/515518-south-shore-wolf-pack-aau-camps. Marre can be reached at either MMARRE@southshorewolfpack.com or 781-635-5828. Current Wolf Pack spring 2012 players save 10 percent.

Each camper will get the best coaching while having a fun time during our week of camp. Coaches include: Jason Brown, Duxbury High School assistant boys' varsity and director of South Shore Wolfpack; Mike Marre, Weymouth High School assistant boys varsity; Brian Grossman, current player at Wheaton College; and Dan Bailey, who has more than 30 years of coaching experience.

There are also individual and group instruction lessons, and the coaches available for private lessons are: Marre, Jason Brown (boys' varsity assistant basketball coach at Duxbury High School, and Jim Wardwell, the girls' varsity assistant basketball coach at Cardinal Spellman High School.

Cohasset 12A Baseball finishes outstanding run

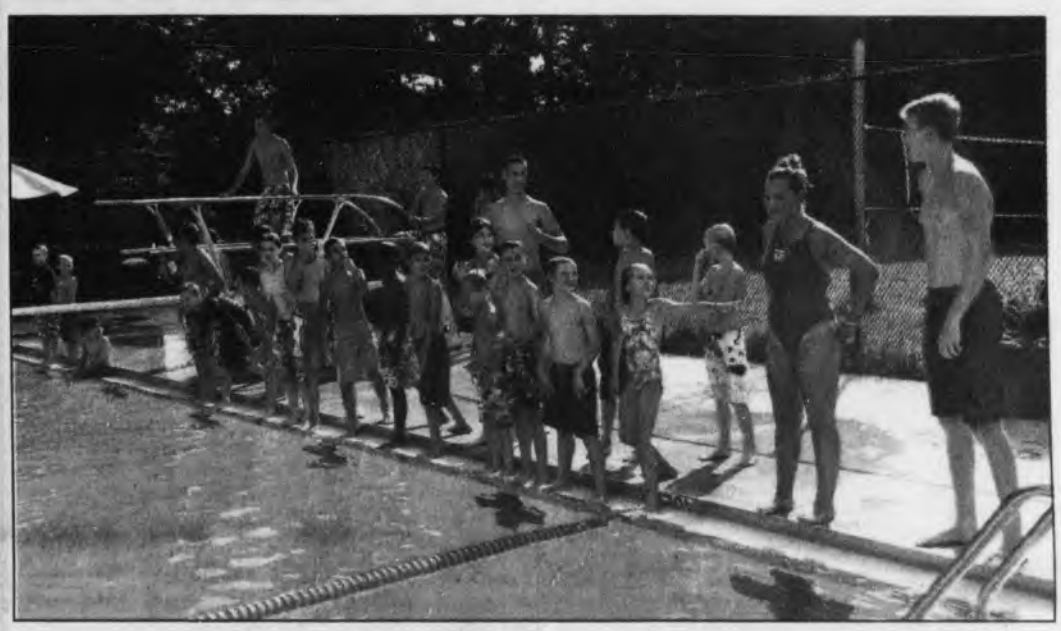
By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

It has been a long, but fun spring and summer for the Cohasset 12A Little League baseball team.

The team, featuring most of the same players who played on Cohasset's Williamsport Tournament team, made it to the finals of the prestigious Sandwich Tournament, and were one of the final six teams in the 28-team Summer Youth Baseball League Championship Tournament.

In that tournament, Cohasset beat Weymouth and Medfield before losing to Canton 9-8 in extra innings in the final six.

All three games went into extra innings.



Before coaching the 12A Summer team, coach Ken Greer coached the Williamsport Tournament team that

Media circus always an interesting sideshow

This is a time of year that I love, and dread all at the same time.

I love the fact that in August the weather is still warm to hot, and no matter how frustrating or even infuriating they are, the Red Sox are still on the radar, and the Patriots are in training camp, where you can get a look at the team up close for the cost of the gas to Foxboro, at least until the preseason games start (last night against the Saints).

Yes, if it weren't for the new second wild card, they would be a non-factor in the playoff race, and in my guess, probably still are non-factors, but they still make good reading material.

Fire the manager. Don't fire the manager. Gut the team and their overpaid underachievers. Bring in young players who have some fire and desire. Don't gut it, let the stars show what they can do.

As you can see from what I just wrote, there is plenty to entertain fans just in the newspaper coverage and of course, talk radio.

Even little things around here stir up controversy.

AMERICAN LEGION BASEBALL

Legion Post 118 built for the future

Only three players set to graduate from Legion play

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The feeling is that the foundation has been built for both now and the future for the Cohasset/Scituate American Legion baseball team.

Post 118 in 2011 made its way to the State's final eight. In 2012, after a tough middle stretch of the season fought its way to the fifth and final playoff spot in Zone 6 East on the final day of the regular season. Cohasset fell to Zone 6 West champion Norwood 9-7 in the third and final game of their best of three series as Post 70 scored two runs in the sixth inning to break a 7-7 tie and held on for the win. The game looked like it could turn into a blowout as Cohasset/Scituate was down 7-2, but came back and tied the game.

Tim Kensinger helped lead the comeback as he had three hits and scored three runs in the game.

"No matter what, the end result was where we were going to finish," said Cohasset general manager Scott Arnold. "We played as a team throughout the season, but we had to platoon at a lot of positions because we were short some players at times because of work."

The good news for Cohasset is that the team that Arnold has watched grow up will only graduate three players, Cooper Davis, Jordan Jenkins and David Podurgiel.

They will have a number of players coming back espeically on the mound with Chase Michaud, Jamie Faber, Connor Gibbons and Chris Smith. Faber had a complete-game one-hitter against Norwood for Post 118's only win in the playoff series and he had come in relief and gave the team six solid innings in their come from behind, 9-3 win over Stoughton in the final regular

These hackers are crazy to play golf

PAUL HARBER

The difference between golf and other not-so-trivial pursuits is golf can drive a normal, sane individual into a raving, absolutely bizarro cuckoo.

If you played golf over the years, you have bumped into a few of these characters.

In fact, the fellow who introduced me to the game was a raving maniac when he walked on to the links.

His name was Brent, and he was an excellent golfer.

We worked the lobster shift at a newspaper, and during the baseball strike, we had little to do.

So we started putting around the office at 3 a.m.

The next thing I knew he gave me a pair of his golf shoes and an old bag of clubs. When we got out of work at 6 o'clock in the morning, we headed to Presidents Golf Course in Quincy and teed it up.

He had a little, dirty secret that he let me in on one day.

He had given up the game for about 10 years.

Brent lived in East Boston and played golf at Colonial Country Club in Lynnfield. He was so disgusted with his game one Saturday. He brooded about it all the way home and he brooded about it while watching the Red Sox on TV that afternoon.

Finally, when the game ended, he came to a decision.

He took his clubs out of his closet, threw them in the trunk of his Volvo and headed back to Lynnfield. He marched out to a pond that gave him fits that morning, and in the summer twilight, he fired all his clubs, one by one, deep into the pond.

Then he tossed his bag into a watery grave as well

He got back in his car, drove home, and never touched a club for five years.

But he is playing again.

Soon after, I met Rusty, who was a police officer in a South Shore community we won't mention to save his anonymity.

He loved the game, and I would have loved playing poker with him because he never could hide his emotions, especially on the golf course. He screamed when he made a good shot, and he screamed when he made a bad shot.

We were in a foursome at Brookmeadow Golf Course in Canton one morning. We drove there together, along with another of our companions, Big Al.

Well Rusty started out with a quadruple bogey-8 on the first hole and then everything went downhill from there.

Big Al and I did not know what to do. Laugh? No way. Actually, we feared for his sanity.

Finally we reached a par-3 and Rusty hit the ball deep into the woods. The ball sliced quickly and fiercely, rattling around trees.

"That's it," said Rusty. "I'm going in."

Big Al and I looked at each other.

"Is he going to wait three hours until we're finished?"

He couldn't drive home. We all came in Big Al's truck.

At the turn from the front to back nine, we looked for Rusty at the 19th hole.

He was nowhere to be found.

When we finished, he wasn't around, either.

That night we called Rusty.

Sheepishly, he told us what happened.

He went to the pro shop and got a cleat remover. He took all the cleats out of his golf shoes and walked all the way to Brockton where we left our cars.

It wasn't long after that he stopped playing golf.

He quit the police force, too, and became an attorney.

If you play enough golf, you see just about everything.

I've seen some championship club throwers.

On the 10th tee at Pembroke Country Club, I saw one golfer throw his club.

It got stuck in his hand and went in a direction he didn't intend it to go. He just missed a player in our foursome and if it hit him, it would have been tragic.

That was the last time the golfer ever threw a club.

And there is my good friend Kip. He used to throw clubs, too.

He'd aim them at trees and then one day after an errant shot, he tossed his wedge high into the branches.

Problem is, the club did not come down from the tree.

He spent a good part of an hour trying to extricate his wedge.

Kip doesn't throw clubs at trees anymore, either.

The world takes all kinds. Diversity of sorts, I guess.

And you will find most of them on a golf course.

ACES, ETC.

Khang tees off in US Amateur

Rockland 14-year-old isn't youngest in field

Megan Khang of Rockland is in Ohio this week.

The 14-year-old sophomore to be at Rockland High School is playing in the U.S. Women's Amateur Championship at The Country Club.

Yeah, we know. The Country Club is in Brookline. It was organized in 1880s.

Not long after a robber baron from Cleveland visited Boston and enjoyed his time at The Country Club so much that when he got home in Ohio, he started his own club and stole the moniker: The Country Club.

One historic note: Back then golfers used gutta percha balls that didn't go very far, didn't last long, and were inconsistent.

A couple of members at the club did some brainstorming and developed the solid rubber core ball, much like you use today. It revolutionized the game. It made most courses of the day obsolete.

One of those innovators was B.F. Goodrich, yes, the tire guy.

As for Khang, she teed it up Monday in the match-play qualifier at 1:40 p.m., off the back nine. She is paired with Sierra Sims of Austin, Texas, and Su-Hyuh Oh of Australia.

While she is just young teen-ager, Khang is far from the youngest competitor in the field.

That honor goes to Latanna Stone of Valrico, Fla.

She's 10. That's no typo.

She is a home-schooled sixth grader. Stone shot a 2-under 70 for a one-stroke victory at the Wanderers (Fla.) Club. She is a two-time Florida Junior Tour winner. Stone has been playing since she was 2 and her father, a 12-handicapper, has her practice only one hour a day. Doesn't want her to burnout.

Sounds like the next Tiger Woods.

A good day at MGA Links

If you were at the MGA Links at Mamantapett in Norton last week, you saw something special. Some 40 students and staff from the Carroll Center for the Blind were enjoying a morning full of golf activities.

For the sixth consecutive year, students from the Center had an opportunity to use the practice facilities and clubhouse at MGA Links and for many it was their first experience being on a golf course.

"This event is always fun," said Joe McCabe, executive director of The First Tee of Massachusetts who runs all of the MGA's junior golf programs. "The students have such great personalities and they have such wonderful attitudes that they are really a joy to work with."

In addition to taking part in activities that included putting and hitting full swing shots, the students and staff enjoyed lunch in the new clubhouse at MGA Links.

Special thanks go out to Braintree Municipal Golf Course pro Bob Beach, Boston College golf coach Drew Kayser as well as Lettie Trespasz, Fred Corcoran, John Morrell, and Martha Fish for their efforts in working with the students to make the day a success.

"Seeing the smiles on the faces of these students in trying golf really puts things in perspective for us," said Pete Walsh, head golf professional at MGA Links. "If they can persevere through their disabilities and have this much fun, then we all should really be able to enjoy our time on the golf course."

South fares well in WGAM

Seventeen golfers from the region played in last week's Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts' State Championship at Brae Burn CC in Newton.

While Claire Sheldon of The Country Club won the title, the Southland did quite well.

Tara Joy Connelly of Cohasset, the 2003 champion, advanced to the semifinals before she was eliminated.

Connelly went down in sudden death, losing her match to Tracy Martin on the 19th hole.

In the finals of the President's Cup, a consolation tournament for golfers not advancing to match play in the Championship flight, two women with ties to the region squared off.

Dedham native Marion Maney, a former US Women's Mid-Amateur champion, beat Pam Kiley of Braintree GC in the finals, 5 and 4. During the entire match play phase of the tournament, Maney never had to play the 18th hole. One match lasted to the 17th hole and every other match ended on the 14th green.

Six local women advanced to the match play phase of the Championship flight.

Besides Connelly, Maureen Cawley of South Shore CC, Angel MacLeod of Norton CC, Lauren B. Flynn of Wollaston GC, Alison Eleey of Granite Links, and Mary Mulcahy of Hatherly earned berths in the championship flight.

Other local competitors in the tournament included Leslie Logan of TPC Boston, Marilynn Carson of Presidents GC, Lynne O'Neill of Hatherly, Kristen Stevens of Black Rock, Diane Nessrella of LeBaron Hill, Emily Hess and Emily Gordon of Blue Hill, Kaelyn Hillard and Debra Chassey of Olde Scotland and Gail Regan of Granite Links.

Mulcahy, who along with her father, John, won their third Father & Daughter Championship a week earlier, won her first-round match, beating Hannah Ghelfi, 5 and 4. But in the next round she faced Connelly and was ousted, 5 and 4.

Cawley ran into a buzz saw in her first match.

She faced Sheldon, who fashioned a 74 in the stroke play qualifier and stayed hot in match play. Cawley was 1-over par after three holes and lost all three holes.

Sheldon beat Cawley, 5 and 4.

Eleey won her first match, beating Cindy Fentross 4 and 3. But in the second match she played Sheldon, who rolled to a 6 and 5 victory.

In a first round battle of locals, Flynn upended MacLeod, 2 and 1. But in the next round Katie Martin, eliminated her, 5 and 4. Martin was medalist in the stroke play portion of the championship.

While Sheldon is the state match play champion, next week at Marshfield Country Club, the WGAM will hold its stroke play championship. It's called the Keyes Cup

Both Sheldon and Connelly are two-time Keyes Champions, but you might want to give the edge to Connelly because she learned to play golf at Marshfield and was the club champion there for many years.

Who was Keyes? Grace Keyes was a charter member of The Women's Golf Association of Boston and a member of Concord Country Club. She served as President from 1902-1907. In 1950, she presented a trophy to the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts for an annual competition in a Stroke Play Championship. The first tournament was held in 1950 at Charles River Country Club, as a 54-hole event. In 1958 the competition was shortened to a 36-hole stroke play event.

season game that got the team into the playoffs.

"We built this team around our pitching," said Arnold. "We felt we did not have enough pitching last year when we went to the Final Eight."

They were also to put together a junior legion team that produced some players for the roster during the season.

Arnold points out that Shane Haggerty, who had a shoulder injury and missed the season and Connor Goetz, who played AAU baseball are both eligible to come back and play. The two players were also part of Cohasset's run to the State's Final Eight in 2011 The list of potential returnees includes Jamie Timothy, Richie Roach, Chris Murphy, Jake Brady, Brendan O'Connell, Tim Cavanaro, Terrence Doonan, Mickey Barry and Chris Lockar.

The pitching and solid lineup enabled Post 118 to overcome a tough middle stretch after their good start.

They were able to defeat the top teams in the league to reach the Zone 6 playoffs, which included Zone 6 East champion Hyde Park, a team that made its way to the State Final Eight. They also defeated Milton, which went with its ace Willie Archibald, who pitched at Tufts. Cohasset/Scituate won 5-1.

"That was not a bad finish to the season," said Cohasset coach Bob Barrow. "We were 5-1 in our last six games and we beat some very good teams, Weymouth Morrissette and Hyde Park. We were able to stay together as a team."

"Zone 6 East is one of the toughest leagues around," said Arnold. "We had a lot of kids play out of position to fill holes in the 5-1 run "We have a class team and we try hard to maintain that professionalism. We were in a different position this year. If everyone was able to come together through out the year, we could have won the zone."

fielded most of the same players, with the addition of a couple of 11-year olds who went on to play for their own age group for summer ball.

The Williamsport Tournament, won by Hanover, was a great experience for the team, and a challenge for Greer, as the kids won a challenge to shave his head by winning their pool.

"We gave the kids something to shoot for," said Greer, a former Major League pitcher with the Mets and Giants. "We had a pizza party and a hair cutting party."

Greer said he's coached the majority of the group since they were nine years old. His son Will is on the team.

Greer said the team is about more than baseball.

"I could not be prouder of this group," he said. "We stress and live by, heart and hustle equals respect. These boys have earned the respect around the region with what they have accomplished this season and Cohasset should be proud with how these kids represented our town this summer."

During one stretch, while the team was playing in the Sandwich Tournament, they played eight games in four days, a feat that tested the pitching staff. There were two games Saturday, four Sunday in tournament play and then the final pair of regular season games, Monday and Tuesday to complete an undefeated regular season and the regular season championship.

"Just about everybody on the team could step in and pitch," Greer said. "It's something we stress."

Totalled up, Cohasset won more 21 games, including the undefeated regular season.

Greer said the team had plans after bowing out of the SYBL Tournament.

"They're fishing today," he said. "They're being kids, which is the way it should be. It has been fun coaching these kids. They're a great group of kids and parents.

player, who by the way, gave up three runs in the first inning of yesterday's matinee game, eight overall in a 10-8 loss.

Well, I must admit, I was one of those fans. I was at the game, waiting quietly for a sundae in one of those cool little helmet cups when I noticed the commotion at the mound and figured that Beckett was injured.

I am not a doctor. I do not play one on TV, and I am not accusing him of faking an injury, but I will say that on the way into the park, I said to the people I was with that if the rain didn't stop, watch what happens the first time Beckett gets in any kind of trouble on the mound, and asked what inning he was going to slip or pull something and blame the conditions.

My answer – third inning.

That was why I had a little negativity on that event.

It had less to do with booing an injured player and more to do with the fact that from what I have read, seen on TV and heard on the radio, this is a guy who was out of shape, underachieving and possibly brought bad vibes to the team chemistry.

Personally, I would be in favor of trading or even releasing him, with a nice thank you for outstanding service in his first few seasons with the Sox.

On that note, one thing I hear from some fans is that he is a clubhouse cancer.

To anyone who uses that term, please stop.

It is offensive to anyone who has this insidiously evil disease and to anyone who has been touched by it with the loss of family or friends. A guy with a bad attitude in a clubhouse just doesn't meet that standard.

On a related subject, congratulations to our own Mark Gardner, who completed the Pan Mass Challenge over the weekend.

I was already impressed with the accomplishment of riding close to 180 miles over two days.

I get worn out driving that far, but realized just how hard it was when I went on a short bike ride with my brother and nine-year old nephew on Saturday out near Sturbridge.

Mark did 180 miles.

I staggered back to the house drenched in sweat, legs on fire after about a short three or four miles of riding.

In my defense, there were a lot of steep, long hills that felt like they were straight upward and having not been on a bicycle in more than 10 years, I had no idea what gears to use or how to do much of anything outside of walking straight up.

The walking hurt more than the riding.

After that, I was banned from waterskiing on Sunday by my wife, who just didn't want to listen to my whining about being hurt all week.

I was still thinking about trying when the thunderstorms set in and scuttled that idea.

Note to anyone heading to an open Patriots camp session.

If you go on a Sunday when the weather is good, get there very early if you plan to watch anything and sit anywhere.

We got there about 1:35 of a 1:30 start and were able to watch about five minutes from very far away.

Fortunately the Patriots Experience was there for the kids and Five Guys fries at Patriot Place are always a good bet.

Getting back to the dread I mentioned up top, it mostly comes from the fact that football is starting, which means fall, and cold, and I am never ready for that.

Still, with high school practices starting in just a few weeks, it is an exciting time to think about what our local teams will bring to the table.

It should be fun.

COLLEGE FAIR

Tuesday, August 14, 2012, 6 to 8 p.m. • Regis College, 235 Wellesley St., Weston, MA

EVENT HOSTED BY: Regis College · WICKED LOCAL.com · GateHouse Media New England

Tips for attending Aug. 14 college fair at Regis College

By Wanda E. Suriel
Director of admission, Regis College

Are you ready to take a ride into the college search process? On Tuesday, Aug. 14, from 6 to 8 p.m., WickedLocal.com and GateHouse Media New England are sponsoring a College Fair at Regis College, 235 Wellesley St., Weston.

At the college fair, representatives will be ready to answer questions pertaining to their institutions. Visit media.wickedlocal.com/collegefair2012 for a list of exhibitors at the College Fair.

If you have never navigated a college fair, be prepare to connect, engage in conversation and walk away with more information than you ever imagined. Attending a college fair is your opportunity to interview a college or university and do a preliminary evaluation of an institution's fit for you.

The objective of a college fair is to allow students and parents the opportunity to gain additional information. It is encouraged for students and families to come prepared. Here are a few tips:

Have a plan of action! Research colleges and universities you are interested in connecting with before arriving. Visit them during the fair to ask your specific questions. Be sure to save time for schools you may have never heard of. There are many different types of institutions, so it may be most beneficial to be open-minded. Some examples: what type of campus, large or small; what type of institution, public or private; geographic location, in state or out of state? The opportunities are endless. Find out what your best fit is.

Think about the five most important factors for you — and it's OK to think outside the box. It's not always about GPAs and SATs, but searching for qualities that are associated with your interests.

Parents, let your son or daughter be in the driver's seat. Recommendations are highly encouraged, but let them begin to take ownership of their destination. Your son or daughter may want to walk around and talk to college representative on their own.

Be calm. College representatives are very personable and are more than willing to help you navigate this college search process.

Advance preparation saves time. Make labels with your demographic information, which you can adhere to any institution's inquiry card. Labels should include: first and last name, address, city, state, zip, telephone number, email address, gender, date of birth, current high school/college you attend, year of high school graduation, academic and or athletic interest(s). Be sure to create a professional email address which would encompass a combination of your first and last name, i.e. J.Smith@gmail.com; Jsmith12@aol.com.

Don't forget to bring a pen and a notebook with you so you can take notes on the different colleges. You don't want them to all blur together at the end of the evening. Consider bringing a bag for all of the materials you will be collecting in case the fair does not provide one.

Make sure you wear comfortable shoes and clothing. You will be walking, standing and talking.

At the end of the college fair think collectively about the information you have gathered. Follow up with schools that meet your interest or if you have more questions, email the representative you met at the college fair. If possible, connect with a student at the institution, discuss your interested colleges and universities with your parents and secondary school counselor, arrange a campus visit and attend an open house or information session.

Keep in mind a college fair is just one of the many ways to conduct your college search. Enjoy the ride!

Wanda E. Suriel is director of admission at Regis College in Weston.

FINANCING

Learning how to pay for college may be less of a challenge with the help of online resources.

Tips for students and parents

A college education is one of the most important investments of time and money that students and their families will make. Workers with a bachelor's degree earned 65 percent more, on average, than those with only a high school diploma, according to a Bureau of Labor Statistics report. Fortunately, there are steps to take now that can help make a college education a reality.

If college is on the horizon for you or a family member, you probably need to think about how you'll cover the costs. Understanding your scholarship, financial aid and student loan options will help you get started on the right foot.

Prospective, new and current college students also need answers to questions such as how to select a major, what school is a good fit, and which housing options will best suit their personality, lifestyle and study habits.

Tackling these questions can seem daunting, but students and their families have resources for finding answers thanks to friends, family, school guidance counselors and financial aid officers. Talking to other students and parents who have already gone through the process or are in the midst of it can help save time and energy. In fact, a new resource is available to help do just that: Wells Fargo's Online Community. It connects people with college-related questions with others who can help in developing a plan and getting answers.

Here are a few things students and their families may want to discuss:

Develop a budget: Paying for college involves a lot more than tuition and housing. Make an itemized list of monthly expenses such as cell phone and Internet service, food and school supplies to get a good estimate of your overall expenses.

Create a plan: Young people should get a summer or after-school job, and then set up a savings and checking account to organize finances.

Research financial aid: Check in on your financial aid options early and often. There are a number of steps to getting the best financial aid package for your needs. Track deadlines, so you're not left scrambling.

For more information and resources and to join the conversation with other students, parents, financial aid officers and loan experts, visit www.wellsfargocommunity.com.

Out for a summer Stroll

Charlotte Torrey, 8, of Cohasset, has a tasty snack while checking out Paperscapes during the Stroll on Thursday, Aug. 2.

Elle Kennedy, 9, of Barcelona, Spain, looks up in wonder at the 57 bells in the tower of St. Stephen's, where her grandmother Mary Kennedy of Cohasset is the carillonneur. The largest bell weighs 11,280 pounds while the smallest bell weighs 29 pounds. Summer recitals continue every Sunday at 6 p.m. on the Common.

Educator Rebecca Bates-McArthur of the Cohasset Historical Society tells the history behind the Wilson House to Trish Waddleton of Hull during the Village Stroll on Thursday.

Hair stylist Tracy Gagnon of Dahlia asks Mia Martone, 13, of Cohasset, how she wants her hair done while getting it cut during the Village Stroll on Thursday.

GIMME SHELTER

Charlotte is a pretty gal

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Charlotte, a gray-and-white, year-old female. Charlotte is fine with people, but does not get along with other cats, so would have to be an only. HSAR was lucky enough to find her a foster home, so she can relax a bit. She would love a forever home where she could be the center of attention. She's quite the beauty, and should make an excellent companion for someone who would like their cat to be the one and only. If interested in Charlotte, please call Judy for further information, at 781-534-4902.

Open hours at the shelter are Saturday, from 2-3 and Monday from 6:30 - 7:30pm. If these hours aren't convenient, please call Judy, the Adoption Coordinator to schedule an appointment, at 781-534-4902.

HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

Charlotte would love a forever home where she could be the center of attention. . .

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org. HSAR sends out a huge thank you to its many supporters.

The HSAR Board has reduced the adoption donation fee of adult cats from $100, to $25 from now through the entire month of August. HSAR has so many adoptable felines, who have resided at the shelter and are so ready for forever homes. HSAR hopes this will help in acquiring homes for many of them during the slower summer months.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Express first, play right notes later

JENNIE MULQUEEN

Jennie Mulqueen is director of Early Childhood Programs and artistic director of SSC's Music Together program.

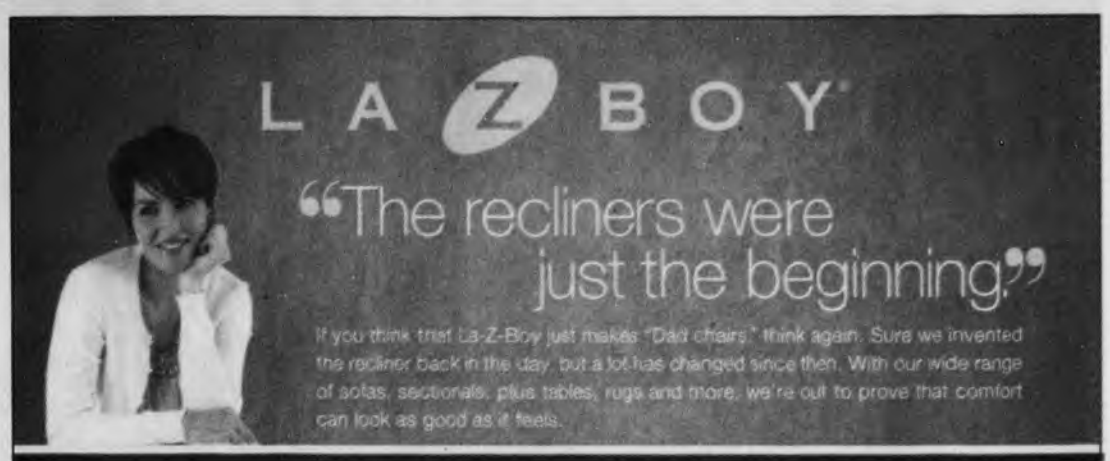
Music is a primal expression. We see it in the beat-grooving toddler; we hear it from the infant singing on her favorite open vowel, "AAHHH." Children love music and are drawn to it naturally. So why do we seem to lose the expressive piece of music when trying to "get it right?"

I recall my junior voice recital at Northwestern University. It was a month before I finally dared to look at the video (never an easy thing to do). It didn't take me long to realize that although the correct pitches and rhythms, phrasing, floated high notes and French diction were all there, what wasn't there was conveyance of, well, any meaning. No expression whatsoever. Oh, I knew what was going through my head as I was singing plenty of that "roof chatter" as they say.

Thankfully, I did turn things around my senior year, but I will never forget that experience, as it was one that taught me the important balance between expression and technique. Years later I had a teacher who would purposefully avoid any technical pointers in the latter part of my lessons. She said, "Now it is time to take all the technical practicing for a test ride. It's your hardware, and you cannot think about it any more than you think about how your car is working while you drive. Let the expression be your fuel."

Whether in a private studio or a general music classroom, every music teacher needs to think about fostering expression, for without that soulful spark, music as a language is endangered. Language exists to communicate, to connect. But what happens to so many musicians – young and old – is that when they "do music" (practice, perform) and the expressive airwaves go black.

I've heard many a concerned parent say, "My child used to like music but is either lazy or not good enough to do it. This is not working out. I guess my kid isn't musical after all." But the truth is that all our brains are hard wired for music, and it just takes accessing that expressive piece to relight the spark.



As director of Early Childhood Programs at South Shore Conservatory, it is my job to prevent families from falling into this musical black hole, if you will. We see the spark in Music Together, and then we work as a team to find the logical follow-up step, from Drum & Sing to Suzuki to Primo Voice to private instruction. At SSC we call this progression the continuum – a continuum of expressive development that works alongside the continuum of technical proficiency.

In order to truly foster music as an expressive language, perhaps we must tilt toward a different way of valuing the arts educational experience. From the get go, from the first touch of the piano key or pluck of the string, we should focus on expression, asking the student questions such as: What's the feeling? What's the word? What's the color? What's the story? From the very beginning we should watch and listen for the expression to shine through. From the very first Music Together class to the graduating senior recital, or the Adult voice competition, we are waiting with bated breath for that beautiful expression of the soul.

For information on South Shore Conservatory's complete curriculum of classes for all ages, please visit www.sscmusic.org.

Jennie Mulqueen has been deeply committed to nurturing families through music for the last 14 years. She is director of Early Childhood Programs and artistic director of SSC's Music Together program, which is based on the philosophy that singing and dancing is our human birthright.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF AUG. 20, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) As eager as you are to take on that new challenge, it would be best to temper that spurt of "Ram"-bunctious energy until you have more facts to back up your decision to move.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This is a good time for hardworking Bovines to take a break from their hectic on-the-job schedules to bask in the unconditional love and support of friends and family.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Pay attention to what you hear in the workplace. You could pick up some hints about possible changes. Meanwhile, a new infusion of creative energy sets in by week's end.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Try to be more flexible in dealing with a suddenly difficult situation, whether it's on the job or in the home. Others might have some good points to offer. Listen to them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You might think you're not getting the royal treatment you deserve. But be careful not to become a royal pain by complaining about it. Be patient and allow things to work out.

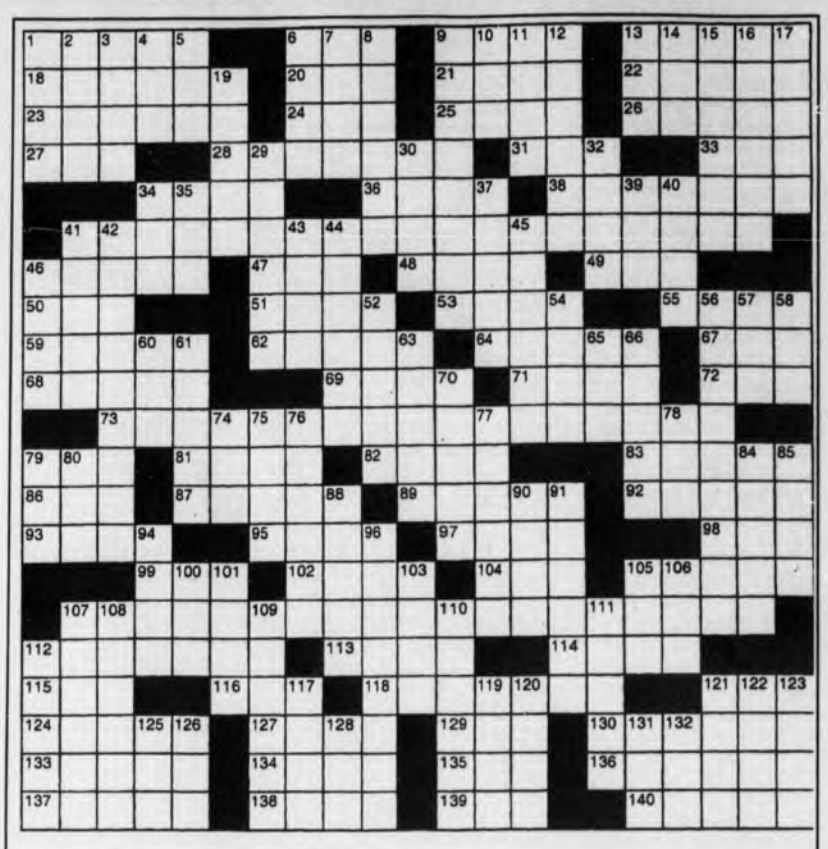
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Watch that penchant for being super-judgmental at work. It might create a bad impression with someone whose decisions could determine the course of your career.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You've been your usual busy-bee self, gathering nectar wherever you can find it. But now's a good time to kick back, relax and just enjoy smelling the roses.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) That pesky personal situation seems to be improving. But change comes slowly, so be patient. Expect someone to bring more positive news by week's end.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Whoa! Ease up on that hectic pace you've been putting yourself through. Take time to recharge your energy levels before going full gallop again.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Try to be intrigued, not intimidated, by the issues you're suddenly facing, and you'll be ahead of the game. Don't be afraid to demand answers to your questions.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) New associates freezing you out of their inner circle? Never mind. Put a warm smile on that friendly face of yours, and you'll soon thaw them all down to size.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your wise guidance helps colleagues agree to compromise and move forward. Meanwhile, there are still vital issues you need to deal with in your personal life.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy being free with your emotions, but you also can exercise disciplined focus. You would make a fine artist.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

LYME DISEASE

Take precautions against tick bites

Massachusetts Department of Public Health is encouraging residents to stay vigilant against tick bites when they're outdoors this spring and summer. Ticks are present in the environment anytime temperatures are above freezing, but they're especially active as temperatures get warmer in the summer. If not removed promptly from the skin, ticks can transmit Lyme disease, a serious but treatable illness.

"With temperatures warming up and outdoor activities on the rise, it's important that people take simple, common-sense steps to protect themselves and their families against tick bites and the Lyme disease they can spread," said DPH state epidemiologist Dr. Alfred DeMaria.

Ticks are tiny and are most commonly found in brushy, wooded or grassy areas, including backyards. There are several steps that people can take to protect themselves from tick bites, and prevent the spread of Lyme disease and other tick-borne illnesses.

If one is going to be outside in an area likely to have ticks, use an insect repellent with DEET or permethrin according to the instructions on the product label. DEET products should not be used on infants under two months of age, and should be used in concentrations of 30 percent or less on older children. Permethrin products are intended for use on items such as clothing, shoes, bed nets and camping gear, and are not effective when applied to skin.

Check children, oneself and pets for ticks after coming inside. Pay special attention to areas between the toes, back of the knees, groin, armpits, neck, along the hairline and behind the ears.

If a tick is found attached to the skin, use a pair of fine point tweezers to grip the tick as close to the skin as possible and pull straight out with steady pressure.

Talk to a doctor if a rash develops where one was bitten, or if one experiences symptoms such as fever, headache, fatigue or sore and aching muscles after a tick bite.

Lyme disease is the most commonly reported tick-borne disease in Massachusetts. According to the latest data, in 2010 a total of 2,641 cases of Lyme disease were reported in Massachusetts.

For more information on tick-borne illness surveillance and prevention, visit www.mass.gov/dph/tick or call the DPH Epidemiology Hotline at 617-983-6800.

Beechwood Church offers children's program

A summer kids' event called Sky will be hosted at Beechwood Congregational Church from Monday, Aug. 13 to Friday, Aug. 17. At Sky, faith and imagination soar as kids discover that everything is possible with God. Kids participate in memorable Bible-learning activities, sing catchy songs, play teamwork-building games, make and dig into yummy treats, experience electrifying Bible adventures, collect Bible Memory Buddies to remind them to trust God, and test out Sciency-Fun Gizmos they'll take home and play with all summer long. Plus, kids will learn to look for evidence of God all around them through something called God Sightings. Each day concludes with Fly Away Finale—a celebration that gets everyone involved in living what they've learned.

Sky is for children entering grades one through five and will run from 9 a.m. to noon each day. To register log onto www.beechwoodcc.org or call Sue at 781-383-6836.

Freeman C. Chase

Freeman C. Chase

SCITUATE – Freeman C. Chase, age 84, of Scituate, formerly of Hingham, Nantucket and Cohasset, passed away Aug. 5, 2012.

Freeman was predeceased by his wife, Barbara Rich Chase and was the beloved husband of Lucretia (Campagno) Chase. He was the devoted father of: Linda Chase of Vermont, Clark Chase of Cohasset, Cindy Phillips and her husband Michael Phillips of Nantucket and Clifford Chase of Scituate. He was the grandfather to 17 grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren.

Mr. Chase was a graduate of Thayer Academy, a sergeant in the U.S. Army and he was in the food brokerage business for 45 years and the owner of Chase, Kolbin, and Allen Co.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated Saturday, Aug. 11, 2012, at 11:30 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours omitted. Interment is private.

Ralph Perroncello

COHASSET – Ralph Perroncello, 87, a highly decorated veteran of World War II, and a retired Cohasset Firefighter, passed peacefully Aug. 1, 2012.

Ralph courageously fought a battle that many 87 year old "greatest generation" persons would have long given up on. Among his accomplishments were establishing the VFW Chapter in Cohasset and supporting the town's seniors by his continuous election until last year to the Housing Authority.

Ralph is survived by his wife of 61 years, Maria; his three children, Peter Perroncello and his wife Catherine Perroncello of Pembroke, Elena Dear and her husband Gary Dear of Chelmsford, and Dona Pihl and her husband Walter Pihl of Cohasset. He is also survived by his five grandchildren; Christina Dear, Jennifer Dear, Gregory Dear, Katie Perroncello, and Lisa Kamens. Also survived by the newest love of his life, his great-granddaughter Madison Grant. He is also survived by his older brother Joseph Perroncello of Cohasset; and other loving family members.

Unless you were part of his extended family, few will know what trials and tribulations the past year brought Ralph. True grit usually exemplifies a western hero. He rarely complained, until the last few weeks when he himself had come to acknowledge he could only endure so much.

Ralph is also part of the true endangered species remaining in Cohasset - a native born son who went off to war to serve his nation, then returned to serve his community.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Saturday, Aug. 4, 2012 at 9:30 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours were held Friday Aug. 3 from 4-8 p.m. in McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset. Ralph will be laid to rest in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset with military honors.

SARAH CIARDI

NASA grants a student's WISH

By Jill Michaels
Correspondent

Norwell's Sarah Ciardi displays the certificate she received at the final banquet for WISH science camp NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston. There Ciardi and other campers were able to display their projects to NASA professionals.

At Astronaut Training, Ciardi and fellow campers toured the facilites at the Johnson Space Center and got to see the mock-ups where the astronauts train in the ISS modules. COURTESY PHOTOS/DAWN AND SARAH CIARDI

Norwell's Sarah Ciardi had Mars on the brain months before NASA's Curiosity rover successfully landed on the red planet early Monday morning.

This spring NASA selected Ciardi, 17, as one of 84 female high school students from 29 states to attend a six-day science camp at the space agency's Johnson Space Center (JSC) in Houston.

Ciardi attended the first of two summer camps sponsored by WISH, the Women in STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Math) High School Aerospace Scholars. JSC's Teaching from Space Office facilitates the program.

The fortunate students were chosen based on completion of online lessons about space exploration, academic merit and geographic diversity.

Ciardi, a senior at Norwell High School this fall, graciously pointed out: "I was the only one chosen from Massachusetts, and all of New England."

The 42 girls assigned to the June 24-29 camp were divided into four teams, each named after a Mars rover. Female mentors supervised their space-related activities from 8 a.m. until 9 p.m. each day.

During that intensive week, the teams designed a simulated plan for launching astronauts on a Mars mission, living and working on the planet's surface, and integrating of all the components required to accomplish such a complex journey.

Ciardi, assigned to the Spirit team tasked with mission integration, said that she discovered WISH's rare opportunity when it was advertised on a NASA Web site.

"My trigonometry teacher, Mr. Greg Zini, wrote my recommendation. For the online program, I had to read like 80 pages every two weeks."

The onsite JSC experience taught the students about unexpected elements of spaceflight.

Pennsylvania student Josephina Bair highlighted the psychological side of a mission. If a Moon shot served as a precursor mission to Mars, everyone could gain more experience building habitats and greenhouses.

"We talked about what the astronauts would do while flying around the dark side of the Moon," Bair said. "We decided they could bring a tablet to watch videos."

The girls also heard an eyewitness account of orbital life from International Space Station (ISS) astronaut Shannon Walker. Walker is married to Andy Thomas, the last of seven astronauts who flew on the Russian space station Mir in the 1990's.

Other JSC camp activities included a visit to Rocket Park. There, the girls got a close-up view of a Saturn V rocket from the Apollo era.

"We got to meet an engineer who had worked on it. That was the greatest time of spaceflight," Ciardi said.

What practical application has her NASA experience provided?

"I learned how to present a design report to a panel of judges, doing research and making a presentation" to JSC personnel and community leaders at the end of her week at NASA, Ciardi revealed.

"I also met engineers who are passionate about their work. It was excellent and awesome!"

The Big Picture

It may be a big universe, but it's a small world.

Cohasset astronaut Steve Bowen discovered that Ciardi, a Norwell native, was attending a WISH camp.

Although his schedule prevented him from crossing paths with her in Houston, Bowen composed a message to relay to Ciardi.

In his email, Bowen wrote: "Please pass on to Sarah my best wishes and I hope she takes a lot of excitement and good information back to the South Shore."

Boston is the hometown area for eight current and former astronauts: Bowen (Cohasset); Dan Burbank (considers Yarmouth Port his hometown); Chris Cassidy (born in Salem); Brian Duffy (born in Boston, raised in Rockland); Charlie Precourt (born in Waltham, raised in Hudson); Scott Tingle (born in Attleboro, raised in Randolph); Suni Williams (considers Needham her hometown), and Stephanie Wilson (born in Boston, raised in Pittsfield).

Burbank flew on the ISS from November 2011 to April 2012. Williams launched this year in July and will land back on Earth in November. Cassidy will blast off in March 2013.

Local impact

Ciardi's mother, Dawn, teaches fourth grade in Quincy. The student's father, Joseph, is a businessman.

Coincidentally, Dawn is the name of NASA's robotic mission that will conclude, on Aug. 26, a yearlong study of asteroid Vesta before the spacecraft heads toward Ceres, the solar system's biggest asteroid.

Regarding her daughter, Dawn said: "She's always been interested in science. Even as a kid, she was very inquisitive. She wanted to learn about dinosaurs and other sciencey things.

"We encouraged her interest and we provided the resources."

Dawn cited a rocket camp that Sarah attended in third grade and a report she wrote that same year on Mae Jemison, NASA's first female African-American astronaut.

In parental fairness, Dawn also spoke about A.J., her 16-year-old son. She joked that his interest is playing the drums, "a noisier passion."

As for Sarah, Dawn reported: "She could not stop talking about the WISH camp when she got home. It was the chance of a lifetime."

Unlike most summer camps, Sarah's NASA trip featured one big perk: all expenses paid, including airfare.

"My husband and I couldn't believe that," Dawn said.

But with opportunity comes responsibility. What message does NASA want Sarah to share with other young New Englanders?

"Just that science and engineering and math are cool. It really is awesome," she replied.

"NASA wanted us to go home and talk to younger girls, and boys. 'Tell kids to stay in STEM!'"

FARMERS MARKET

Best in show tomatoes

Contest is next Thursday, Aug. 23

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Next week marks the annual Massachusetts Farmers Market Week. The festivities start on Sunday, August 19 and continue through Saturday, Aug. 25, and Cohasset is getting in on the fun.

The state's celebration kicks off on Monday the 20th with the 28th Massachusetts Tomato Contest at the City Hall Plaza Farmers Market in Boston. Cohasset will also host a tomato contest during the Thursday, Aug. 23 market on the town common. The market begins at 2 p.m., with the ballot counting for the contest at 4:30 p.m.

Eager gardeners and aspiring farmers should choose their prize tomatoes to enter in the following categories: "biggest," "smallest," "funniest," and "most unusual." The contest is open to all with prizes

Energy and school boards discuss timeline

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Solar panels could be on the way to Cohasset — and fast.

The town's Alternative Energy Committee held a joint meeting with the School Committee's alternative energy subcommittee on Monday to discuss the schedule for their proposed project to place solar arrays on the Middle High School roof and town landfill. The board is working with special counsel to publish a request for proposals (RFP), and could do so as soon as September.

The AEC hopes that solar energy will help the town realize cost savings on energy. There are also federal and state incentives available to provide energy at a discounted cost to municipalities that explore clean energy projects. AEC co-chair Tanya Bodell said the committee will continue pursuing the solar panel project as long as it's "financially viable." Publishing an RFP and evaluating bids that come in will help town officials determine that.

During Monday night's meeting, it was clear the members of the energy board are serious about the project and getting it done in a timely manner.

Over the past few weeks, members of the AEC have presented their plans to the Board of Selectmen and School Committee. Both boards voted to split the cost of hiring legal counsel, agreeing to pay $10,500 each to

TOWN BYLAW

Door-to-door solicitors must register with CPD

What
The Cohasset bylaw regulating door-to-door solicitors, adopted six years ago and approved by the Attorney General's Office, has been effective in limiting the number of solicitors who come to town with the intention of getting in and quickly getting out, police said. It has also provided some comfort to residents that the people who are soliciting have background checks performed by the police department.

Bylaw at a glance
Solicitors are required to register with the police, where they can apply for a $25 license.

Solicitors are required to wear a badge, issued by the police, that includes their name and photograph.

Solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

- The licenses are good for a period to be determined by the police chief up to one year and are non-transferable.

Violation
Any willful violation of a town bylaw, such as the solicitation bylaw, is an arrestable offense, police said. The bylaw requires that those selling magazines, for example, must first register with the police department.

Exceptions
Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18, unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes; and those soliciting for charitable organizations, unless those solicitors are paid.

Pete

PETE is a friendly little fellow, about 2 yrs old, with adorable big ears. He has lots of love to give and we believe he will make a nice little companion.

We believe Pete would be best matched to a home of adults or families with children 14 years or older (since he is a small dog and doesn't have experience with younger children.)

We would like to place him in a home where he would not be left alone for long periods.

A fenced yard is not required. He seems to be good with other dogs and we believe he may be ok with cats.

Call (781) 544-4533 for more information or stop by the Scituate Animal Shelter during open hours to meet Pete!

New application policy at ConCom

Conservation Commission chairman Jack Creighton has implemented the below policy to provide conservation and storm water applicants better service. All applicants will be provided a list containing:

- All qualified firms that have provided services on Cohasset conservation or storm water projects at any time in the last two years;
- Website or reference point for applicants to find qualified firms that provide conservation/storm water permit services;
- All qualified Cohasset based companies;

This list will be provided to anyone wishing information about qualified firms. It will be noted that while the Conservation Commission can make the list available, it is not their policy to make recommendations nor will they make recommendations.

Hiring update

Town Hall will soon welcome a full-time Director of Project Management and Planning, who will work in the town manager's office. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said during the July 31 selectmen's meeting that he had interviewed six candidates for the position and selected three finalists; those finalists were interviewed by a committee comprised of one representative from each of the following boards: Capital Budget Committee (Jack Keniley), Board of Selectmen (Leland Jenkins), Sewer Commission (John Beck), and Planning Board (Clark Brewer).

Milanoski said in a phone call that the group shared their recommendations with him, and that he is "moving forward with the consensus."

The new position involves engineering, project planning and capital budget planning, Milanoski explained. The new hire will be onboard by September.

POLICE BEAT

Hull woman faces third OUI charge

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 58-year-old Hull woman is facing her third drunken driving offense following a traffic stop in Cohasset at 3:35 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 9), police said. The 1999 Jeep, the woman was driving was reported as being driven erratically and was pulled over on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Beechwood Street. The woman, who was exhibiting signs of intoxication, failed field sobriety tests and was placed under arrest. She is charged with OUI alcohol (third offense); negligent operation; failure to stop/yield; and marked lanes violation. She was also charged with a warrant.

Suspended license

A 21-year-old Hingham man was arrested for operating with a suspended license after a traffic stop for speeding on Forest Avenue last Thursday (Aug. 9) at around 11 p.m. Police said the 1997 Ford, he was driving was traveling 45 in a 30 mph zone. He is also being cited for speeding. The owner of the car, a 21-year-old Cohasset man, is being summonsed to court for allowing improper operation (unlicensed driver) of his car, police said.

Deer hit

Police responded to a car vs. deer accident at 8:49 a.m. on Monday (Aug. 9). A 2011 Nissan Murano, operated by a 55-year-old Scituate woman, hit a deer on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) by JJ's. The animal control officer checked the area and found that the deer had expired, police said. Car vs. deer accidents continue to be a problem in Cohasset due to the apparent over population of deer due to last year's mild winter. The Scituate woman was not injured, police said.

Parking lot

At 11:44 a.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 7), a parking lot accident off Parker Avenue was reported. Police said a 2007 Volkswagen, operated by a 17-year-old Cohasset girl, backed into a parked 2001 Subaru, owned by a 36-year-old Plymouth resident. The Subaru was unoccupied when the accident occurred. Neither vehicle had to be towed and there were no injuries, police said.

Dog crossing

On Tuesday (Aug. 7) at 2:24 p.m. police responded to a report of an accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) near Red Fox Lane involving two cars. Police said a 1988 Mercedes, operated by a 58-year-old Scituate man, stopped for a dog that was crossing the highway when the Mercedes was hit from behind by a 2006 Jeep, operated by a 20-year-old Cohasset woman. There were no injuries and neither vehicle was towed, police said.

Drive-thru

Police investigated an accident at the drive-thru at Mary Lou's News on King Street (Route 3A) at around 8 a.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 8). According to reports a 2002 Chevrolet, operated by a 20-year-old Cohasset woman, was hit from behind by a 2005 silver Audi, also operated by a 20-year-old Cohasset woman.

Intersection

There was a two-car accident at around 11 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 9) at Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Pond Street. Police said a 2006 Ford, operated by a 23-year-old Hull man, was headed north on 3A through the intersection when a 2008 Nissan, operated by a 20-year-old Cohasset woman, who was headed south and attempting to turn left onto Pond Street, collided with the Ford. The Cohasset woman was cited for failure to yield. Police said the front end of the Ford struck the rear end of the Nissan. No one had to be transported to the hospital following the accident.

Parked car

At 8:24 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 11) an accident was reported involving a 2010 Toyota that was parked on private property just off a shared driveway off Atlantic Avenue. The driver's side bumper was damaged. The other car apparently took off.

Music Circus

There was a minor accident at 10:37 p.m. on Sunday (Aug. 12) in the parking lot of the Music Circus, police said. A 2008 Cadillac, operated by a 65-year-old Hull man was stopped, facing west and ready to go out the main gate when is was struck on the passenger's side door by a 2004 Toyota, operated by a 48-year-old man from Exeter, N.H. Police said the Toyota turned right out of its lane and hit the parked Cadillac. The Toyota had minor damage. Neither vehicle had to be towed, police said.

Walk-through

Police responded to a call from a concerned father at 9 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 6). The man called to report that his daughter and a friend believed someone was in the house. Police said the girls reported hearing a door slam and voices in the house and locked themselves in an upstairs bedroom. A police sergeant arrived and conducted a walk-through with the homeowner and found everything in order, police said.

Peace restored

Police responded to a call from an upset gasoline customer at the Mobil Mart off Route 3A and wanted to speak to an officer about being unable to get gasoline and being allegedly yelled at by the attendant. The officer restored the peace and the woman was able to get the gasoline, police said. The incident occurred at 12:24 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 7).

iPad stolen

A 58-year-old Scituate woman reported that her iPad had been stolen from her car while she was parked at Tedeschi Plaza. She went to the police station at 7:25 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 7) to report the theft. The woman said the window to her 2012 Mini Cooper had been left open.

Drinking

Police said a concerned father reported that his son, who had been consuming alcohol, had left the house on foot and headed north along the railroad tracks at around 10:55 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 7). Police notified the MBTA and checked the area. The father then notified police that the boy had returned home.

Identity theft

A 46-year-old Cohasset woman received a call from American Eagle sales online last week about an order placed with a credit card that the woman said she did not have. She was not out any money, police said, but was provided her with an identity theft packet that explains procedures victims of identity theft should follow.

Illegal dumping

A local business owner in Shaw's Plaza reported finding two trash bags next to the commercial dumpster for his business last week. Police investigated and found the address of the home where the trash came from. An officer went to the Cohasset house where the homeowner said her son would pick up the trash bags, police said.

Handbag taken

A 47-year-old Methuen woman reported to police last Sunday (Aug. 12) that while she was at a local restaurant she put her handbag on the floor but when she went to retrieve it, it was gone. There was another handbag that was next to hers on the floor that remained. It is unclear if the missing handbag was the result of a scam, police said. Missing is $80 in cash, credit cards and a cell phone. The victim will let police know if she receives any reports of activity on her credit cards or cell phone.

Ice thrown

A 42-year-old Cohasset man reported to police on Sunday (Aug. 12) that while he was jogging along Atlantic Avenue, someone in a brown or tan SUV (which had two occupants) threw a plastic cup of ice at him.

Move Over Law in effect

When an emergency or maintenance vehicle is stopped on the side of the road, move over to the next lane, or slow down if changing lanes is not possible. Under the Move over Law, failure to do so could result in a fine of up to $100.

TOMATOES

awarded for each category.

Anna Abbruzzese, Old Coach Road, is one of the Cohasset market's original organizers and hopes to see a lot of local participation in next week's event.

"We just invite all farmers to participate and to bring their biggest, prettiest, ugliest, most exotic tomatoes for the contest," she said, adding that during last year's contest, "we had some pretty exotic ones."

Any type of whole tomato is acceptable, including cherry tomatoes.

The contest is a fun way to celebrate farmers' market week, Abbruzzese said. She has been involved in Cohasset's market since its inception in 1996. Before it became a summer mainstay on the common, the market took place on the municipal parking lot.

"We had maybe three or four vendors," Abbruzzese remembered, including a few bakers and a group visiting from Italy. "It was a small market, and we didn't have any crafters at the time."

The market has grown exponentially since then; every week, the common is dotted with several vendors, from farm stands to local eateries, bakers, and artisans.

Abbruzzese said she's unsure of which year the market was "upgraded" to its new space and size. "I really can't remember when we moved to the common," she said. "It seems like we've been there forever."

SOLAR

hire Mark Kalpin of the firm Wilmer Hale. Kalpin is helping the committee through the RFP process as they prepare to attract solar power vendors to bid on the project.

The plans to proceed with the solar panel project were already approved by Annual Town Meeting on May 12. The project – to install solar voltaic arrays on the school roof and on the capped landfill at 81-91 Cedar Street – was presented in two separate warrant articles, and Town Meeting voted almost unanimously to approve both.

Getting town approval was the first of many steps, Tanya Bodell said at the time. Now, the committee is working steadily to stick to their action plan and accomplish both short-term and long-term goals.

To get the ball rolling, the AEC held a joint meeting with liaisons from the school committee: chair Jeanne Astino, member Linda Snowdale, and school business manager Dave DeGennaro. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski also attended Monday's meeting to offer his assistance to the board, and answer questions about the procurement process.

"He's been very helpful in the process, and will hopefully be the one the RFP bidders will respond to," Bodell said of Milanoski.

The school board members present said that they are also committed to lending a hand. The school department as a whole "agreed we're ready to go forward and want this process to happen," said Astino.

One of the AEC's goals this month is to "understand the [Mass. General Laws] chapter 30B procurement process." The AEC is bound by Town Meeting to issue the RFP under this process, Bodell explained; chapter 30B was the process outlined in the Town Meeting articles.

The AEC is also discussing whether the project will operate with a Power Purchase Agreement (PPA) or Net Metering Credit Sales Agreement. These decisions could affect the type of solar power vendors the AEC hopes to attract to the project.

As AEC co-chair John Herth put it, "It's complicated."

Kalpin might be on hand at the next scheduled AEC meeting to help demystify the process, and help the board decide what, exactly, they want to include in the RFP. Time is of the essence, because the AEC plans to publish the RFP by Sept. 24; before that, they plan to meet twice and continue working through the process.

Once the RFP is published and interested vendors begin to respond, the installation development could take anywhere from 18 to 24 months, said Bodell.

The AEC discussed the importance of using a fair, transparent process when it comes to bids; part of that includes public communication. In addition to sharing their plans with local press and working to update the AEC website, the committee assigned liaisons to various town boards that they would like to involve in the process. Bodell said she would be the AEC representative to the Board of Selectmen; she and Milanoski also planned to meet with Town Assessor Mary Quill. Herth was assigned to the School Committee, while new member Andrew Muir was asked to meet with the Planning Board. Longtime member Marie Caristi-MacDonald will be the liaison to the Advisory Committee; former AEC member Andrew Willard serves on that board and is the liaison to the AEC. The other two AEC members, Jeffrey Patterson and Steve Wenner, were not present but could act as liaisons to other committees, including Capital Budget, on an as-needed basis.

Patterson is also working with Herth and the town's new Chief Technology Officer, Rob Bonnell, to roll out an updated AEC website. The site hasn't seen an update in years, said Herth.

Bodell said she would like the new website to have a place where interested solar vendors can register their information with the AEC and request a copy of the RFP. For now, they can email the board at AEC@cohassetma.org and include their company name, contact person, phone number, email address and company website.

So far, the AEC has a list of 24 potential vendors, but would like to have a confirmed bidder list in the near future.

"We hope to have the best and brightest coming out to bid on these projects," said Bodell.

In addition to offering PDF copies online, and print copies at request, the committee will also publish the RFP in a central register and in the Mariner.

The committee plans to increase the amount of meetings from monthly to bi-monthly as they get closer to their RFP publication deadline. Next month, the AEC will meet twice: first on Thursday, Sept. 6, then again on Monday, Sept. 17. Both meetings will begin at 7 p.m.

The project is still in the early stages, but the AEC and school board are committed and "looking forward to getting it done," Bodell said.

The town manager said that both boards are "doing a great job," adding that he's happy to help.

"I'm just here to help support a citizen group that has been charged with moving forward with the solar panel RFP," said Milanoski. "There's a lot of expertise in the group, and I just want to help them work their way through the municipal process."

Town-wide technology plan

The town and schools' Chief Technology Officer Robert Bonnell will present his town-wide technology plan at the Aug. 21 Board of Selectmen's meeting. The presentation will outline Bonnell's implementation plan for technology in the community over the next few years, said Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski.

Bonnell has made the rounds at various town departments since starting his position in June and has already made "multiple improvements in the school structure," said Milanoski.

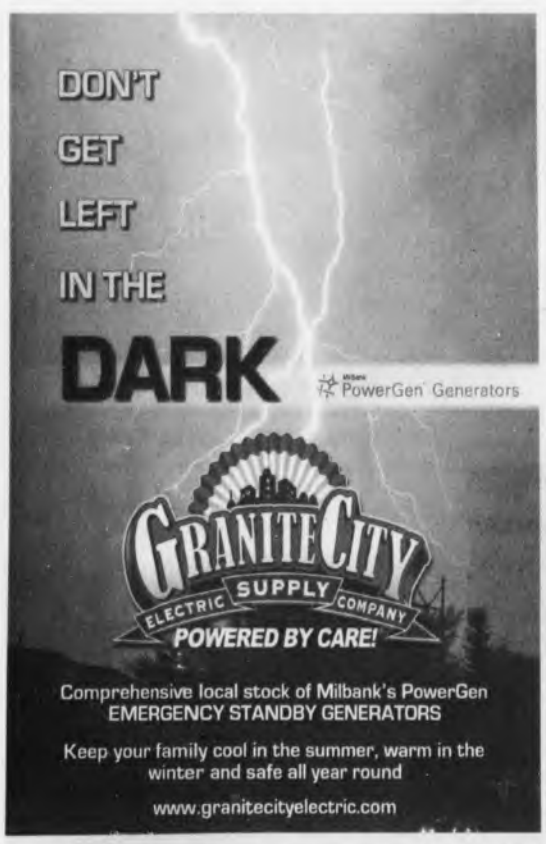
Bonnell's plan, according to the town manager, is "going to develop a solution for whole town to be more efficient as we move toward the 21st century."

Road race discussion

The Board of Selectmen will discuss road races during their Aug. 21 meeting. The board will discuss their policy for races and how many the town should allow each year. Cohasset Triathlon organizer Bill Burnett will be there to weigh in on the discussion.

Deputy collector

Cohasset's Treasurer Collector Jane Lepardo announced at the July 31 selectmen's meeting that she has changed the town's deputy collector from John P. Riley in Quincy to John Brady in Scituate. The change should be more convenient for Cohasset taxpayers, Lepardo said.



Patrolling the transfer station

The town's summer patrolman is keeping a close eye on the Recycling Transfer Facility. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that the officer is checking for town stickers. The patrolman has also been tasked with monitoring the town bridges for jumpers.

Cohasset Food Pantry needs donations

Cohasset Food Pantry is a 501 (c) (3) nonprofit, volunteer organization, located in the rear of Saint Anthony's Rectory at 129 South Main St. The pantry operates on charitable donations from Cohasset churches, private citizens, business and community organizations.

The Food Pantry may be reached by calling 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Leave a message and calls will be returned. The mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. It is open every Tuesday morning. Clients may come from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Donations may be left at the pantry before 9 a.m., on Tuesdays, or by contacting the Food Pantry. Donations may also be left at any Cohasset church on Sunday mornings. There are several Cohasset donation boxes located throughout the town, including St. Anthony Parish Hall, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Cohasset Police Station, Shaw's and Stop & Shop Supermarkets.

Pond gets pristine treatment

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Meetinghouse Pond on the town common is looking healthy following a makeover last week. After extensive algae growth over the month of June, the pond was cleaned, drained, and had sand added to the clay bottom last week. The sand is supposed to encourage the growth of healthy bacteria, according to Cohasset Board of Health Administrator Felix Zemel. The pond was filled last Friday, and the fountain is flowing once again.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski praised town employees for working to restore the pond.

"It's been a great team effort with the public works department and the partnership that was formed with our health inspector and the CSCR [Center for Student Coastal Research], the young generation that's over there helping develop solutions."

High school students from CSCR met with the town manager and health administrator to determine what was plaguing the pond and come up with possible solutions. Some of the problems they identified included an unusually high pH of 10 (level seven is considered normal) and the possibility of lime leaching into the water from concrete sides that were added to the pond during its reconstruction project last year.

A group of CSCR students presented their findings at the July 31 Board of Selectmen's meeting and have continued monitoring the pond's water quality. They will continue to do so until November, the students said.

Milanoski said that if all goes well and the pond remains stable, the pond could soon host a few new inhabitants.

"Hopefully we'll be in position where fish could be added in next few weeks," he said. "Additional testing has to occur make sure the water is balanced. We're treating the water to make sure we can turn it into living pond."

The Meetinghouse Pond fountain is up and running.

DIRECTOR OF STUDENT SERVICES

New job is a perfect fit

Villani has worked with Cataldo

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Students and parents will see another new face around Cohasset schools this fall. Lori Villani is the new Director of Student Services and started her position on July 30.

Villani comes to Cohasset from Arlington, where she served in several positions over the past six years, including special education coordinator for early childhood, elementary, middle and high school. Prior to that, she taught in several other school districts, including her Connecticut hometown.

Stepping into her new director role is the fulfillment of a long-held career goal, Villani said during an interview in her office. And while Cohasset's district is "significantly smaller" than Arlington's, Villani said this position feels like a good fit, especially because she is working alongside Cohasset's Superintendent Barbara Cataldo. The two used to work together in Arlington, where Cataldo previously served as Director of Special Education.

"I knew I'd be working with a superintendent who shared my vision, so it worked out nicely," said Villani.

Cataldo said that Villani's background and skill set are ideal for Cohasset.

"I hired her when I came to Arlington and she continued to grow," said Cataldo. "She's been a pleasure to work with, and in her short time here, she's already begun to implement the needed changes... She's a delight to have in the office; she's extremely positive, creative, and forthright. I think parents will be pleased with the choice."

Two weeks into her new position, Villani has already met some of those parents. Her goal is to get to know as many students and their families as possible, she said. For now, she's still "getting the lay of the land."

"Right now I'm getting to know the staff, meeting families, and meeting with SEPAC [the Special Education Parents Advisory Council], hearing what their hopes and goals and concerns are," said Villani. The new director is reviewing policies and procedures while getting ready to tackle the coordinating program review, which takes place every six years. Cataldo explained that Villani will be responsible for implementing any changes from the review's findings.

Other goals include taking "a big picture look at how services are delivered here" and to "work on collaborative and out-of-district programs," said Villani. These programs would be "dependent on student need." In Arlington, Villani focused on autism and social-emotional programming, for example, but it all depends on the population of students.

"I knew I'd be working with a superintendent who shared my vision, so it worked out nicely."
Lori Villani, Director of Student Services

It seems Villani has hit the ground running, but she admitted that she has yet to see much of Cohasset.

"I've seen a little bit of it; it's beautiful," she said, adding that she's looking forward to a bus tour of the town on an upcoming staff orientation day.

The Connecticut native currently commutes from Waltham but plans to relocate to the South Shore soon. And by this time next summer, Villani will be a newlywed.

"I'm a Massachusetts transplant," Villani said of moving to the area. "I came here for grad school, fell in love and never left."

But Villani's career in special ed. almost didn't happen. The economics major planned to pursue human resources work in New York City; the harrowing events of September 11 changed her mind. Villani took a long-term substitute teaching position in her hometown. From there, Villani said she fell in love with special ed. and decided to get her master's in it. She earned an M.S. in Education and Severe Special Ed., along with an Education Specialist degree in Special Ed. Administration.

"As soon as I hit grad school, I knew this was exactly what I'd be doing," Villani said. "I'm a true testament that once you do what you love, you do well."

Teeing off in support of BIA

Happy August!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hey there Cohasset, how is everyone doing? Here's hoping that your summer is in full summertime swing and that work or not, everyone has been able to "live it up" a little" in true, summer style! Happy August Cohasset, enjoy and be safe!

Birthday wishes

I wanted to throw a family birthday shout-out to the Palmers of Powers Lane! Celebrating a few weeks ago, Lansing, the cool dude Dad of the bunch, shared his special week with his daughter Becca who turned 7, (Happy Birthday Boodles) as well as his oh so handsome "dog-son" Nelson. Happy Birthday to 3 special friends in my life and this past week, his 3-year-old Happy Birthday boy Will celebrated as well. What's fun-filled month of celebrating they have had....

Local resident supports BIA-MA

The Brain Injury Association (BIA) of Massachusetts hosted its 2012 Annual Golf Classic on Monday, Aug. 6 at Juniper Hill Golf Course in Northborough. Cohasset resident and owner of Institutional Cash Distributors, Ed Baldry, played in the tournament.

Celebrities that attended the event were former New England Patriots running back Patrick Pass, who teed off against players for a "Closest to the Pin" competition, NBC 7 Meteorologist Jeremy Reiner, who emceed the evening's dinner, and Radio Voice of the Bruins Dave Goucher, who auctioneered the live auction during the awards portion of the evening.

PMC riders

Hats off to Cohasset Pan-Mass Challenge riders: Megan Fahey, Nancy Fox, Ken Gainey, Ronald Goldberg, Mary Goodwin, Jon Lacks, Lori Lacks, Dennis Newman, William Prendergast, Julie Shea, Peter Vitello, Rue Wilson and Mary Noone.

This year's PMC (Aug. 4-5) drew 5,450 cyclists and raised an estimated $36 million for adult and pediatric patient care and cancer research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Cyclists chose between 11 routes that ranged from 25 to 190 miles and committed to raising between $500 and $4300.

Our local cyclists have made Cohasset proud!

Auditions

Here is an announcement for those our there who have a bit of "acting" in their blood. The Cohasset Dramatic Club will be holding auditions for the first production of its 91st season. The show is the critical and popular Broadway success, Steel Magnolias, by Robert Harling and directed by Theresa Chiasson. The auditions take place on Aug 20 and 21 at 7 pm with callbacks on Aug 22 at 7 pm. Auditions are held at the Cohasset Town Hall. The director requests that you prepare a one-minute monologue, which is suggested but not mandatory. You will also be asked to read from the script. For more info, go to www.cohassetdramaticclub.org

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

The joy of making music together

JANA KAHN

At the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum in Cohasset where I teach three mornings, some would extend their playtime by bringing snacks along and staying to enjoy the family-friendly facility.

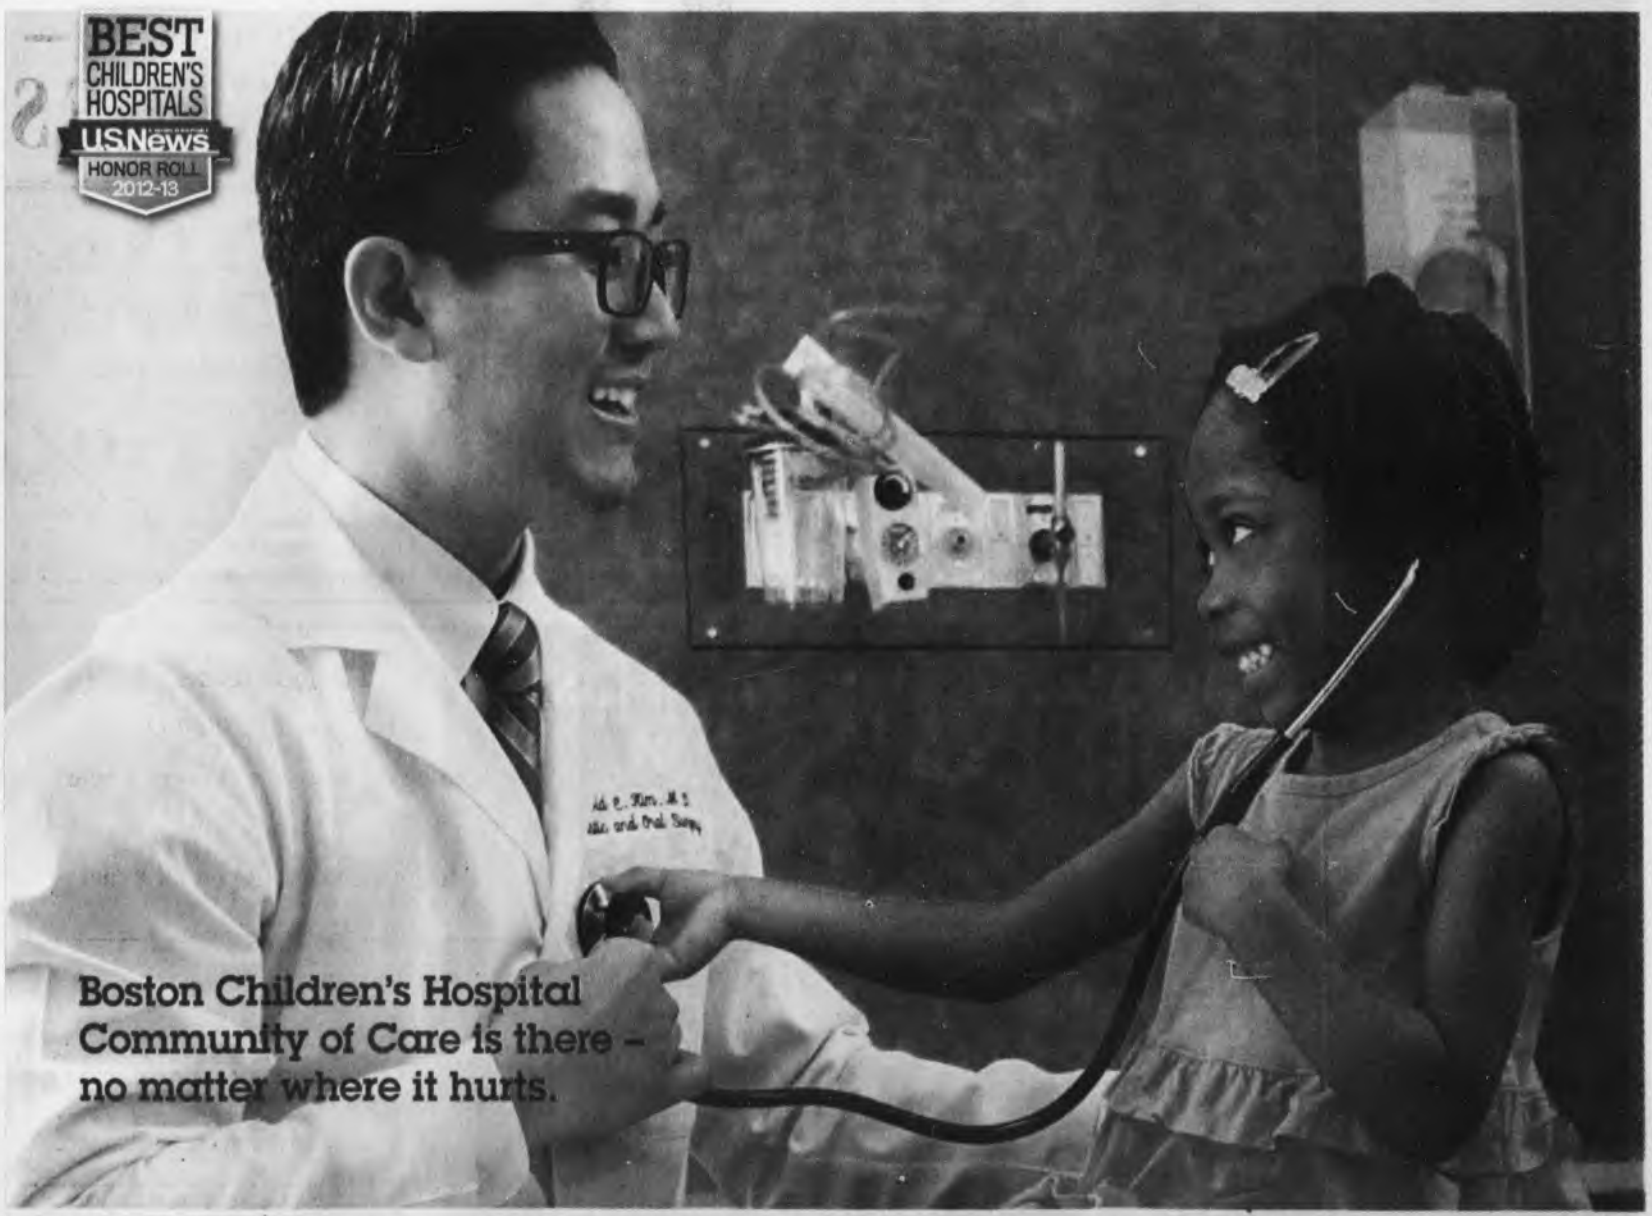
Going into my eighth year of teaching Music Together, I am truly in awe of the parents and caregivers who join with me each week to make music together. I look out at the sincere and hopeful faces and admire the commitment these families have to nurturing their child's music development in a playful and supportive setting.

Our recent summer session was particularly special for me in a number of ways. First, everyone is more relaxed in the summer, so the joy that comes from making music together seemed more accessible. Music makes us more comfortable with one another and touches our soul, and the summer sun seemed to enhance the experience. Also, I was able to draw out the voices and playfulness of the grownups in class, finding them singing and participating more than ever. I sang more quietly to allow myself to listen to their beautiful voices.

I watched caregivers and parents linger after class – extending their shared experience into conversation and impromptu play dates. At the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum in Cohasset where I teach three mornings, some would extend their playtime by bringing snacks along and staying to enjoy the family-friendly facility. At noon I would still see families from my 9:30 am class happily mingling as their children played together. I love that the museum even has a coffee bar!

Lastly, my older daughter, who is eleven now and who participated in Music Together as a child, decided to come along to my classes this summer. We sang together, danced together and shared the joy of making music together. My Music Together experience came full circle, having first participated as a mother of two, and now teaching with my daughter assisting me in class! She hugged me when the Goodbye Song suggested a hug for Mom or Dad, and was delighted when some of the young children wanted to dance with her.

Music Together is a music and movement approach to early childhood music development for infants, toddlers and preschoolers and their parents and primary caregivers. This approach develops each child's basic music competence by encouraging the actual experiencing of music rather than the learning of concepts or information about music. We believe that all children can achieve basic music competence provided their early music environment is sufficiently rich and the child's music development nurtured, just as you'd nurture a young reader.



Judy and Mason Lynch of Hingham are having a great time in class.
COURTESY PHOTO

I asked my children the other day if they think there is a single person in the entire world who doesn't like music. I can't imagine there is. Regardless of your own musical ability you can still teach your child to be musical. My own parents were not professional singers – they just loved to put on their favorite music and sing along as they cooked and cleaned. Little did they know that they were planting the seeds for me to pursue a musical career.

South Shore Conservatory's Music Together program is offered at its Hingham and Duxbury campuses, at Cohasset's Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, and Mama's Move in Norwell. Visit www.sscmusic.org for more information.

Jana Kahn has been with South Shore Conservatory as a Music Together instructor since 2005. She lives in Hingham with her two daughters.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Del's Lemonade celebrates by donating to Sailing Club

It was April and Susan Franklin, owner of Del's Lemonade, was busy planning for the 2012 season. This year, 2012, marks five years since she had brought the refreshing, all natural, frozen beverages synonymous with summer in Rhode Island since 1948 to the South Shore. Back in 2008 few South Shore residents knew of Del's Lemonade but her retail store and presence at area beaches, farmer's markets and local events has made it a recognized brand.

Susan wanted to do something to celebrate their fifth anniversary season. Some Del's franchises had run promotions or raffled an item like a bicycle, but Susan wanted to do something to benefit the Town of Cohasset where she launched her franchise. "I came up with this concept linked to the population of Cohasset. I devised a challenge where in a designated period, if we sold as many cups of Del's as there are residents in Cohasset, Del's would make a gift that would benefit the town. So I began to think about what that gift might be."

There were so many possibilities, then one night Susan and her husband attended a function where she heard about the campaign to build a new sailing club facility. Del's supports many town organizations like the CEF, PSO, Sandy Beach Association and the CYBSA and knowing how integral the Sailing Club is to the summertime experience of Cohasset youth and families, she determined it to be a perfect fit.

"Del's stepped up to the plate to help the Sailing Club raise funds for the new clubhouse...and Del's offers a refreshing treat to our thirsty young sailors!" said Sandy Crough, Commodore of the Sailing Club.

On June 25, Del's Lemonade kicked off the challenge to sell 7,261 cups of Del's in the Town of Cohasset through Labor Day. The Sailing Club will receive a $1,000 donation towards its new clubhouse when the cup goal is achieved. If surpassed,

Julia Placek and Sofia Whetstone relax after the Sailing Club's Fun Day celebration. COURTESY PHOTOS

Instructor Tim Cavanaro enjoys a Del's after a long day of competition at the Olympic Themed Sailing Club Fun Day in which Team Germany was victorious.

Del's will make an additional donation equal to $0.14 a cup for cups sold in excess of 7,261.

There are just three weeks left in the challenge so if you have never had a Del's, come try one and support the Sailing Club campaign. "We are proud of the products we offer", said Franklin. "Our soft frozen beverages are made fresh daily in our Cohasset store from all natural ingredients. Other popular slushes on the market were made a long time ago in a factory and unlike Del's, contain preservatives, emulsifiers, thickeners, stabilizers, and de-icers like propylene glycol used in antifreeze."

Del's is a refreshing no fat treat that comes in nine delicious flavors. "Kids in Cohasset have deemed watermelon their favorite with Peach Mango and Blueberry on top of the list. Many kids like to combine two flavors with Watermelon Blueberry being number one. Adults prefer our signature lemon and grapefruit (my personal favorite)", says Franklin.

To date, the Sailing Club has raised over $200,000 for the new clubhouse. To find out more about the wonderful programs offered by the Cohasset Sailing Club and to learn about its fundraising campaign, and the design and features of the new clubhouse, visit www.cohasset-sailing.org.

"This collaboration between the Sailing Club and Del's Lemonade is another great example of community spirit", said Crough. "Thank you Franklin family, we are honored to be chosen as the recipient of your generosity."

Grant Dalrymple, Kiley Crough, and Alick Dalrymple cool down after competing in games including a tug-of-war, capture the flag, a boat pull and an obstacle course.

Free conference on concussions offered

Kennedy Brothers Physical Therapy will be holding a conference on concussions and head trauma in youth and high school sports. The conference will be held at the Kennedy Brothers Physical Therapy clinic on Route 3A in Cohasset on Thursday, Aug. 23 at 7 p.m. Pre-registration is required, however due to the importance of the subject, it will be free to the public.

Never before has the need to be informed been as crucial. Research from all over the world continues to discover the severe effects and the prevalence of concussions. Unfortunately, the more we learn about head trauma the more we see the potentially devastating impact on our young athletes.

Rule changes, equipment modifications, preventative measures, and treatments are undergoing dramatic and rapid changes.

Rule changes, equipment modifications, preventative measures, and treatments are undergoing dramatic and rapid changes. Based on the latest studies these changes may only be the tip of the iceberg.

Jake Kennedy, MSPT, director of Kennedy Brothers, has seen the effects of concussion and head trauma first hand while working with young athletes for over 20 years. "The evolution of youth sports is at a critical juncture. Anyone connected with youth sports needs to be properly informed. The decisions made concerning which sports are safer, when kids need to stay on the sideline, when kids need professional help, and most importantly which interventions to choose are critical for the long term health of our student-athletes."

Experts from the field will gather at this concussion seminar to present the very latest research and recommendations. Dr. Janet Kent, a national expert and director of the Concussion Clinic at South Shore Hospital will be the key speaker. The forum of experts will include researchers, Physical Therapists, Athletic Trainers, coaches, MIAA officials, and professional athletes. Bill Wilhelm and the WATD Sports Department will be covering the event.

The conference is free and open to the public. To register call Kennedy Brothers Physical Therapy at 781-383-8001 or email us at kbptsouthshore @yahoo.com.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

Sustainable seafood

MATTHEW WEAVER

While we often believe that "green tips" refer to things we can do to make our communities better for future generations, or help us to save money on conventional energy cost, and even help us feel better in a spiritual sense that we're on the right path – another "green tip" can be about the choices that we make every day in the purchasing of the foods we eat and share with our friends and families.

I take my cue this week from Dr. Sarah Cimperman, a naturopathic doctor in New York City. She suggests that we can make great choices for healthy foods at the market by seeking out produce that does not have pesticides, herbicides, or fungicides. This will greatly help our environment, our farm workers' health, and our inner environment (our bodies) and provide what I believe are the best-tasting foods around—fresh, local and organic produce.

Cimperman also suggests that as our oceans, lakes, and rivers continue to present damaging toxins such as pesticides, dioxins, PCB's, and heavy metals, which accumulate in large predatory fish, that eating species low in contaminants and high in anti-inflammatory omega-3 fats are the best healthy choice. Species such as wild Alaskan salmon, herring, Atlantic mackerel, rainbow trout, sardines, and anchovies are some of the best sources for a healthy diet. Purchasing smaller and more diverse species helps allow larger fish stock to be less over-fished by everyone always buying the same item.

When I was living in Ireland for a couple of years, I noticed that the Irish loved to eat their fresh mackerel all the time.

When I was living in Ireland for a couple of years, I noticed that the Irish loved to eat their fresh mackerel all the time. This was always a bait fish I used when fishing for Bluefish and Stripers but I began eating mackerel and to this day just love it. These fish are strong tasting to some, but once you begin to eat them they really have great flavor and bring the sea into our inner environment and are most healthy!

I've found that when I purchase organic or hard-to-find foods that they will cost a bit more, but guess what? I just eat a little less and smaller portions can only help our obesity rates and have much less of an impact on our environment. Ah, yes — a fresh crisp mesclun salad with bits of mackerel or anchovies across the top, laced with extra virgin olive oil and a crumbling of local goat cheese – Enjoy!

Historical Society celebrates maritime history

The Cohasset Historical Society is celebrating Cohasset maritime history throughout the month of September. Save the date for Opening night on Saturday, Sept. 8.

Opening night will highlight a unique exhibit featuring relics of the many ships that were storm driven on the reefs off the Cohasset shores as well as artifacts from Cohasset's rich seafaring history.

Most wrecks occurred in the 19th century, when the shipping channel into Boston Harbor was narrow and passed close to many ledges. Ships were predominately powered by sail and at the mercy of the wind, which frequently blew them onto the rocks.

A cocktail party at the Society will celebrate Cohasset's worldwide shipping trade and current fishing and lobster industries.

More on the exhibit

Viewing Cohasset Harbor on a calm summer day, it is hard to imagine the bustling activity during the age of sail

Boys began to follow the sea at an early age, some as young as 8 or 9. There were even captains under the age of 20.

(1780-1885) when over 160 ships were built, launched, and sailed from Cohasset's Shores. There were four shipyards and 14 wharves. In 1845 Cohasset was the fourth largest fishing port in Massachusetts.

These ships were owned by Cohasset men, captained by Cohasset men and crewed by Cohasset boys. Boys began to follow the sea at an early age, some as young as 8 or 9. There were even captains under the age of 20. The call of the sea was irresistible and the dangers of life as a sailor were just challenges.

The ships from Cohasset made many crossings of the Atlantic, venturing into the Mediterranean. They sailed the East Coast to the Gulf of Mexico and even rounded Cape Horn. Their cargoes were various from coal and iron and lumber, to molasses and corn. The ships would be at sea for two or three years at a time and some never returned. One ship on its home voyage was wrecked on a reef just off the Cohasset Shore.

Much of this seafaring history will be on display at the Cohasset Historical Society in September. Come to the Opening Night, Saturday, Sept. 8, at 6 p.m. for a cocktail party celebrating Cohasset's Maritime History.

HAPPENINGS

Meet local author Suzie Hearl Canale

Author Suzie Hearl Canale will be coming to Playdipity, 132 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Suite 80, Cohasset, at 4 p.m. Friday, Aug. 17 to read her latest work, "The Candy Roses of Cape Care." This is the final installment of The Beantown Tales' environmental series.

The event is free and open to the public. Ms. Cannale will answer questions about the book and her writing. Guests are welcome to bring their own copies of The Beantown Tales or they can purchase them at the event. Playdipity will be giving away several copies as part of a raffle.

Paint collection days scheduled

Paint collection days will take place at the Recycling Transfer Facility on the last Saturday of the month through October, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Residents are encouraged to dry out latex paint using cat litter, sand or paint hardener, which can then be thrown out with regular trash. Empty cans may then be thrown into the tin can container.

Brush chipping day is Aug. 25

Residential brush will be accepted at the D.P.W. parking area from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturday, Aug. 25.

No trees over 10 inches in diameter, no stumps, firewood, briars or weeds accepted. No contractors.

Candy shop

A new family-run, old-fashioned candy shop is coming to Cohasset. The Cohasset Candy Company is hosting a "soft" opening on Saturday, Aug. 18, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Store is located at 1 Pleasant Street, Suite # 3 Cohasset in the James Erook Crossing shopping center.

OUR VIEW

Getting back in gear

While news never takes a hiatus — the quantity of news slows down somewhat over the summer months.

That should not be surprising given that town boards don't meet as often, schools are out, and lots of residents go away for a week or two. Other townspeople just like to kick back and relax and not think about "issues" or having to take the kids to dance lessons or hockey practice.

But with the start of school in a couple of weeks, that's all about to change.

The town budget season looms on the horizon, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts meet, houses of worship resume their regular schedules, youth sports get into full swing along with myriad other activities for Cohasseters of all ages.

Here at the Mariner, we're pleased to be the vehicle through which our readers either "get the word out" or "find out about" everything from who's on the dean's list to what is the latest news at Town Hall.

But if you're on the delivery end of the news — in other words you want your club announcement or letter-to-the-editor in the paper — there are some simple "rules to follow."

We accept letters, news items and happenings by email, which is one of the most efficient ways to send your news. However, we receive dozens of emails everyday, so it's not a bad idea to follow your email up with a telephone call, just to make sure your message arrived safely and wasn't inadvertently deleted. Or better yet, just ask us to hit the reply button — so you'll get the message that we received your email on your computer. Attachments should be saved as word documents; photographs should be sent as jpg attachments.

We still accept news by fax (781-741-2931) and the old-fashioned way, through the US mail, or dropped off here at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham Square, above the Upper Crust.

News items should be as concise as possible and written in a narrative form. In other words, please write your news items in a "mini-story format" using complete sentences. Try not to send us flyers, which have to be completely reworded.

Here's the scoop on how to get your news in the Mariner:

Email: editor Mary Ford at: mford@wickedlocal.com

Email: reporter Erin Dale at edale@wickedlocal.com

In person: at the Cohasset Mariner office (in the Hingham Journal Building), 73 South St., above the Upper Crust. Mail: The Cohasset Mariner, 73 South St., Hingham, MA 02043.

Sports news email: to Will Wassersug at: wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Obituaries: obits@wickedlocal.com (our obituaries are handled through classifieds advertising)

Advertising: Claudia Oliver at: coliver@wickedlocal.com

Please have your news to the Mariner by noon Wednesday morning for that week's issue, however, earlier is always better.

We welcome news tips and story ideas anytime.

Call Mary Ford, editor, at 781-741-2933; or staff reporter Erin Dale, at 781-741-2935.

We couldn't do our job without help from the community. So let us hear from you!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Heartfelt appreciation from Worley family

On behalf of my entire family we would like thank all those who came together to have this very special concert, The U.S. Navy Band Pops Ensemble, in memory of my husband, Jack Worley.

He would have been so proud. We are certainly so very proud of him. I truly don't know of anyone that is as gentle and kind as Jack was. The record turnout at the concert is a testament to how the people in the town of Cohasset felt about him. He left a mark on every life he touched.

We thank the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post#9146 for their generous donation. We thank the American Legion Post #118, and the Sons of the American Legion SQ. We thank all the efforts and contributions from the South Shore Playhouse Associates, and the Cohasset Cultural Council.

Our heartfelt thanks to Ted Carroll and Jenna McCarthy for putting together a memorable event for us all. Jack would have been very proud of the precision in which it was run! We all miss Jack terribly as I'm sure so many do. We were ever so lucky to have him for the time that we did. But we particularly are so grateful that his legacy in Cohasset, thanks to so many of Ted's efforts, is not forgotten.

Most sincerely,

Mary Worley and Family,
123 Outlook Road, Marshfield

New Senior Center would serve town well

Cohasset is a small, beautiful seaside town filled with friendly, helpful residents. Those fortunate enough to live here show their pride of ownership in the way they care for their homes and their property.

Cohasset's children are a pleasure. The youngest among us are precious, healthy, well-cared for and happy in their play groups, at nursery school, and at home with their parents and siblings. School-age children are busy with sports, music, scouts, art, and church activities. The schools offer strenuous academic work and the senior citizens are extremely proud of the students' amazing results.

Cohasset's middle-agers stay busy managing their growing families, working at advancing their careers, and volunteering whenever possible. Most are physically and financially able to enjoy sailing, golf, tennis and other social opportunities. They are the glue holding the town together.

Cohasset's seniors are retired folks with fewer family demands because their own children have become busy with their own lives near or far. Many of their spouses have died or are ill. Now they have the time to develop new interest, to try new things, to laugh with new friends over a cup of coffee. This can be accomplished at a new senior center that would offer spacious, pleasant, safe, year-round activities with adequate parking.

Cohasset can continue to be a vibrant coastal community in which to grow up, but also in which to grow old.

Judith Perry, Hugh Strain Road

COMMENTARY

New Senior Center deserves our support

PHIL MAHONEY

I have a hard time believing that there is a group in town who thinks that there isn't a legitimate need for a new Senior Center. These folks must close their eyes when they walk through the Community Center.

I have enjoyed the recent commentary on the proposed Senior Center project with the exception of one point, all of the buzz is being generated by our seniors. Let's expand the discussion. No offense to the Cat Dam, Meetinghouse Pond, or our suspended town officials, but this is a real issue that should occupy the attention of our best and brightest.

I'm a 40-something and my family falls into the "young family" category in town, but I have seen the work of the Cohasset Elder Affairs up close and personal. Several years ago, my father was diagnosed with cancer. As we wrestled with the situation and started to look at treatment options, medical coverage, and transportation to appointments, I was referred to Carol Barrett at the CEA. Carol helped me understand the specifics of Medicare and Medicaid, assisted in the application process, ensured that all of the doctor's appointments were scheduled correctly, and provided transportation for my father. Volunteers like Hamilton Tewksbury, Jack Buckley, and Pat McCarthy took over and drove my father to-and-from every treatment, sometimes as many as five times per week. Their service continues today. That is just a small snapshot of a single program at the CEA and doesn't do justice to the scope of the CEA's work and the amount of people they help. They are great people doing great things.

I have a hard time believing that there is a group in town who thinks that there isn't a legitimate need for a new Senior Center. These folks must close their eyes when they walk through the Community Center. To describe the current set up for the CEA as "Spartan" would be flattering. There isn't sufficient space to plan, organize, or execute programs of any size. Not to mention the potential safety hazards posed by its location and difficulty to access by both foot and vehicle.

The real issue is the funding for the project and this is the point that I would like to see discussed by our experts in town finance. What are our options? Budget, borrow, tax, etc.? What have other towns done? I'm embarrassed that I don't know.

For the rest of the young families in Cohasset, I urge you to pay attention and get educated in the coming weeks and months. The mission of the CEA is real, its work is outstanding, and its need for a new Senior Center is critical.

Phil Mahoney lives at 24 Wood Way.

Voter registration deadline for primary today

The last day to register to vote or change party enrollment for the State Primary is Friday Aug. 17. The Town Clerk's office will be open 8:30 a.m. to 5p.m. The State Primary is Thursday Sept. 6. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Absentee ballots are now available for a registered voter who will be unable to vote at the polls on election day due to:

- Absence from Cohasset during normal polling hours.
- Physical disability preventing one from gong to the polling place.
- Religious belief

The voter or a family member can complete the absentee ballot application. Ballots are voted in the Town Clerk's office or mailed to the voter.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Area teenagers earn community service

JON BELBER

As the weeklong program progressed, Thursday was harvest day. We set out to dig potatoes, pull scallions, gently snip lettuce and cut the kale.

As the farmers reach peak season for a hopeful harvest of tomatoes, salads, leafy greens, root crops, tubers and peppers, to name a few, there are some other hard working folks seeking harvest as well. Recently at Holly Hill Farm, there has been a couple groups of high school teenagers earning community service by helping out at the farm, completing chores and gathering produce for a local homeless shelter in Quincy. At this time of year as many New Englanders pick from their own garden, frequent a local farmers market or stop by a road side farm stand, this program for teens will help provide some organic produce for those who may not have access or means to afford it.

Dubbed the Farm Pantry program, these teenagers from Milton, Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham and Norwell have spent upwards of 20 hours at Holly Hill to earn their community service. Before the end of the week harvest and delivery, the students helped clean the chicken yard, prepare new growing beds and weeded some farm rows. They also sowed carrot and arugula seeds for future Fall harvests, so as the cycle of growing healthy produce will happen in the coming weeks as well. Many of the students had come to the farm either for an elementary school program (now many years ago), or participated in a Summer program at the farm. All the kids brought a willingness to work and a commitment to the tasks at hand.

As the weeklong program progressed, Thursday was harvest day. We set out to dig potatoes, pull scallions, gently snip lettuce and cut the kale. After washing and weighing the produce, the students packed it away in tubs and placed it all in the fridge for the next day delivery. The students were not the ones to plant the potatoes and kale that they picked that day. Those seeds were sown weeks and months ago, in advance of our work for the shelter. It would be grand to have kids come for most of the Summer, if not start out in early Spring with the first seedlings, so as they might see the greater cycle and the length of time and care it takes to bring a plant to bear. Thus it would be a true farm apprentice program that takes one through the seasons and perhaps offers insight to walk in the shoes and boots of a modern day organic family farmer.

On Friday, we met on the Cohasset commuter rail platform for the 8:04 am train to Quincy Center, with our readiness to lug the bins from the train stop in Quincy to Father Bill's Place at 38 Broad Street. With a hand held paper map and the kids' hand held GPS map, we did transport our produce to Paul Anderson, the kitchen coordinator at Father Bill's. He is in charge of preparing meals at the overcrowded shelter, where 50 beds, and even more people for daily meals, find them in need of sources for food, as well as other supplies. The kids and I had a tour of the facility, learned of the folks who frequent the shelter, and helped unload the produce. Mr. Anderson mentioned that he would be able to alter his afternoon produce order based on what we had brought, and was even going to search the internet for some kale recipes. With the 20 hours of service complete, the students departed and boarded the train, having filled a need, taken part in the fast growing local, organic food movement and seen the fruits of their labor reach the hands of a needy, nearby community.

ONE-DAY ADVENTURES

A great day trip to Martha's Vineyard

JOHN MCMAHON

The only hardship will be getting up before sunrise to drive 60 miles south to the Woods Hole Ferry Landing in time to catch the 7 a.m. to Vineyard Haven, but it is imperative to get an early start.

My sister Susie came to visit us for a weekend last summer with one request – to spend a day on Martha's Vineyard. My sister had never been to "The Vineyard" and I guess you could say it was on her bucket list. I saw this as an exciting challenge, to orchestrate an unforgettable experience within a narrow 15-hour timeframe for a first-timer. While Martha's Vineyard is merely 20.5 miles in length, the "must" list is much longer. Now, I pass this consumer-tested experience along to you, the reader.

The only hardship will be getting up before sunrise to drive 60 miles south to the Woods Hole Ferry Landing in time to catch the 7 a.m. to Vineyard Haven, but it is imperative to get an early start. The 7-mile ferry ride provides beautiful views coming and going, so grab an iced coffee at Coffee Obsession in Falmouth or Woods Hole and enjoy the ocean breeze up top. The agenda is admittedly ambitious, so a rental car is necessary (vehicle reservations for the ferry are typically made months prior). Just a few steps off the ferry in Vineyard Haven is AA Auto Rental, with reasonable prices, a good range of makes/models and friendly service; they are a safe bet.

One of the benefits of arriving at Vineyard Haven before 8 a.m. is you can be one step ahead of the crowds at the Art Cliff Diner. Since 1943 one of the most beloved breakfast spots on "The Vineyard" according to Trip Advisor, Urban Spoon and Yelp. It truly lives up to the hype, with a very creative menu and cozy, somewhat raucous environment. I can't think of a better way to start the day. Some of my favorite standard menu items are the almond crusted French toast and the blueberry pancakes, but don't forget to survey the specials.

No later than 10:30 a.m. you should be lathering on the SPF 50 at Joseph Silva State Beach. A 2-mile stretch of sand with mild kid-friendly waves and easy access off of Beach Road (between Edgartown and Oak Bluffs), State Beach is Destination # 2. Make sure the group takes a walk over to "Jaws Bridge" (featured prominently in the 1975 classic). Some thrill seekers in your group may choose to hop off the railing and plunge roughly one-story into the chilly Atlantic Ocean. Jaws Bridge is fun for spectators too so no one should feel left out. If anyone has a difficult time relaxing on the beach for three plus hours, they can walk across Beach Road to Island Spirit Kayak Rentals, paddle around Sengeknotacket Pond ($20/one hour) and explore the island's rich wildlife.

Next, experience a piece of history right in the center of Oak Bluffs by taking a ride of the Flying Horses Carousel. Built in 1876 (considered the nation's oldest carousel), it originally operated in Coney Island, N.Y., but moved into the iconic red barn in the center of Oak Bluffs in 1884. Rides are only $2 (or 10 rides for $15) and kids will enjoy trying to catch the elusive brass ring, which entitles them to a free ride and more importantly a lasting memory. Also, while in Oak Bluffs, head up to Skinny's Fat Sandwiches on Circuit Avenue for a quick, late lunch. Arguably the best sandwiches on the island (Humphrey's in Edgartown is also a contender) with great healthy wraps.

Now the grown-ups get to do a little shopping in Edgartown. An hour is plenty of time to wander in and out of all the great boutiques, mostly selling high-end apparel and jewelry. It's very nice to take a break from the usual chains (unless you consider Vineyard Vines or Lily Pulitzer to be chains). Portobello Road on Dock Street is a nice place to find a special gift or Martha's Vineyard memento and if you are looking for some summer reading, try Edgartown Books on Main Street (their staff picks are usually good). A lot of interesting new galleries and shops have opened up on Winter Street recently too, so make sure you don't miss them.

It's time to head 15 miles west to Menemsha Public Beach for an absolutely epic sunset. Good to arrive around 6 p.m. to ensure a parking spot (very limited) and don't forget the beach chairs, picnic blanket and camera. Once you have secured a good spot for watching the sunset, walk over to Larsen's Fish Market for some lobster bisque (you can watch the lobster boats come in right out back) and/or The Bite for coconut-fried shrimp. Back on the beach, as the sun disappears over the horizon, the crowd will enthusiastically applaud and you will likely never forget it.

It's time to head back to the mainland (the last ferry back to Woods Hole is 9:30 p.m.) but there is still time for one more excellent experience. Go to Mad Martha's Ice Cream in Vineyard Haven or brave the 20-minute line at "no longer under the radar" Back Door Donuts (ask what is hot, preferably the apple fritter). Either way, a sweet ending to a perfect day on Martha's Vineyard.

FOR THE RECORD

Your local news and so much more

GREGORY MATHIS

We're part of a sizeable media organization that can leverage international, national, and state news to augment our solid local coverage on the web, where information is king.

As the U.S. women's gymnastics team and its individuals were vaulting to success and certain stardom in the recently completed Summer Olympics in London, we took a little bit of a tumble ourselves with our web audience, who were disappointed that results were being posted in real time on our Wicked Local website without some type of spoiler alert.

With London being five hours ahead of us here on the East Coast, it was a balancing act for many between reporting the news/results from the Olympics and keeping an element of surprise for those tuning in at night to watch the highly produced and manipulated coverage provided by NBC and its Olympic affiliates.

Some media outlets attempted to warn their audience that they were about to give event results, but the spoiler alerts I saw did nothing more than prepare you for hearing the results, whether you wanted to or not.

We received an email from a reader upset that for the second time during the week, they went to their town's Wicked Local website for the usual news, "only to have the gymnastics results spoiled."

Another letter-writer went so far as to say the anticipation of the women's gymnastics competition was ruined because she saw the results on her Wicked Local website. She stated she had taken "Herculean efforts to stay away from digital media" because she didn't want to know the results. She didn't think she needed to stay away from Wicked Local, because as she stated, she was just looking for her town news.

In my opinion no one delivers local news and information like our community newspapers and Wicked Local websites. It's great to hear our readers share those same thoughts. And while local news continues to be a focus for our newspapers, we can have far greater reach on the web. We're part of a sizeable media organization that can leverage international, national, and state news to augment our solid local coverage on the web, where information is king.

Those additional resources make our sites a destination for all types of content from many sources. As I've written about before in this space, we provide extensive business coverage through The Street, a national business news provider. Our local sports coverage is enhanced with professional and college content from Bleacher Report, the fourth-largest sports media site in the United States.

You'll also find Popular Videos on our story pages that display national videos of interest.

In our News Now section on the Homepage, you'll find tidbits of information not necessarily local, but could be of local interest, labeled as "Morning jolt", "What to watch", and some sites include "Today in the news" or "Morning minutes."

Coming out of the gate almost six years ago, we wanted our Wicked Local websites to the place for all information; one-stop shopping, so to speak. We know you'll come for local news and information, but we want you to stay as long as possible and find other content of interest as well, even if it means playing the role of spoiler.

TM Milanoski performance review slated for Tuesday

While there will not be any public participation, members of the public may contact the selectmen with their views.

The Board of Selectmen will conduct a performance review of Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski during their Aug. 21 meeting. Milanoski's contract with the town stipulates a review six months into his employment; he came onboard as interim town manager in March.

Under the state's Open Meeting Law, the review must be conducted by the selectmen in open session, provided the board does not discuss the town manager's reputation, character, health, or any complaints or charges against him. While there will not be any public participation, members of the public may contact the selectmen with their views. The board will make specific recommendations for improvement in the areas where they see shortcomings.

Milanoski's contract lists eight priorities for his first six months on the job; these priorities will also act as the criteria for the review:

1. Communication with the board
2. Work together closely and harmoniously with the board and town committees
3. Effectively advise the board of all matters that require board action
4. Support the finance director with closing fiscal year 2012 books and overage
5. Implement the board's fiscal policies in fiscal year 2013 and organizational plan
6. Monitor legal expenditures and advise on cost/benefit of litigation strategies
7. Apprise the board, in a timely manner, of any employee or union grievances
8. Initiate a program to develop policies and procedures and companion manual.

LABOR DAY WEEKEND

Tolman MDA Telethon Party

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Plans are in the works for the 36th Annual Tolman MDA (Muscular Dystrophy Association) Telethon Party.

The event's originator, Jay Tolman, grew up in Hingham and now lives in Cohasset with his family. The gathering attracts many Hingham, Cohasset, Weymouth, and other South Shore residents as well as others who travel long distances to attend year after year.

An exciting new feature has been added for 2012 to kick off the Labor Day weekend event — fundraising Zumbathon. (Zumba is a popular dance fitness program.)

Last year marked the end of an era, with Jerry Lewis stepping aside as host of the annual national MDA Telethon. At that time, the national broadcast changed from 24 hours to six – and to three this year — but the Hingham party remains a 24-hour event. "We intend to maintain our 'telethon tradition,'" Tolman said. The national telethon has a new name this year – "MDA Show of Strength."

The 2012 Telethon party will run from Sunday, Sept. 2 at 6 p.m. until 6 p.m. Monday, Sept. 3, offering raffles, live music, refreshments, and fun for kids and adults alike.

The Zumbathon will take place Sunday from 7 to 9 p.m., led by well-known certified Zumba instructor Christine Ricci. (Zumba is a popular -dance fitness program.)

For the third year in a row, the event will take place at Congregation Sha'ray Shalom, 1112 Main St.

The party is an opportunity to have a good time as well as to drop a donation into the famous fishbowl. The event has raised more than $500,000 to date. This year's goal is $20,000. Proceeds benefit MDA research and the many patient services the Association provides.

For full details, see next week's Hingham Journal. Also visit tolmantelethon.com for more information.

Cohasset Historical Society museums open

Cohasset Historical Society's museums are now open for the summer. Located at 4 Elm St., downtown Cohasset, are the 1810 Captain John Wilson House and the 18th Century Bates Ship Chandlery or Maritime Museum. The museums tell of the early history of Cohasset. The Wilson House shows how a family might have lived and includes furnishings and quilts from the early 1800s. The Maritime Museum has a display of maritime artifacts that show the seafaring history of Cohasset, including model ships, artifacts brought back or made on voyages and information on Minot's Ledge Lighthouses. Both buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The museums are open 1 to 4 p.m., Wednesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturdays. For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

HEDLUND REPORT

An end to 'X Registration'

BOB HEDLUND

It is referred to as an "X-Registration" because the Registry of Motor Vehicles places an X before the registration number when an applicant does not produce a driver's license at the time a vehicle is being registered.

Often I am discouraged by the inaction on Beacon Hill when it comes to illegal immigration reform. For far too long a vast majority of them have been turning a blind eye as illegal immigrants register vehicles, operate on our roadways, receive taxpayer funded benefits, and even receive preference over legal US citizens for public housing.

However, during this year's budget debate the Massachusetts House of Representatives and Senate took a giant step forward by voting to include legislation that will close a loophole often used by those in our State illegally. For seven years I have pushed for reform of our motor vehicle registration laws.

Some illegal immigrants have been able to register and operate vehicles because the Registry of Motor Vehicles only requires applicants to include their name, address, proof of insurance, and date of birth on the registration application to secure a so-called "X" registration. It is referred to as an "X-Registration" because the Registry of Motor Vehicles places an X before the registration number when an applicant does not produce a driver's license at the time a vehicle is being registered.

The policy of the Registry of Motor Vehicles effectively enabled unlicensed drivers and illegal immigrants to operate on the Commonwealth's roadways.

In 2005, I was alerted to the problem of "X-Registration" by local law enforcement officials who were routinely pulling over operators who had no license and an "X-Registration." Since that time, I have proposed state level immigration reform efforts that would make our roadways safer and make sure those who are here illegally do not receive benefits or preference over legal US citizens.

The legislation that was agreed upon by both branches and sent to the Governor in the FY2013 budget requires any person that registers a vehicle in Massachusetts hold a license, social security number, or other proof of legal US residence. After reviewing the budget for ten days, the Governor decided to amend this legislation removing the word "legal" and requiring only proof of Massachusetts residence to register a vehicle. This would allow an individual to register a vehicle using a cell phone bill, credit card bill, cable bill, or even just a cancelled check.

On July 12, both branches of the legislature again took a giant step forward towards real immigration reform by rejecting the Governor's changes on "X-Registration" effectively ending the practice retroactively to July 1, 2012.

I truly believe this was one of the most practical yet simple initiatives we have passed in recent years in Beacon Hill. This legislation strikes at the heart of the support structure that, among other privileges, has allowed illegal immigrants to register and operate motor vehicles all while avoiding prosecution for immigration violations.

There is a lot of work still to be done in order to achieve the immigration reforms the people of the Commonwealth deserve. Illegal immigrants are still being placed higher than legal US citizens on the public housing list, receiving taxpayer funded benefits, and allowed to stay even after breaking the law. While lawmakers in Washington D.C. continue to fail the American people on comprehensive federal immigration reform, I will continue to lead efforts for state level immigration reform to make sure our roadways are safe, our streets are safe, and those here legally who are in need of assistance are not playing second fiddle to someone who is here illegally.

State Senator Robert Hedlund represents the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Hingham.

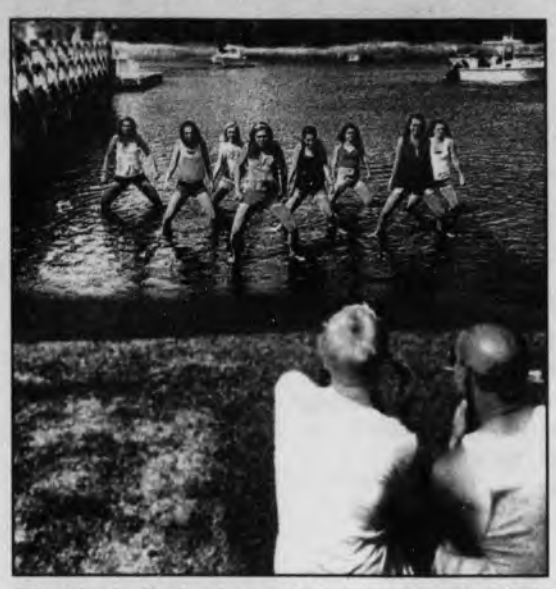
Volume 38 - Report No. 32 August 10, 2012



Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

CHANGES IN THE STATE'S ENERGY LAWS (S 2395) House 149-6, Senate 38-0, approved and Gov. Deval Patrick signed into law a bill aimed at reducing the high cost of electricity in Massachusetts and creating more competition. Specific provisions would end the current long-term contract program under the Green Communities Act by December 2012. It would also require investor-owned utilities to competitively bid proposals from renewable energy suppliers for long-term renewable energy contracts; increase the overall net metering cap from 3 percent to 6 percent, thus doubling the existing limits on municipal and privately owned projects that generate their own renewable energy; increase from six to ten months the time Department of Public Utilities (DPU) has to review rate cases; and prevent the DPU from approving rate case settlements more than once every six years. Supporters said the average 14.24 cents per kilowatt hour in Massachusetts is well above the national average of 10 cents and is the seventh highest in the nation. They noted the bill would make several changes to bring costs down and called it a jobs bill that would allow Massachusetts companies to hire more employees by reducing energy costs. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against it.)	Y	Y
MENTAL HEALTH ANALYSIS (H 4200) House 152-0, Senate 39-0, overrode Gov. Patrick's veto of a provision providing for an independent analysis of the availability of the state's public and private mental health services. The override came following the Legislature's restoral of $5.1 million that was cut by Gov. Patrick for the Taunton State Hospital to keep the psychiatric facility open to serve patients with mental illnesses at a diminished, 45-bed capacity, down from 169 beds. Supporters of the analysis said the two items are related. They argued Taunton's 45 beds should remain open temporarily to serve local residents while a long overdue independent analysis of the state's mental health services is completed. They noted that the analysis would allow the public a sufficient opportunity to offer comment is crucial in devising a long-term plan on how to deliver necessary services in a cost-effective manner. The Patrick administration says the antiquated 150-year-old Taunton facility is not cost-effective and notes some of its patients will be transferred to the new Worcester Recovery Center and Hospital. In his veto message, the governor noted his support for the closure of Taunton Hospital. He also proposed that his administration conduct an alternative study of mental health services. (A "Yes" vote is for the analysis. A "No" vote is against it.)	Y	Y
POWER OUTAGES (S 2404) House 154-0, approved and the governor signed into law a bill regulating the actions of utility companies during and following power outages. The measure was filed in response to the slow reaction by power companies to widespread power outages across the state during Tropical Storm Irene last summer and the big October 2011 snowstorm. The bill requires public utility companies to provide thrice-daily estimates to customers on when electricity will be restored following a 24-hour damage assessment period. It also requires the companies to set up a well-staffed call center in Massachusetts during major storms. Supporters said the bill would ensure the utility companies work as quickly as possible to restore power. They noted the lack of communication, the chaos and incidents in which people died or became seriously ill during prior lengthy outages. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)	*	Y
PROTECT TEMPORARY DAY WORKERS (H 4304) House approved 126-28 and Gov. Patrick signed into law a bill designed to help protect temporary day workers. A key provision prohibits staffing agencies from charging the worker various fees including the cost of registering with the staffing agency or for performing a criminal record check and from charging any fee that would reduce a worker's pay below the minimum wage. The measure would also require the agencies to provide their workers with a form clearly informing them of their wages, location of the job, name of the company, whether meals are provided and expected hours and benefits, such as worker's compensation. Supporters said the bill will finally regulate staffing agencies, which often take advantage of many of the state's day workers. They argued this will protect these workers, who currently wait every morning for a van to pick them up and take them to a job at which they have no idea of the pay, the work involved and what will happen if they get hurt on the jobsite. Opponents said they support the rights of these workers but argued the abuses by the agencies are already illegal under state law and should be enforced. They argued the bill will add regulations that already exist and will only serve to lead to more bureaucracy. (A Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against it.)	*	Y
"RIGHT TO REPAIR" COMPROMISE REACHED (H 4362) House 153-0 approved and Gov. Patrick signed into law a bill that would require auto manufacturers to sell to local non-dealer repair shops the complete repair information and diagnostic tools currently only provided to franchised dealer service centers. The bill was a compromise agreed to by competing sides on the issue — automakers and leaders of a 2012 "right to repair" ballot question that supports requiring the sale to local shops. Supporters said the compromise is a good one that would facilitate access to vehicle diagnostic information while protecting proprietary information. They argued the bill will allow consumers to choose where they want their cars repaired and foster more competition which leads to consumer savings. The deadline for removing the question from the ballot has passed but both sides say they will work together to inform voters that the ballot question is no longer necessary. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)	*	Y
ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT BILL (H 4352) - Gov. Patrick vetoed several sections and then signed into law an economic development and jobs bill. Provisions include a sales tax holiday that will allow consumers to buy most products under $2,500 without paying the state's 6.25 percent sales tax on Saturday, August 11, and Sunday, August 12; a two-year extension of existing state and local permits held by developers who had been unable to proceed with their projects because of tight credit markets; and creation of a MassWorks Infrastructure Program, which will serve as a one-stop shop for infrastructure funding. Patrick vetoed an expansion of brownfields tax credits, a tax credit equal to the current $456 minimum corporate excise tax for all corporations for their first three tax years, restructuring of corporate tax payments and an increase in historic rehabilitation tax credits. He said the state cannot afford the loss of millions of dollars in revenue.

FILMED IN COHASSET

Teen pop singer shoots summer-themed video

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The video for Cardoso's soon-to-be-released single, "Yes," was shot in familiar spots around Cohasset, including JJ'S Dairy Hut and the harbor, shown here.

Cohasset recently served as the backdrop for a music video featuring teen pop sensation Simone Cardoso. The 17-year-old singer hails from New Bedford and is no stranger to the big stage. According to a press release, she is the youngest former member of the all-female pop group Varsity Girls and has opened up for groups such as Big Time Rush, LMFAO, and Jordan Knight. She has also performed for President Obama and with Keith Lockhart and The Boston Pops.

Jeff Gulko of Cloud 9 Partners, who represents Cardoso, said in a press release that Cohasset made for an ideal video location.

"With this being Simone's first solo music video, it could not be more important that our choice of themes and visuals be in line with her brand all while remaining aesthetically pleasing."

The video for Cardoso's soon-to-be-released single, "Yes," was shot in familiar spots around Cohasset, including JJ'S Dairy Hut and the harbor. The shoot took place two weeks ago.

"We wanted a large component of this video to include scenic outdoor scenes to present the quintessential summer scene that we all can remember from our childhoods," said Gulko. "After visiting the area, we immediately knew that Cohasset was indeed our best option."

"After visiting the area, we immediately knew that Cohasset was indeed our best option."
Jeff Gulko, Cloud 9 Partners

The video and song is scheduled to debut in early September, as well as on a new major network TV show.

Billy Dufresne of Cloud 9 Partners said in the press release that filming in Cohasset was a breeze. "I was impressed with how easy it was to do film related business with the town of Cohasset. From our initial inquiry to the town, to working with [Acting Town Manager] Mike Milanoski, [Assistant to the Town Manager] Jenn Oram and Tracy Connors of the selectmen's office, things could have not been easier."

Milanoski said in a phone call that he was happy to play host to the crew.

"They contacted us and we helped them meet with some local sites in town and restaurants including JJ's," he said. "They went there and did some filming and were able to patronize and spend money in many of the businesses in town."

Dufresne also thanked Ted Carr of the Economic Development Committee, representatives of the Cohasset Harbor Master, and Cohasset Police for their assistance.

Carr said the 25-person music video crew was respectful and professional—especially the video's star.

"The young lady couldn't have been more pleasant or polite," Carr said of Cardoso, adding that the singer is "incredibly talented."

Members of the crew and parents of the video's young stars also spent a good deal of time and money in the town during the Sunday shoot.

"When they filmed at JJ's, they bought lunch for everyone [in the production] and ice cream for everyone waiting in line," said Carr. Mothers of the video's dancers also bought outfits for their girls in Ports and Company. Once filming wrapped, the crew ate dinner at Mr. Dooley's.

"They added to the local economy and were terrific to work with," Carr said of the crew. "They had choices when it came to filming places, and I'm very pleased they had a positive experience in Cohasset."

The production company, in turn, praised the town for being so welcoming.

"It is evident that Cohasset is open for business when it comes to film production, and we hope to work with this great town again in the future," Dufresne said.

The fact that Cohasset is open for business as a film-friendly town is something that town officials have been showcasing. In the spring, officials including Carr and Superintendent of Schools Barbara Cataldo made a bid to have the Adam Sandler movie "Grown-Ups 2" film in Cohasset. Members of the movie's crew came to town in February to scout the location, and Cataldo gave them a tour. The town ultimately lost out to North Shore communities, but Milanoski said Cohasset was the film production company's second choice.

Hollywood came back to Cohasset in May when the reality cooking show "Kitchen Nightmares," starring celebrity chef Gordon Ramsay, shot scenes on the town common. Ramsay served up clam chowder and fish and chips from the Barefoot Bob's food truck to curious Cohasseters who stopped by— and signed a release so they could be on camera.

It's all part of the initiative to bring a little bit of Tinsel Town to Cohasset. Carr said the Economic Development Committee is planning to create a website to promote Cohasset as a film destination, complete with photos, videos, and links to the town website and Massachusetts Film Office site. The company behind Cardoso's video will also provide a video and productions stills for the town to use for promotional purposes.

Milanoski explained, "It's important to meet with different movie productions... We always want them to keep Cohasset on their radar screen."

PAN-MASS CHALLENGE

Why we ride

By Mark Gardner
Wicked Local Marshfield

Just over eight years ago, I was lying in a hospital bed in Boston having undergone five hours of surgery to repair a badly herniated disc in my back. It wasn't life-threatening, not by a long shot, but my long-held ambition, to ride in the much-feted Pan Mass Challenge, now seemed a long way away.

Fast forward to last Saturday, and there I was, straddling my bicycle listening to Red Sox star, David Ortiz, in a parking lot at Babson College counting down to the start of the two-day race. My wife, Deirdre, stood next to me holding my hand. I was nervous about the ride in spite of all the training I'd done over the past two years. Riding over 170 miles, over two days, along with thousands of others, seemed an almost impossible task to me. But then a young woman walked by with angel wings on her back, and attached to her riding shirt was a list of names. I didn't need to ask, and I certainly didn't need any more motivation.

The Saturday portion of the ride, from Wellesley to Bourne, took place in incredible heat. It was oppres-

Monumental year on the ice

SCHL celebrates 25 years at Hobomock

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The "Sunday Social" has started up again.

The Men's South Coastal Hockey League started its 2012-2013 season, which is the 25th year at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

The no-check hockey league, which is strictly enforced and the teams wear professional hockey uniforms and has its own media contract with eight towns broadcasting its "Game of the Week," on their local cable access has grown into a happening each Sunday night they play for 34 weeks during the year.

They have two different 15-week sessions, fall and winter, with playoffs to determine the champion of each.

"It is just a great thing," said Art Riccio, who is the commissioner of the league and one of the founders along with league President Rick Kelly of Hanover. "One it gets in your blood, you don't want to leave. It is a great night out with the guys."

"Nobody wants to leave," added Kelly. "It is a great night out with the guys. It is Sunday night out and Sunday works for guys as far as their job goes because you work all week and it works for us. The (Hobomock) arena likes us so much, that they gave us the best of prime ice time, the early hours and let us do all the things that we do here. We have been here going on 25 years which is a wonderful thing for them."

The league was founded in 1988, and it has a low turnover rate of players. You have to be 35 or older to compete in the league, which has two divisions, Classics and Legends.

The Classics Division, which is the younger and faster level, is made up of the original six teams of the National Hockey League (the teams wear the original six uniforms) and the older Legends, six teams wear World Hockey Association uniforms.

The league has more than 200 skaters in the two divisions, and only two percent did not renew their league contracts.

"The unique thing about this league," Kelly said, "is that we have people with diverse skills. The three of us that run the league, Art Riccio, Bill Sawtelle, and myself we all have unique skills in what we do and we don't try to do the other guys jobs.

"We depend on each other for that. We then have other people in the league, a CPA, a league attorney and

CONCUSSION CONFERENCE

Conference in Cohasset

Kennedy Brothers PT hosting free seminar

Kennedy Brothers Physical Therapy will be holding a conference on concussions and head trauma in youth and high school sports. The conference will be held at the Kennedy Brothers Physical Therapy clinic on route 3A in Cohasset on Thursday, August 23 at 7:00 p.m. Preregistration is required, however due to the importance of the subject, it will be free to the public.

Never before has the need to be informed been as crucial. Research from all over the world continues to discover the severe effects and the prevalence of concussions. Unfortunately, the more we learn about head trauma the more we see the potentially devastating impact on our young athletes.

Rule changes, equipment modifications, preventative measures, and treatments are undergoing dramatic and rapid changes. Based on the latest studies these changes may only be the tip of the iceberg.

Jake Kennedy, MSPT, Director of Kennedy Brothers, has seen the effects of concussion and head trauma first hand while working with young athletes for over 20 years. "The evolution of youth sports is at a critical juncture.

TALKIN' GOLF

McLain making all the rounds

PAUL HARBER

Eddie McLain pauses on the 18th hole, his final hole of the round, but he plans to play many more. PHOTO / PAUL HARBER

Ed McClain's tee shot on the 11th hole, a nifty par-3 at South Shore Country Club in Hingham, fades into a huge tree that frames the right side of the green.

The ball ricochets among the branches and kicks out toward the putting surface, rolling right at the flagstick.

"Damn, you're the luckiest guy I know," said one of his playing partners.

"You wanna rethink that," Ed replied with his omnipresent smile.

It's been a tumultuous five years for McClain, 61, of Weymouth.

It began when he damaged tendons in his right wrist.

Doctors operated and McClain, a single-digit handicapper, counted the days before he could walk up to the first tee and hit a booming drive down the fairway.

But that was only the beginning.

He had hip replacement surgery soon after.

That was followed by open heart-surgery, but that's the easy stuff.

Two years ago he was diagnosed with a malignant brain tumor.

"Doctors told me I had 18 months to live," began McClain last Sunday.

"That was 14 months ago," he added, with a twinkle in his eye and a big smile.

His favorite expression is, "I ain't dead yet!"

He says it to his wife, Linda, and to his multitude of close friends at the Hingham golf club.

He said that after shooting an exceptional 9-over par 81, which is remarkable considering how he negotiates the golf course.

"I don't have the strength to walk, carrying my clubs and other devices," said McLain. "I have to take a cart, now."

His "other devices" is a 10-pound battery inside a case slung over his shoulder.

An insulated wire runs from the battery to what resembles a hairnet on the top of his head.

Inside the white netting are metal connections that send impulses to the tumor in his brain, hopefully, curtailing its growth.

McLain has to wear it most of the day and night.

Every two days he takes it off to shave his head.

Then he applies a gel to his baldpate before he puts on the hairnet.

"Fortunately, it doesn't get in the way of my swing," said McLain.

"And finally, my golf game is improving. At the beginning of the season, I couldn't hit my tee shot 125 yards. Now, I'm almost out there where I used to hit it."

Some might call McLain courageous.

He just shakes his head.

"What am I supposed to do? Stay home and feel bad for myself. I like golf. I like the people here. I'm going to do it as long as I can and enjoy every day."

George Kimball, a former South Shore member and Boston Herald sports columnist, was dying of throat cancer not long ago. He marched on to the end. His philosophy was to ignore the cancer and live the days he had as best he could.

McLain isn't quitting, either.

He has come to terms with his mortality and is enjoying every day.

Frodigh captures State Junior title

It was a fitting end for Patrick Frodigh of the Dedham Country & Polo Country.

Under perfect skies at Oakley Country Club on Wednesday, Frodigh carded a final round score of 2-under par 69 to win the 2012 Massachusetts Junior Amateur Championship by a four-stroke margin. He finished with a three-round score of 4-under par 209.

It marks Frodigh's first MGA Championship win and his second title in the past 10 months.

"It means a lot to me," said Frodigh, who won a Future Collegians World Tour event held at Notre Dame University last October. "Hopefully this win can bring me to different places and give me more opportunities."

Frodigh capped off a memorable week of golf by firing his approach shot on the 358-yard, par 4 18th hole to four feet. He drained the birdie putt – his 12th of the championship – to earn the right to have his named etched on the Charles E. Mason Trophy.

"This is probably my biggest win," said Frodigh, who will be a senior at Westwood High School in the fall. "Hopefully now I will get more notice from colleges."

Collegiate coaches would have to be impressed by Frodigh's play all week long, especially on day three when he fought off a strong charge by Jake Shuman (Blue Hill CC).

Entering the final round with a two-stroke advantage over Shuman, Frodigh played even par golf through his first five holes but watched as his lead disappeared as a result of strong play by Shuman who – for the second straight day – made birdies on the 4th, 5th and 6th holes.

"When he pushed back, I was even par and I knew that I had to make a couple of birdies to try to extend my lead," said Frodigh.

With the pressure building, Frodigh delivered.

He matched Shuman's birdie on the 529-yard, par 5 6th hole and then gained back his advantage thanks to birdies on the 9th and 10th holes. That stellar play – Frodigh was 3-under par through that five-hole stretch – coupled with a costly double bogey by Shuman on the 7th hole gave Frodigh the opening he would need.

"[Shuman] was leaving a bunch of putts dead center," said Frodigh, who dazzled the gallery by making a 30-foot putt on the 9th hole. "It really could have been a close match but I guess that is just how it goes."

Frodigh capped off his round in fitting fashion with that remarkable shot on the finishing hole.

"My approach shot on 18 was what I had planned to do but I didn't think that it would be that tight," said Frodigh. "I was looking and hoping for a birdie to finish off."

And he did just that and then took a moment to savor his MGA Championship victory.

While most high school sophomores are getting ready for classes with back to school shopping, Meghan Khang, 14, of Rockland High, was in Ohio last week competing in the US Women's Amateur Golf Championship at The Country Club. Khang did well for herself. She carded a 4-over 76 in the first round and a 1-over 73 in the second to earn her way into a 15-golfers-for-14-berths sudden death playoff. Yes, she advanced to match play, but faced the No. 1 seed and favorite Hyo-Joo Kim in the first round and was eliminated 7 and 6 . . . Doug Clapp of Walpole and Old Sandwich Club in Plymouth and Scott Congdon of Foxboro qualified for the US Mid-Amateur Championship, which will be played Sept. 8-13 at Conway Farms Golf Club in Lake Forest, Ill. Clapp fashioned a 2-under 68 to share medalist honors at Wellesley Country Club while Congdon shot an even par 72 at Springfield Country Club . . . If there is one thing the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts does better than its male counterpart, the Massachusetts Golf Association, is that it holds to state championships . . . One is for match play, which concluded recently at Brae Burn CC in Newton. Claire Sheldon of The Country Club successfully defended her title. The other is stroke play, which is being contested this week at Marshfield Country Club. It is called the Grace B. Keyes Cup and look for five-time WGAM Player of the Year Tara Joy Connelly of Cohasset GC to be considered the favorite, having cut her baby teeth on this course, learning the game as a junior . . . West Bridgewater native Mike Calef captured the 84th West Texas Amateur in Abilene after severe weather shortened the event to 36 holes. Calef, who won last month's Mass State Amateur and is also the reigning Mass. Mid-Amateur champion, fired a 7-under 135 (67-68) for a one-stroke victory. Half of the Sunday final round was played before thunderstorms forced a cancellation and Calef was declared the winner . . . Ryan Riley of Easton finished third at 4-under 136 (69-67) and Herbie Aikens of Kingston placed fourth at 3-under 137 (67-70) at last week's Mass. Public Links Championship at George Wright GC in Hyde Park . . . Bob Giusti of the Country Club of Halifax was the top local finisher in 12th place (75-70-145) at last week's NEPGA Senior Championship at Okemo Valley GC in Ludlow, Vt. . . . At last week's Norfolk County Junior Classic at Presidents GC, Patrick Jenkins won the ages 15-17 division with a 74, Dan Neidermire was second (76), Matthew Walsh was third (77), and Jonathan Ducharme, Kevin Walsh and Trevor Schramm tied for fourth (78). In the ages 12-14 division, Matt Daley took top honors with a 78, Connor Anderson was second (79), and Will Higgins was third (81).

New season begins in SCHL

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The season may be new, but some things remain the same.

The Maple Leafs of the Classics Division of the South Coastal Hockey League have owned the Canadiens. They have not lost to them in their 33 games and the streak improved to 34 in the opening game for both teams.

Shawn Malloy scored two of his three goals in the first three minutes and he assisted on another as the Leafs rolled to a 9-4 win over the Canadiens.

Tim Ryan scored two goals, John Carrig and Mike Maher both of Marshfield, Mike Bartlett of Pembroke, and Jeff Gauthier added a goal each for the Leafs, who scored the first five goals in the first 10 minutes of the opening period and the last four in the final eight minutes of the game.

Marty DeCourcey of Rockland had four assists, Bartlett had three, Gauthier and Marshfield's Dave Denton had two each while Maher and Paul Maier also of Marshfield had one each for the Leafs.

Glen Harnisch of Marshfield and Duxbury's Don Dudley both had a goal and an assist for the Canadiens who climbed to within one, 5-4 in the third period after they trailed, 5-0 in the first period. Pembroke's Mike Martin and Tom Curran scored a goal each for the Canadiens.

Bartlett scored off a feed by Malloy on a 2-on-1 situation 27 seconds after Martin's goal brought the Canadiens to within one, 5-4 to spark the Leafs four goal run in the final eight minutes.

Mike Martin scored his second goal of the game with 10:45 left in the game as the Bruins rallied from a 3-1 deficit for a 3-3 tie with the Black Hawks in the opening game for both.

Dan Sloan of Abington also scored in the second period and John Tympanick scored the lone goal in the shootout for the Bruins. The two teams each scored a goal in the shoot out. Kevin Parrish, Tony Rota, and John Dunn scored the goals for the Black Hawks in regulation. Pembroke's Paul Lyons scored the goal for the Hawks in the shoot out.

HOCKEY

we have a lot of people with unique skills that take the time to make sure that we do everything right. If somebody does not act the way that they should act we throw them out. Just think, this fall we have 205 players and only three dropped out from last spring. That kind of says something right there. I can't think of a hockey league that has a turnover rate of less than two percent."

"We try to make things even," said Sawtelle of Pembroke, who is the player personnel director. "We have a couple of simple rules. Our first rule is the quality of the individual, our second rule is team parity or league parity, whichever you prefer. The third rule is the level of the hockey player. We have been fortunate. The players that have left is because something in their life or jobs get in the way. They may try to get back in, but it is very difficult to get in from the outside. We are like any other organization, we have grown. We had one division with 12 teams, two divisions, we had three divisions, we have some team miss the playoffs and some teams make the playoffs. We have traded guys in midseason, we have given players their money back in midseason if their skill level is way too good for us or their attitude is bad. As much as things are automatic, we are still a work in progress. Every week that Art, Rick, and I are here, we walk through everything and see if we made a mistake. We try to fix things as best we can, but we realize that 207 skaters come before any one skater.

"The other thing that I tell players when they enter the league that we have so many guys that have been here for such a long time we are also the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. We have corporate executives, people that own their own companies and elected officials. We are really the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, and we like that."

The league played its first game on April 20, 1989, and will have two-year celebration to honor its 25 years. There are five players that played that first night, Kelly, Riccio, Brian Barcelou, Mike Zucarelli, and Dan Coletti. Riccio was the one who named the league.

There were four more players the following spring that joined all before it started using the name "South Coastal" in the winter of 1989. That spring Daron Jacobs, Mike Verrochi, Mark Kaplan (who left and returned over the past few years), and Sawtelle joined.

"It started out as a summer league," said Riccio. "We realized after the first year what we needed to fix. You have 21-year-olds playing in a men's hockey league did not work, because they were not mature enough. After that first year, we raised the first year age to 30, and it was about two years later we raise the age to 35 to get into the league. An adult hockey league means adult. A 21-year-old that wants to come down and take a few peoples head off is not fun.

"We learned a lot that first year and I did not think that we were going to make it past that year, but Rick and I sat down and asked each other if wanted to continue. After some long thought we decided to give it a go and here we are 25 years later."

"We were playing in the NHA," said Kelly. "Which is the Novice Men's Hockey League. We were traveling all over the place, and that is where we met each other in the mid-1980s. The league went through some financial distress, so we went to the owner of the rink (Hobomock) and he said they were not paying their bills. We sat down one day and how can we do it on our own?

"Art Riccio looked at me and told me that I was crazy and second of all we will figure this out and we did. We started with four teams and we played late on Wednesday night and Sunday night. Then we played the next year on Wednesday and Friday night and we had an hour on Saturday mornings. It went from there."

The changes in the league were then made to different levels that are represented.

"We found out that it was good to have different levels of play," said Kelly. "We from two to three levels and back to two and it works for everybody."

"Plagiarism is a wonderful thing. I perform that constantly in my life. I got the names for the Classics and the Legends from the Bay State Games, they had different levels of play. The uniforms were unique, because we wanted people to walk in and know what level that they were watching. An AHL uniform, you were one thing, NHL another and the latest thing which was our best idea was the World Hockey Association from the 1970's which drew a lot of attention. The guys really like wearing those things in the Legends Division. We found we could buy NHL uniforms a few at a time as compared to 30 or 40 at a time. The unique thing about our Bruins team we did not give anyone of the prime numbers. You can't be No. 9 (John Bucyk), No. 7 (Phil Esposito), or No. 4 (Bobby Orr)."

The first night of the Legends Division the league invited former WHA players John "Pie" McKenzie and Paul Stewart to skate for their respective former team name that they played for.

"It made it a lot more fun having them there," Kelly said

The league is starting its 15th year of broadcasting its games. It started on radio in 1999 and moved to the Internet and has now developed its own award-winning cable network.

Kelly laughs as far as seeing the older Legends Division level on the air, a division that he started and has played in since its inception in the fall of 2007.

"Our claim to fame," said Kelly with a smile, "is that we have media. We are on television now. We were on radio for several years and people see us now on TV and they ask us those silly questions about why we skate so slow. We are not doing it on purpose, it kind of happen that way."

SWIMMING

New recreational program on South Shore

Kingfish Swimming, based in Kingston and Duxbury, will launch a new recreational arm of its swim team starting this fall.

After years of serving as a United States Swimming team, Kingfish has decided to expand its program offerings to account for the growing level of interest in swimming on the South Shore.

Kingfish Head Coach Jay Craft has coached swimming on the South Shore for more than 20 years, and himself was a 1992 Olympic Trials qualifier and All-American.

"We have seen a significant increase in the number of kids wanting to improve stroke technique and skill ability, without necessarily wanting to commit to competing on a higher level. This new division of our team will accommodate more kids in surrounding communities who want to make swimming a part of their lives," Craft said.

Craft has coached swimming on the South Shore for more than 20 years, and himself was a 1992 Olympic Trials qualifier and All-American.

The new recreational team will be open to kids aged 6-17 of all ability levels, and based at the Percy Walker Pool in Duxbury. Participants will be able to swim anywhere from 1-4 times per week, with a focus on developing good stroke technique and improving general fitness.

Tryouts for all levels on the Kingfish Swimming team will take place on Sept. 4 and Sept 6 from 4-4:30pm at both the Kingsbury Club pool and the Percy Walker Pool. Swimmers need only to attend one of the days at one of the locations.

For more information, contact Jay Craft at 617-797-8653 or jcraft@kingfishswimming.com, or visit www.kingfishswimming.com.

Come out and skate and play hockey with the South Shore Seahawks

There are still openings for the Learn To Skate, Learn to Play Hockey, Mite C In House, and other programs. Learn to Skate is a weekly, one-hour program designed for children ages 4 and older who are novice skaters or have never skated at all! Sessions will be taught by the same coaches consistently each week.

Learn to Play Hockey is the next step following Learn to Skate for those four years old and up who want to learn the fundamentals of hockey. The program has weekly skills a game. The Mite C In House program is our continued developmental program designed to assist the advanced house league player through additional ice time, advanced instruction, and more regular competition. This program will provide one practice, one skills session, and one game per week.

The start of the season is around the corner. Visit www.southshoreseahawks.org to learn more about these programs and to register, or contact Dave Doyle at ddoyle@ft.newyorklife.com for more information. South Shore Seahawks are proud to serve Scituate, Norwell, Hull, and surrounding towns.

sively humid, and whenever we strayed from the welcoming canopy of trees the sun baked down on our heads like a giant heat lamp. But none of that really mattered as we were greeted on what seemed like every street by cheering crowds; folks were holding impromptu parties in their driveways for neighbors and friends as they gathered to cheer us on; entire church congregations gathered along the route to clap and offer their support; some enterprising people set up hosepipes as misting stations for us to ride through to cool us down.

A watermelon ice enjoyed at the Dighton-Rehoboth stop on Saturday. The vicious heat meant that riders used any method possible to cool down. This was definitely the most appealing.

What I marveled at was all the shapes and sizes out on the roads over the weekend. Young and old, folks riding high-tech carbon fibre speed machines to people riding heavy, fat-tired mountain bikes. As we neared Provincetown on Sunday, I even rode past 54-year-old Peter Corbett, who completed the ride on a unicycle (he spaced his ride out over two weeks thankfully). Everyone rode with an almost single-minded purpose, to raise money to help doctors and researchers stamp out cancer, but all rode with humor and good spirit as well.

Sitting on a bike for 4-6 hours each day gives you lots of time to ponder. At one point I caught up with a middle-aged doctor from Boston who was doing his fifth ride. He said something about the ride becoming almost routine at this point, but for me it was nothing of the sort. There were moments when I was overcome with emotion. At the start on Saturday, at each feeding stop where throngs of people would line the entrances to cheer on the riders, and of course at the finishes, especially at the finish on Sunday in Provincetown. Cancer survivors young and old mixed with volunteers and family to welcome the riders after long days in the saddle. It was hard to contain the emotion of it all, and it was hard not to reflect on those close to me who have succumbed to cancer. But I also had time to reflect on friends and colleagues who have beaten the disease as well. I'm not sure this ride will ever become routine for me.

As we neared the finish in Bourne on the first day, I noticed an older lady standing by herself on a corner. She had white hair and was wearing a simple beige dress, and she was holding a sign like so many others that weekend. Hers was a simple message. It read: "Because of You, I Beat cancer. Thank you." Of course it wasn't just aimed at me, it was aimed at all of us that weekend – the riders, the volunteers, the fans cheering along the way, the organizers, everyone involved. As I rode by her our eyes met, and she smiled and mouthed, "thank you." Tears welled up in my eyes, and my legs found another gear as I pointed my bike toward the finish line.

Mark Gardner is the Photo Editor for Gatehouse Media and rode in this year's Pan Mass Challenge. If you would like to donate to the PMC please go to www.pmc.org and look for Mark, or any other rider you might like to sponsor. All the proceeds go directly to helping beat cancer.

CONCUSSION

Anyone connected with youth sports needs to be properly informed. The decisions made concerning which sports are safer, when kids need to stay on the sideline, when kids need professional help, and most importantly which interventions to choose are critical for the long term health of our student-athletes."

Experts from the field will gather at this concussion seminar to present the very latest research and recommendations. Dr. Janet Kent, a national expert and director of the Concussion Clinic at South Shore Hospital will be the key speaker. The forum of experts will include researchers, Physical Therapists, Athletic Trainers, coaches, MIAA officials, and professional athletes. Bill Wilhelm and the WATD Sports Department will be covering the event.

While this topic that has been frequently in the news, the research findings change almost on a daily basis. Youth sports will never be the same! Decisions we make now will forever shape the lives of our children.

Please join us for this very special night. It's free and open to the public. To register call Kennedy Brothers Physical Therapy at 781-383-8001 or email us at kbpt-southshore@yahoo.com.

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

GOOD ADVICE

Is going back to school right for you?

Family Features

The phrase "back to school" doesn't just apply to kids. Many adults are headed back to the classroom in hopes of starting a new career or improving their odds of promotion within their current job. In fact, according to the National Center for Education Statistics, the number of students over age 25 grew 43 percent from 2000 to 2009 — and it's expected to increase another 23 percent by 2019.

"Anyone considering going back to college needs to do their homework," said University of Phoenix School of Business Dean Dr. Bill Berry. "Returning to school is a big decision, and you have to be sure of your reasons so you get the most out of your educational experience."

If you've been thinking of going back to school, Dr. Berry recommends asking yourself the following questions and answering them honestly:

■ What are my goals? You need to be clear about why you want to go back to school. Some common goals include getting ahead in your career or starting a career in a new field.

■ Do I have time to take classes? According to the Council for Adult and Experiential Learning, whether taking classes online or in a classroom, it can take at least eight hours a week of work to successfully complete assignments.

■ How can I leverage my support system? Ask family or friends if they are willing to look after your children while you're studying. If you work, discuss your situation with your supervisor to ensure you have a plan in place to address work-related responsibilities.

Going back to school is a big decision, but if you ask the right questions and do the right planning, it will be a decision you can make with confidence, knowing it will pay off with a brighter future. PHOTO COURTESY OF GETTY IMAGES

■ How are my computer skills? As more and more course work is done online, it's critical to have these skills in order to succeed. If your computer skills are a bit rusty, look to see if your college or university offers any courses to help strengthen your skills before enrolling.

■ Do I really know what to expect? Programs such as the University of Phoenix University Orientation workshops are required for incoming students with less than 24 credits. The three-week, no-cost workshops allow students to experience the University's academic rigor. "We want our students to succeed," said Dr. Berry. "Offering this workshop lets them figure out if this is a good fit for them, and what is expected of them as students."

What to look for

The Council for Adult and Experiential Learning recommends that you:

■ Look for colleges that are accredited — Check for their accreditation on their website, or look for them at www.ed.gov.

■ Ask about Prior Learning Assessment (PLA) — If the school has a system for evaluating your prior learning, you could save time and money when earning your degree.

■ Find out about student services — For example, will you have access to faculty and advisors to help you with classwork and your program goals? For example, University of Phoenix assigns every student a Graduation Team made up of advisors for enrollment, academics and finance, in order to help you navigate your entire college experience.

Going back to school is a big decision, but if you ask the right questions and do the right planning, it will be a decision you can make with confidence, knowing it will pay off with a brighter future. You can learn more about University of Phoenix programs at www.phoenix.edu.

Career education assistance in a competitive job market

NAPS

Even with the U.S. unemployment rate high, technicians and skilled trade workers top the list of the hardest jobs to fill, according to a Manpower Group talent shortage survey. This gap in today's competitive job market can be a great opportunity for those who are considering attending a trade or technical school over a traditional college or university. Specifically targeting this high-skilled worker need, one organization has introduced a Career Education Grant Program to provide a one-time $1,000 grant to members and their eligible dependents toward enrollment and attendance at an accredited trade or technical school.

"Higher education provides a tremendous advantage toward success," says Dr. Paul Pevsner, president of the Alliance for Affordable Services, "but the cost of postsecondary education continues to increase. That is why it is important for Alliance to offer members assistance in achieving their educational goals, regardless of the type of school they choose to attend." The grant program is a welcome complement to the already successful Alliance Scholarship Program. Over $1.9 million in scholarship awards has helped more than 1,200 high school graduates and college students pursue undergraduate degrees since the scholarship program's inception in 1996.

The Alliance is dedicated to helping its members live better and save more. It leverages its strength in numbers to provide access to valuable benefits and services to meet the personal, professional and health care needs of over 75,000 members nationwide.

Benefit availability is dependent on the package option chosen and the member's place of residence and may be subject to change.

For more information or to join, visit www.AffordableServices.org or call 1-800-733-2242. The annual grant application deadline is June 30.

Mandy will steal your heart

Adoption fees for adults cats reduced

Mandy is waiting for someone to take her home and promises to return all the love and companionship you can give her.

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue has invited readers to meet Mandy.

Mandy, who is a 6-year-old, shorthaired, female Calico, is one of the most handsome Calicos HSAR has seen in quite a while! Unfortunately, she came to HSAR due to the death of her owner. If that wasn't sad enough, she spends much of her time in the "tree house," as shown, to avoid the other cats! Mandy was obviously well cared for and loved. She loves her head patted and will purr up a storm. She's waiting for someone to take her home and promises to return all the love and companionship you can give her. Good news: our adoption fees are reduced for adult cats to $25 through the end of August!

For information on Mandy or any of HSAR's wonderful felines, call Judy @781-534-4902, or visit: www.hsar.org. If you have a couple of hours to spare per week to care for and socialize with HSAR's residents, call Nancy @ 781-925-3638 to volunteer. You'll be glad you did! For all other inquiries, call 781-925-3121 and speak with Mary or leave a message. HSAR looks forward to hearing from you.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter offers a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

HSAR sends out a huge thank you to its many supporters.

The HSAR Board has reduced the adoption donation fee of adult cats from $100, to $25 from now through the entire month of August. HSAR has so many adoptable felines, who have resided at the shelter and are so ready for forever homes. HSAR hopes this will help in acquiring homes for many of them during the slower summer months.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Colette Taylor

MADISON, WI. – Colette Mercier Taylor died peacefully August 5, 2012 in Madison, WI. She was born in Chicoutimi, Quebec in 1920 and was one of ten sisters. During WW II, she was a diplomatic aid at the French Embassy, Blaire House in Washington DC where she worked directly with Charles DeGaulle. She met her late husband, William H. Taylor Jr., in Washington and eventually settled in Cohasset, MA, where they raised their two daughters. She worked as a title examiner in Plymouth, MA. She moved to Madison, WI in 2006. She is survived by her daughters, Jacqueline Taylor of New York City, and Andrée Taylor Valley and her husband John Valley of Madison; two grandsons and their wives, David Valley and Vivian Ferry of Pasadena, CA and Matthew Valley and Claire Lundberg of Paris, France; her great granddaughter, Sophia Valley; and three sisters in Quebec, Suzanne Demers, Louise Ouelette, and Esther Sincennes. Instead of flowers, donations may be made to the charity of your choice. A funeral Mass will be celebrated at St. Anthony's Parish, 10 Summer St., Cohasset, MA at 10AM on Friday, Sept. 14. Her unconditional love, charm and sense of humor will be missed by her family and friends.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS
FOR WEEK OF AUG. 27, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This week could offer more opportunities for ambitious Lambs eager to get ahead. But don't rush into making decisions until you've checked for possible hidden problems.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Some light begins to shine on professional and/or personal situations that have long eluded explanation. Best advice: Don't rush things. All will be made clear in time.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Although you might want to protest what seems to be an unfair situation, it's best to keep your tongue and temper in check for now. The full story hasn't yet come out.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Work prospects are back on track. But watch what you say. A thoughtless comment to the wrong person — even if it's said in jest — could delay or even derail your progress.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A colleague might try to goad you into saying or doing the wrong thing. It's best to ignore the troublemaker, even if he or she riles your royal self. Your supporters stand with you.

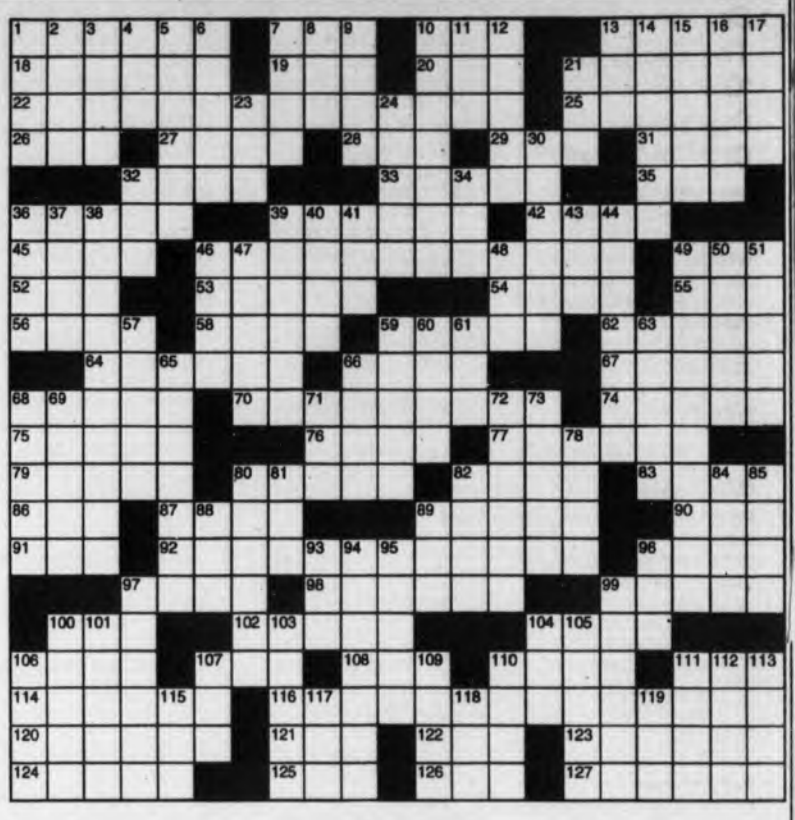
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Be careful not to let your on-the-job zealousness create resentment with co-workers who might feel you shut them out. Prove them wrong by including them in your project.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although it's not quite what you hoped for, use your good business sense to make the most of what you're being offered at this time. Things will improve down the line.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A more positive picture of what lies ahead is beginning to take shape. But there are still too many gaps that need to be filled in before you make definitive plans.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Continue to keep a tight hold on the reins so that you don't charge willy-nilly into a situation that might appear attractive on the surface but lack substance.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You still need to demand those answers to your questions. Remember, your wise counseling earns you respect, but it's your search for truth that gives you wisdom.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You'll find that people are happy to help you deal with some difficult situations. And, of course, knowing you, you'll be happy to return those favors anytime. Won't you?

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Give that special someone in your personal life a large, loving dollop of reassurance. That will go a long way toward restoring the well-being of your ailing relationship.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a delightful paradox. You like things neat and tidy. But you're also a wonderful host who can throw a really great party.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ACTING TM GETS REVIEWED

Milanoski offered new contract

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

After being praised by a majority of the Board of Selectmen during a six-month employment review in open session Tuesday, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski has been offered a new contract with the town. The new contract, up in June 2015, replaces the original contract that was set to expire in June 2013; the selectmen have effectively extended his current contract by two years.

After discussing the performance, the board discussed Milanoski's contract in an executive session during their Tuesday, August 21 meeting. Selectmen chair Paul Carlson stated in a press release Wednesday that the contract's terms are being negotiated by Selectman Leland Jenkins, who will present the final contract for the rest of the board's approval.

Carlson said the board's decision was "based on the high quality of his efforts to date, confidence that he will continue to serve the town very well and the desire to assure continuity and stability in this important position."

Cohasset has had four town managers in two years. Former Town Manager William Griffin left in October 2010 after five years on the job; Steve Lombard came out of retirement as a former town manager and administrator to lead Cohasset as an interim town manager that same month. Lombard served until the end of June 2011, with Assistant to the Town Manager Jennifer Oram taking on acting town manager duties until Michael Coughlin started in Cohasset in August. After six months on the job, Coughlin was placed on paid administra-

There are over 365 types of candy, from chocolate to licorice, candy buttons to bubblegum. All of the candy in the shop is made in the U.S.A.

It's not quite The Chocolate Factory, but it's pretty much Willy Wonka's dream come true. John Keenan, age 11, is running his own candy shop — with help from his mom, of course.

The Keenan family has poured a lot of love and plenty of pure imagination into Cohasset Candy Company, a new shop in the James Brook Crossing center, aptly located across the hall from toy store Platinum Spike. The retro-style décor, complete with pink and blue walls, a bright orange couch, and a black-and-white checkered floor, is colorful and inviting to kids of all ages. Children will run to sit in the "bouncy" chair while adults will recall the penny candy stores of their youths. While Cohasset Candy sells nickel, not penny, candy, it's still served up in old-fashioned style: customers scoop up candy from clear plastic bins and pay by weight.

There are over 365 types of candy, from chocolate to licorice, candy buttons to bubblegum. All of the candy in the shop is made in the U.S.A.; some, like Salem-based Emergency Chocolate and the Cape Cod Cranberry Company, is made right here in Massachusetts.

Officials discuss limiting races and other events

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Road races, fun runs, fundraisers and festivals — these types of events take place year round in Cohasset. With its quintessential New England town common and seaside views, it seems that both local and national organizations are vying to hold their events here.

Just how many of these events the town should allow was an agenda item during the Tuesday, August 21 Board of Selectmen's meeting.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski sought the expertise of Cohasset Triathlon director Bill Burnett, who has organized the in-town event for the past six years. Burnett also has experience coordinating similar events in several other communities and provided Milanoski with a document full of sample event applications from similar communities, including Scituate, Marlborough and Nantucket.

"Bill does these events around the country and knows what he's doing," Milanoski told the selectmen.

The town manager suggested that the selectmen take a look at which events have the most impact on the town, such as road closings, and decide how

PUBLIC SAFETY | Compiled by Bob Rankin

It is that time of year, again

School bus reminder from the Drivers Manual

- Yellow school buses have flashing red lights and stop signs that fold out from the driver's side. School pupil transport vehicles, like vans, station wagons, or family sedans, have flashing red lights and SCHOOL BUS signs on top. Drivers use these warning signals when letting pupils on and off.
- If a school bus or a school pupil transport vehicle has its lights flashing and a stop sign extended, you must stop. It is the law. It does not matter which side of the road you are traveling on. Remain stopped until the lights stop flashing or the stop sign folds back.
- A first violation of this law can cause a license suspension and a $250 fine.
- Even after the warning signals have stopped, you should proceed slowly and continue to look for children.
- The only exception to this law is if a school bus has stopped on the other side of a divided highway with a barrier between travel directions. In this case, you do not have to stop.

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

POLICE BEAT

Toy gun leads to traffic stop

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Hingham police notified Cohasset about a 2001 Mercury sedan that was headed south on Route 3A on Sunday (Aug. 19) at around 4:45 p.m. that had displayed what looked like a shotgun out the window. Hingham police had received a report from an upset caller.

Cohasset police pulled the car over on Route 3A at Beechwood Street and ordered the driver, a 41-year-old Scituate man, out of the car at gunpoint. As it turned out the man owned the toy replica of a shotgun that his 6-year-old daughter had pointed out the window. The caller could not see into the vehicle due to the tint on the windows but could only see the barrel pointing out, police said. The toy gun is not illegal but it looked very real, police said.

Strange man

A 49-year-old Hingham woman who routinely walks Thayer-Whitney Woods was walking with a friend on Monday (Aug. 13) when about one-half to three-quarters of a mile into the woods a man came out from behind a large rock. The woman said the man did not do anything but made them feel uneasy. Police will be using an all-terrain vehicle, dubbed the "mule," to conduct patrols along the trails.

Beach report

An officer responded to Black Rock Beach at around 3:37 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 13) on an anonymous report of teens drinking. Upon arrival police found five teenage boys (four 18-year-olds and one 17-year-old) in the water. There was a small cooler with some beer on the beach, police said. Police called the boys' parents and turned the teens over to them. None of the teens showed signs of drinking, police said. No charges were filed, as police could not prove the beer belonged to the boys.

Windows smashed

• A 56-year-old Jerusalem Road woman notified police at 8:28 a.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 14) that the rear hatch window of her 2006 Lexus GX470 that was parked in her driveway had been smashed with a small rock overnight.

• A 31-year-old Cohasset man told police at 7:08 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 16) that the rear hatch window to his Ford Escape had been smashed overnight by a rock. The car was parked in the driveway.

Police are investigating. Nothing was stolen so the incidents appear to be cases of vandalism. There were also several similar incidents in Hingham involving car windows smashed with rocks over the past week.

Solicitor

A caller notified police about an unlicensed solicitor going door-to-door on Border Street last Wednesday (Aug. 15). Police said the solicitor, a 54-year-old Hanson man in a maroon convertible, worked for Comcast and did not have the proper permit and was told to apply for one.

No domestic

Police responded to an anonymous 9-1-1 call on Wednesday (Aug. 15) at 2:17 p.m. concerning a couple arguing inside a 1999 Dodge Ram 1500 pickup truck that had exited Shaw's onto Route 3A. Police stopped the truck that was being operated by a 21-year-old Braintree man; the passenger, his girlfriend, was also 21 and from Braintree, police said. As it turned out there was no domestic dispute but the call was the result of a road rage incident with the 9-1-1 caller, who did not stick around and did not provide dispatch with his contact information. It is unclear if the caller dialed 9-1-1 in retaliation.

Road rage

In another road rage incident, a 9-1-1 caller reported a motorist yelling and making gestures at him on King Street (Route 3A). Police pulled over the 1992 Mercury Sable, operated by a 63-year-old Dorchester man. It appears that one of the motorists cut the other one off and words and gestures were exchanged. The officer was able to sort the matter out, police said. The caller stayed with the Mercury until the officer made the stop.

Safety concern

A concerned caller let police know at about 10 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 15) that three teens wearing dark clothing were walking along Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A). The caller was concerned for their safety as they were hard to see. Police responded and told the young people to stay way off the road.

Sign gone

A walk-in to the police department at 11:05 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 16) reported that the wooden sign on a stone pillar at Deep Run that is valued at about $150 was missing.

Bike taken

A 46-year-old Cohasset man reported that his son's bicycle, a red-and-white, medium-sized kid's Trek Mountain Bike, was stolen from the bike rack at the Cohasset Swim Center. The man made the report at 4:28 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 16).

Medical episode

A 68-year-old Scituate man in a 2010 Nissan Rogue was transported to the hospital by ambulance with advanced life support following a traffic stop at around 6 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 16) at Beechwood Street and Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Police responded after receiving reports that the man, who had been stumbling around, had driven around the parking lot at Tedeschi Plaza where he had purchased a pizza in a confusing manner and then took off on Route 3A. Once police stopped the Nissan, they determined the man was having a medical episode and called the ambulance. He did not appear to be under the influence of alcohol, police said.

Helicopter complaint

Police referred an Atlantic Avenue caller to the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) after he complained about a helicopter taking off and landing several times off Whitehead Road and wanted it to stop last Friday (Aug. 17). Police said an area resident often travels via helicopter. The FAA out of Logan Airport governs helicopter travel, police said.

AT ROY RECEPTION

Fireworks display nixed, pyrotechnic devices seized

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A wedding reception at the Roy mansion off Margin Street ended with a bang but not the one that the family and guests expected.

The Roys hired a police detail officer, who during the course of the evening, learned of a planned fireworks display to be held when the reception was wrapping up. The detail officer checked with the sergeant on duty at the station who said no permits for the fireworks had been issued.

Deputy Chief William Quigley said an extensive permitting process is required for a fireworks display.

Police contacted the harbormaster's department and confiscated 200 to 300 pounds of fireworks from the breakwater at the entrance to the harbor. They brought the fireworks back to the police station where the bomb squad from the State Fire Marshall's Office picked them up on Tuesday. Police said the Fire Marshall's office is conducting the investigation.

"At the end of the day, this is a public safety issue," Quigley said. "We cannot risk public safety for someone's enjoyment."

He said there were no permits issued and there was not a professional pyrotechnican on hand as required.

Channel 7 news reported that Roy told them the harbormaster was well aware of the planned display, that his attorney notified the town about the fireworks plan earlier in the week, and that he felt blindsided by the police department's decision to shut it down.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said he received no correspondence from Roy's attorney about the planned fireworks display.

Fire Chief Bob Silvia said no permits were applied for.

"No one representing the Roy's approached the Fire Department requesting a permit for a fireworks display. MGL Chapter 148, Section 39 states that it is illegal for private citizens to use, possess, or sell fireworks in Massachusetts, or to purchase them legally elsewhere and then transport them into the State.

"The law is clear. No fireworks are allowed without a permit. No permit was ever applied for," Silvia said.

Roy did not return two voicemails by press time. Attempts to reach his attorney were unsuccessful. Voicemails left on the harbormaster's line were not returned by press time.

The 200-300 pounds of seized fireworks planned for the fireworks display in the harbor on Saturday night.

CPC UPDATE

Reviewing recreation

CPC to meet with other boards, hold public hearing

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee (CPC) might have missed an important step when it comes to accepting recreation projects.

The CPC received good news earlier this summer when Governor Patrick signed new Community Preservation Act (CPA) legislation for fiscal year 2013 that included changes to the act's recreation rules and $25 million for the statewide CPA trust fund.

Russ Bonetti, chair of Cohasset's CPC, said that this meant Cohasset could get involved in capital improvement projects for existing recreational properties that were not acquired through CPA funds, something that was not previously allowed. The change in legislation would allow local CPC boards to accept new recreation proposals for private buildings, such as the Cohasset Sailing Club.

However, Bonetti recently learned from the state's Community Preservation Coalition that Cohasset's CPC might have missed a step in the process. Before the CPC can accept such recreation applications, the board is supposed to assess the needs of the community regarding recreation, review the town's open space plan, talk to recreation advocates and other boards, review the new law and any guidance and training available, and hold a required annual public hearing, according to Stuart Saginor, the coalition's executive director.

"Only then will the CPC be fully informed and ready to accept and review recreational proposals," Saginor wrote in an email to Bonetti.

Bonetti shared this news with the rest of the CPC during their Monday, August 13 meeting, and the committee discussed how to complete the necessary steps. The plan, so far, is to hold the required annual meeting and have individual CPC members attend other committee meetings, including the Recreation, Historic, and Conservation commissions, as well as the Open Space Committee and Housing Authority.

In addition to pursuing recreation opportunities, Bonetti explained that the CPC also hopes to fund some affordable housing projects.

"We're going to get on different committees' agendas and talk about what projects they may have coming up preliminary to public meeting we're going to have," the CPC chair said, adding that the committee hopes to hold the meeting by the end of September. "That way we can start hearing recreation projects," Bonetti continued. "We're supposed to have one [public hearing] every year, but we haven't had one in years."

Bonetti added that any town committees that have not been contacted by the CPC but have projects they would like the CPC to consider should attend an upcoming meeting and "give us some input."

CPA funds exist to preserve open space and historic sites, create affordable housing, and develop outdoor recreational facilities. There are currently 148 communities in Mass. that belong to the Community Preservation Coalition.

Recreation needs

The community preservation committee shall study the needs, possibilities and resources of the city or town regarding community preservation. The committee shall consult with existing municipal boards, including the conservation commission, the historical commission, the planning board, the board of park commissioners and the housing authority, or persons acting in those capacities or performing like duties, in conducting such studies.

As part of its study, the committee shall hold one or more public informational hearings on the needs, possibilities and resources of the city or town regarding community preservation possibilities and resources, notice of which shall be posted publicly and published for each of two weeks preceding a hearing in a newspaper of general circulation in the city or town.

EVENTS

many of these types of events to hold yearly. The board could decide, for instance, to only allow one road-closing event per month.

Milanoski also suggested the board consider which events directly benefit the Cohasset community and determine how much money raised by an organization is donated to a charitable cause. The selectmen could decide on a "threshold" for charities based on how much of the funds raised goes directly to the benefactor.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said he counted six road closures for the year, out of the 15 events Assistant to the Town Manager Jennifer Oram outlined in a list (see sidebar). Selectmen vice-chair Diane Kennedy noted that the farmers market and South Shore Arts Festival were missing from that list.

Kennedy explained that there is a "wide range" in the types of events that take place, from the Arts Fest that takes over the town common for three days in June each year, to the farmers market, which takes place once a week for four months.

"This is apples, oranges, bananas and grapes," Kennedy said of the variety of events. She added that members of the town's Chamber of Commerce, Economic Development Committee, Recreation Department, Sandy Beach Association and churches should all "hash out" a plan. "There's a whole calculus that has to be considered."

Milanoski said later in the meeting that he would work on forming such a committee.

Selectman Leland Jenkins said that he didn't think the town should "reinvent the wheel" when it comes to event applications. His biggest concern, he said, was with the financial reporting from nonprofits, wanting to know to what extent monies are donated to charity. "I think it's important to have the statement of the entire company. It's very important to really know the numbers."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she was concerned about the triathlon's Sunday morning race time, preferring the race be moved to Saturday. A possible future date change has been discussed with Burnett at previous selectmen meetings.

Kennedy noted that Sunday events are challenging for the churches but Saturdays are hard for downtown businesses. "This is why I would love to have a group of people hash it out," she said. "There's a whole matrix of issues we're dealing with."

Kennedy noted that there is an event every single weekend in June. "It's exhausting. We can't always get a police detail."

Gjesteby suggested the board give preference to local groups that are "more friendly to the town" versus national organizations.

"Everybody wants something here because it's a lovely town with a nice waterfront," said Gjesteby. "But I think we should cut back."

Selectman Fred Koed agreed: "Maybe we're reaching the tipping point." He also agreed with Kennedy's point, saying that forming a committee to work through these issues "is a great start."

The consensus among the selectmen seemed to be that there should be a moratorium on any new events for next year until a new policy and application process is enacted. The board did not take a formal vote on the matter but will wait until they receive feedback from the group Milanoski plans to put together.

Roy Fitzsimmons, Doane Street, was in the audience and addressed the board as the founder of the Cohasset Road Race in 1977. Fitzsimmons discussed how the race has grown from 200 runners to 1600 over nearly four decades. He explained how the event takes place at 1 p.m. on a Sunday so as not to interfere with church services.

"This is the longest-running road race in town," said Fitzsimmons. "I don't think we should shut the door on it because it's on a Sunday. We're very careful with church activities."

The Road Race is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary, and Fitzsimmons said the group tries "to benefit the town" by seeking sponsorship from local businesses. In general, the rotary club "does wonderful things with the money," said Fitzsimmons, such as awarding scholarships and sponsoring town health clinics.

"The rotary is very generous, and the money stays in town for the most part," Fitzsimmons said. "I hope you take that into consideration. I'd like to see the road race continue."

Kennedy assured Fitzsimmons that he has nothing to worry about, calling the Road Race "one of those Cohasset-branded events."

The selectmen do not plan to give events like these the axe, Kennedy explained: "We just want to codify things."

Welcome Adrian & Karen!

We thank our guests for your continued support & look forward to welcoming you at Willow!

Michelle Cayer

We would like to celebrate all of our loyal guests from Hernan's to Lemon Lime and now Willow. It has been an incredible 30+ years and I am proud to be a part of what Hernan, Jeanne and Adrian began.

All three Cohasset Salons have shared the same philosophy to truly care for each guest; their commitment to Cohasset and their continuous desire to perfect their talent.

The traditions could not have lasted without our guests, many of whom have become friends and even extended family. You have all been patient with the many changes over the last year and we want to thank all of you with a $5 manicure or eyebrow waxing at your next appointment.

We promise to continue our shared desire to provide Cohasset with a welcoming, warm environment with talented stylists, nail technicians & estheticians. Most importantly we will continue our nostalgic relationships that were started 30+ years ago and look forward to making new ones.

Thank you for your continued support and we look forward to welcoming you at Willow Salon, Spa & Shoppe located at 111 Ripley Road (connected to Ava Cucina).

Red Lion noise issue

The owner of the Red Lion Inn has responded to recent noise complaints from neighbor Michael Karp. Karp and his wife Rowena appeared before the Board of Selectmen with similar complaints last fall. The selectmen discussed the Inn's entertainment license during their July 31 meeting; the board said that according to the license, the Inn is not supposed to have outdoor entertainment, including amplified live or recorded sound systems.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski wrote a letter to owner Gerd Ordelheide stating that failure to adhere to the license's conditions could lead to suspension or revocation of the license.

Ordelheide responded in an Aug. 15 letter that Karp "is making false accusations" and "unfounded noise complaints."

Furthermore, Ordelheide said that he hired a sound engineer install a noise measurement system along the Inn's property line.

"The measurements showed that the noise decibels from the street traffic were higher than that coming from the Red Lion Inn," Ordelheide wrote. However, he plans to reinstall a permanent system "which will continuously monitor and record the noise level."

Lot accident

A 48-year-old Lowell man reported that his parked, unoccupied 2002 Oldsmobile Bravado was backed into in the parking lot of the Cohasset Harbor Inn last Friday (Aug. 17). There was minor damage to the car, police said. The other vehicle apparently took off.

Traffic stop

A 61-year-old South Main Street man is being summonsed to court for operating an unregistered and uninsured motor vehicle and for speeding, police said. An officer, who was on patrol conducting radar last Saturday (Aug. 18) at around 11:30 a.m., stopped the 2004 Mercedes sedan for traveling 48 in a 30 mph zone, police said. A check with the Registry of Motor Vehicles revealed the car was not insured or registered. The car was towed.

Red light violation

A 33-year-old Scituate woman is being summonsed to court for failure for operating with a suspended license, failure to stop at a red light and failure to notify the Registry of Motor Vehicles of an address change, police said. An officer on patrol observed the 2009 Nissan Murano, the woman was driving, fail to stop at the light at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Pond Street. A registry check showed that her license was suspended and that she never notified the RMV of her address change.

Protective custody

A 47-year-old Braintree man, who was intoxicated, was taken into protective custody on Sunday (Aug. 19) at around 10 p.m. following an argument with his father at an Avalon apartment, police said. There was no physical violence but to quell the disturbance, police took the son to the station where he was held overnight.

Regional dispatch: Cohasset makes transition

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

After an agreement inked back in 2009, the Cohasset public safety dispatchers have finally moved to the regional dispatch center that opened in Hingham last year. Per the agreement, Cohasset's dispatchers no longer work out of the town's public safety building but operate in the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC). The change officially occurred on Tuesday, August 21.

The issue of what would happen to the public safety building without its dispatchers has been a point of contention among officials over the past several months. In early discussions, it seemed the police station would go dark during nights and weekends. To mitigate that, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski discussed turning the police station lobby into a safe room, complete with cameras and a video link to the SSRECC dispatchers.

The latest solution — which Deputy Police Chief William Quigley, Fire Chief Robert Silvia, and Assistant Fire Chief John Dockray all agreed upon — is having a patrolman in the station during the night and weekend shifts with two patrolmen on the road. This ensures an officer will be in the building most of the time, unless he is called on for assistance on the road. The town's police union agreed on the staffing change.

A look at the new police window that is under construction in the station's lobby. The large, glass window to the left will no longer be there. PHOTO/MARY FORD

Although it seems the station will be staffed at all times, the police station lobby is still being turned into a safe room. The most noticeable change this week — the window in the lobby has been dramatically reduced in size. Selectman Martha Gjesteby said the new smaller window has a "claustrophobic effect."

Deputy Chief Quigley explained in an email that the change was necessary "for security reasons."

"When there is nobody manning the station, we want to limit the view of people in the lobby to just that small office," Quigley wrote. "The way it is now, with the large window, customers can see the entire control room, the rear hallway, and the squad room if you were really trying."

Silvia said during Tuesday's selectmen meeting that the lobby's new layout is all about the "protection of somebody in the room" in the event the building is empty. The fire chief explained that there will be some growing pains as the public safety department transitions.

"It's still a work in progress," Silvia said of the SSRECC. "We ask the public to bear with us as we get through the next few weeks, but we expect the final product will be an improvement."

Selectman Leland Jenkins wanted to know if things at the SSRECC were in fact getting better.

Referring to recent negative press on the subject, Silvia, who was recently appointed to the Statewide 911 Commission, told the board that "a lot of what you read in papers and blogs is nonsense." In the midst of contract negotiations with "a lot of give and take and finger pointing going on," Silvia said he believes the SSRECC "will eventually clear those hurdles. Things will settle down."

Sewer hookups

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said three homes out of 124 in the Inner Little Harbor district have yet to connect to the municipal sewer, which they were required to do by July 1 of this year per the state's Second Amended Final Judgment.

If the town did not meet the state's deadline, Cohasset would be responsible for any fees levied against the town by the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). The town must "take legal action to reach 100 percent compliance," said Milanoski during Tuesday's selectmen meeting.

Milanoski said that the Sewer Commission's Diane Hindley has sent notices to the final three homeowners that they must connect by September; they must also pay an application fee of $5,000 to the Sewer Department (the fee was $1,000 prior to the July 1 deadline) and are being charged a $100 a day penalty fee to the Board of Health.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby wanted to know if the town's attention to the matter would be enough to satisfy the state: "Are they fine with what's going on?"

Milanoski responded, "The state is working with us. We are taking aggressive action to make sure we're 100 percent compliant."

Lightkeepers needs sewer

During a recent selectmen's meeting, selectman Fred Koed brought up the option of connecting the Lightkeepers House to the municipal sewer. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski summed up the problem there: "During large events the septic system may overflow into the harbor."

Milanoski said he got in touch with Sewer Commission chair Wayne Sawchuk, who offered to work with his construction company to determine what would be needed to get the Lightkeepers connected and identify possible capital costs. Sawchuk would need six to eight weeks to finalize the plan.

News tips

Hello Cohasset! How is everyone doing at the beginning of this beautiful weekend? So many are out and about taking advantage of the weather around town, at the beach, the pool and walking through town, it is so nice to see. We are very lucky, that is for sure. I know that this past week and now, the upcoming week continue to bring many of our young adults back or to college the upcoming year, some returning and some for the first time. Yikes, it is like a dream for me and still one I am not quite ready for, one more week and a day, than all the way to...Boston she goes. I wish all students the best of luck this year and all the Moms and Dads a lot of tissues as well. I have my box(es) ready! Any well wishes, photos or messages you have for your students are welcome to the column, please send them in to aroundtowncolumn@yahoo.com.

Also, for anyone from preschools, K-12 public and all the way up to the Seniors in town, please send in all of your news, event information, meeting schedules and photos as well. The Around Town column is a wonderful way for the community to enjoy, learn and keep abreast of what is happening. Birthdays, new babies in town, anniversaries and any other special day or news that you have and would like to share is welcome too but without the key information and/or photo, it cannot be shared.

Gardens

The gardens and flowers featured in photographs on the Around Town page this week have been donated by the Laugelle Family in memory of Joey Laugelle. The canna lilies were donated by the Trask and Meallo families.

Heartfelt appreciation to these families for making Cohasset even more beautiful. What a wonderful way to honor Joey. Thank you so much.

Car wash

Now, who in town has a dirty car and would love to have it cleaned while supporting a great group of gals? The CHS Field Hockey Team is holding a Car Wash Fundraiser at the Second Congregational Church on Cohasset Common this Saturday, August 25 from 10 a.m. to 1 pm. All proceeds will support the Cohasset's Field Hockey Team and your car will be shiny and clean, a win-win all around!

Croquet anyone?

Think the game of croquet died with Queen Victoria? Think again. It is alive and well and hilariously competitive at the Annual Croquet Classic in Cohasset on Sept. 22! It is the most fun you can legally have on someone's front lawn and it is all to support pediatric programs at South Shore Hospital. The Friends of South Shore Hospital LINKS group invites you to join them for the ultimate lawn party at a private, waterfront home. Croquet is the main attraction, but a raffle with great prizes like Patriots tickets, a wonderful spread of gourmet food and adult beverages, and a relaxed and entertaining atmosphere also highlight the event.

The point is — you don't have to know how to play croquet or even step on the croquet court to have a great time! The LINKS members are young professionals with families of their own who live and work on the South Shore. They hold multiple events each year to raise funds in support of pediatric programs at South Shore Hospital. To register for the Croquet Classic and obtain additional details, please log onto southshorehospital.org/events or call (781) 624-4170.

Picnic

Cohasset Elder Affairs cordially invites seniors to the annual End of the Season picnic, scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 5, at 318 King St. Join them for delicious food, festivities, and entertainment by the Dixie Duo and the Marshfield Red Devil Dancers. To reserve your space and transportation if necessary, contact Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112 no later than Aug. 30. For those driving, park at the water treatment plant on King Street and a shuttle van will deliver you to the picnic.

Job workshop

Wow, a quick look ahead shows a free job search and resume tips workshop is taking place on Thursday, Aug 30 from 12:30-2 pm at the Paul Pratt Library.

This event is sponsored by One Life at a Time. This is a free event for all and you can sign up by calling 781-383-1348.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

MURPHYCARTY INSURANCE AGENCY

My homeowners insurance went up this year! I have never had a single claim, the real estate market is down! How can this be?

Part of the reason is due to REINSURANCE.

REINSURANCE... WHAT IS THAT?

Reinsurance is actual insurance purchased by one insurance company from another to manage risk. Reinsurers provide coverage for our insurance carriers for floods, earthquakes, hurricanes, tornadoes, etc. As Reinsurers pay out for hurricanes, earthquakes and tornadoes, their rates must rise. Ultimately our homeowner rates follow suit.

As the world gets smaller, we share more global risk.

A North Sea storm can affect a South Shore homeowner's policy.

A faraway Tsunami can affect a local harbor community.

Let us help you with your insurance needs, no matter how big or small.

CANDY

Co-owner Liz Keenan said she is committed to supporting the local economy. In addition to offering American-made treats, the candy store's shelves were constructed by local home repair company Mr. Fix It, while a local painter gave the walls the cotton candy pink and blue treatment.

The Keenans are Cohasset residents, so it was important to open their dream shop in town, Liz explained. The store is located in what used to be the Sailmaker's Loft. This past June, when hunting around for a local space, Liz came across the "for rent" sign in the James Brook Crossing and knew she'd found her sweet spot.

"A candy shop across from Platinum Spike — what could be better?" Liz asked.

The co-owner explained that a candy shop "was the only thing missing in Cohasset. There used to be one at the harbor."

Liz and John saw a need and sought to fill it. Ironically, however, neither of them eats much candy (although John is the store's "chief tester"). The two are surrounded by the sweet stuff day in and day out, but "aren't tempted by it," said Liz.

Why would a woman and her middle school-aged son want to open a candy store, then? It began as a family side project. Liz is recovering from lymphoma, which she had for two years (she competed in Cohasset's Road Race by the Sea this year, running six miles to celebrate six months of being cancer-free). After enduring chemotherapy and a stem cell transplant last year, Liz couldn't spend much time around kids; she vowed that this would change once she got better. She and John began to brainstorm of a way they could have fun together and make some money. Mother and son decided to launch their candy shop project and began ordering supplies. Liz said it took her husband, Dave, by surprise.

"He asked, 'What are you guys doing'?" Liz laughed. "'We're really going to open a candy shop!' We found the space and did it."

The former sailcloth workshop was transformed into a vintage-style candy shop. While Liz and John's are the mainstays in the store, with John often manning the cash register, the whole Keenan family had a hand in the shop's design. Dave, a business owner, is the Candy Company's silent partner, while daughters Kathryn, 17, and Grace, 15, helped pick the store's pink accents, including a 1950s-esque pink rotary dial phone. The phone is there for kids who need to call home, explained Liz: "Cell phone service in town isn't that great."

With dual entrances, the shop's layout is inviting from in or outside the James Brook Crossing building. During an interview with the Mariner, curious kids and employees from nearby Crazy Paws Vet wandered in from the "downstairs" entrance, which leads to a parking lot. The shop is also accessible from the inside hallway. Liz and John were giving away free popcorn that day, made fresh in a popcorn maker, and Liz joked that nearby folks were following the scent wafting down the hall.

Liz also pointed out a hand sanitizer dispenser on the wall near the parking lot entrance, for kids who might be wandering in from the nearby playground at the Community Center. It seems the mom of three has thought of everything: she even plans to have a bubble machine outside that will blow bubbles when the shop is open.

Cohasset Candy Company is open seven days a week, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from noon to 5 on Sundays. Liz said the schedule will remain the same until school starts; then, the shop will be closed on one weekday. John will be going back to school, too, but plans to take the bus to the shop after school sometimes.

Soon, the shop will offer free wi-fi, and Liz plans to screen "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" and other candy-themed films on the flatscreen TV above the register. The store also has an online component, complete with a blog, which Dave and the girls help update. Liz said they also offer custom orders and free delivery; gift items, including t-shirts with the store's logo, candy banks, candy-shaped pillows, gift baskets and gift cards are also available.

The hope is that Cohasset Candy will become "the community's go-to spot" for candy, said Liz. It sounds like the shop is already on its way.

When dining at the Olde Salt House the other night, Liz said she was recognized by a woman's daughter, who said, "You're the candy lady!"

After a successful "soft" opening last Saturday, the store will have its official grand opening on Saturday, September 1; the first 200 children to visit will receive a free whirly pop and raffle ticket.

Paul Trendowicz is still helping others

Memorial golf tournament benefits local charities

By Dan Trendowicz
Special to the Mariner

On Friday August 10, The PJT Memorial Foundation hosted the sixth annual PJT Memorial Golf Tournament at Pembroke Country Club in memory of Paul "PJ" Trendowicz. Monday, August 13th, marked the ten-year anniversary of my brother Paul's fatal swimming accident that occurred at Cunningham Bridge in Cohasset. Each summer, the Board Members of the PJT Memorial Foundation organize an annual golf tournament to keep Paul's memory and spirit alive. Being that it was the ten-year anniversary of Paul's accident, we wanted this year to be special.

It is often the case that you see a drop off in attendance for these types of events as the years go on, but not this one. The participation and demand for our annual event has increased year over year. This year we had a record 128 golfers participate and another 50 people who attended the reception in Cohasset afterwards. We were able raise more than $23,000 this year, far surpassing any total from previous years. The bulk of this money can be credited to our Silent auction and Raffle that was run by Board Members Kristin de Garavilla (Sheerin) and Arianna Dedes. All monies raised from this year's tournament will be distributed to local charities whose mission's align with our Foundation's focus of making an impact in the local community, with a particular focus on community service and youth outreach.

This past fiscal year, we sponsored the Charlestown Lacrosse and Learning Center's Spring Fling Jamboree which over 200 kids from more than a dozen Greater Boston Communities participated in. We also contributed a significant amount of money to Exceptional Citizen's Week at Camp Fatima, where our contribution paid for campers to ride horses for the first time in their lives.

We are proud to say that Paul's legacy has touched hundreds of people, and it is through charitable donations that we are able to have a direct impact on our local community. I encourage you to visit our website www.thepjtfoundation.org for more information about my brother's story, our Foundation, our mission, the Annual Golf Tournament, and ways to contribute to our cause. You can also email us at thepjtfoundation@gmail.com.

I want to take this opportunity to thank our Platinum Tournament Sponsors, Jake Morgan of Morgan Construction, and Kevin Lewis Jr., of Coldwell Banker Cohasset. Their generous donations alleviate a significant portion of our operational costs, thus enabling us to have a greater financial impact to local charities. I'd also like to thank Strecker Eye Care, Fenway Sports Group, Atlantis Sports Club, Thistle & Honey, Earth Tones Salon, Dahlia and Twist, All The Best, The Red Lion Inn, Circes Grotto, The South Shore Music Circus, Atlantica, Johnny Cupcakes, Darilyns, Ports & Company, Lapis Tree, Kiss108, Bridgeman's, Boston Cigar Factory, Sue Chessia Floral Design, Hingham Beer Works, Hill Holiday, Bonobos, and all others who generously contributed to our Silent Auction and Raffle.

It is often the case that you see a drop off in attendance for these types of events as the years go on, but not this one. The participation and demand for our annual event has increased year over year.

My brother was my best friend, he taught me everything. He truly was "a man for others." To see his memory live on like it has even after it has been ten years means everything to my parents, my family, and I. I want to thank everyone who has participated in the tournament and also to all of those who have donated to the PJT Memorial Foundation. Believe me when I say that your donations, gifts, and loyalty have a far greater impact than you could ever imagine. I also want to thank all of my fellow Board Members who include President Greg Smith, Treasurer and Golf Tournament Commissioner Brian Lewis, Secretary Ben Kinch, Arianna Dedes, Kristen de Garavilla, Tom Digan, Alex Johnston, Mackenzie Holway, Jake Morgan, Tim Straughn, Matt Winter, Joe Sugar, Greg Harrington, and our newest member Megan Chastain, who we expect big things out of.

Additionally, I want to thank the Johnston family for hosting the reception each year at their amazing home, and Ken Ingber for his legal oversight of our Foundation.

Please keep in touch with us on Facebook and through our website. I can't wait to see everyone next year as this is definitely the best weekend of the year. I'd like to leave you with a quote from my brother upon his return from a service trip with the Appalachian Service Project. These words embody my brother, and why we are committed to keeping his memory alive:

"This experience caused me to see clearly and appreciate all of the things I take for granted. It has taught me that no matter what privileges I have or gain, that I am called to be a better person and that I must devote time and effort into helping others."

ON THE COMMON

'Souled Out' is Sunday at 6 p.m.

By Linda Fechter
special to the Mariner

Attention all Motown lovers: Sunday is the day to bring friends, family and a picnic to Cohasset Common at 6 p.m. Souled Out is brought to you by the Cohasset Recreation Department (cohassetrec.com), as part of the Cohasset Summer Concert Series and sponsored by the McMorris Family.

Souled Out is a musical ensemble that specializes in Motown and Soul sounds. Featuring a three-piece vocal section, the group weaves its way through the Motown and 70's Soul eras complete with dance routines, and showmanship that made Motown so unique.

They are inspired by the Temptations, the Four Tops, Stevie Wonder, the Spinners and more. Fueled by a love for the music and backed by a superb band, Souled out plays all over the country with its own brand of style added to the songs of Earth Wind and Fire, the Commodores and countless others.

Concerts are funded in part through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. This program is supported in party by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency that is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Souled-Out is the last in a series of six successful concerts that delighted families all summer long. Bring lawn chairs and an appetite for great entertainment and true showmanship that will be nostalgic for some and provide an introduction to Motown for the next generation.

In the event of rain, check cohassetrec.com.

If necessary, a Monday rain date has been scheduled.

HAPPENINGS

Exhibit on Maritime History

The Cohasset Historical Society is celebrating Cohasset maritime history throughout the month of September. Save the date for Opening night on Saturday, Sept. 8.

Opening night will highlight a unique exhibit featuring relics of the many ships that were storm driven on the reefs off the Cohasset shores as well as artifacts from Cohasset's rich seafaring history.

Most wrecks occurred in the 19th century, when the shipping channel into Boston Harbor was narrow and passed close to many ledges. Ships were predominately powered by sail and at the mercy of the wind, which frequently blew them onto the rocks.

A cocktail party at the Society will celebrate Cohasset's worldwide shipping trade and current fishing and lobster industries.

For further information, call 781-383-1434 or visit CohassetHistoricalSociety.org or email Cohassethistory@yahoo.com.

Car wash Saturday

Now, who in town has a dirty car and would love to have it cleaned while supporting a great group of gals? The CHS Field Hockey Team is holding a Car Wash Fundraiser at the Second Congregational Church on Cohasset Common this Saturday, August 25 from 10 a.m. to 1 pm. All proceeds will support the Cohasset's Field Hockey Team and your car will be shiny and clean, a win-win all around!

Girl Scouts signup day

Just because the new school year is around the corner, doesn't mean the fun has to end. Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts provides exciting and educational programs, year round, for all girls entering grades K through 12. Cohasset Girl Scouts will kick-off the year by hosting a Girl Scout sign up day, on Tuesday, Sept. 17, at 6:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Library meeting room, 35 Ripley road, Cohasset. The membership fee for 2012-2013 is $12. Stop by, meet new friends and learn about the exciting program options focusing on the arts, technology, outdoor adventure, health, beauty and more.

OUR VIEW

Unintended consequences

We remember a "private ways" study committee created back in the early 1990s to study how to turn some of Cohasset's many small, private ways into public ways. The crux of the issue involved upkeep on the roadways. Some of the private ways had fallen into disrepair, upsetting residents who lived there.

The committee worked diligently to come up with an extensive plan – but had operated in a sort of vacuum when it came to input from other boards besides selectmen. We can recall then Planning Board Chairman Al Moore being asked to weigh in – late in the game – and he warned of "unintended consequences." We recall his explaining to selectmen that by making private ways, public ways, just might open the door to more development. He said a developer could buy a house on a private-turned-public way, tear it down and open up the land behind it with a simple subdivision plan. We recall that pretty much ended the effort – private ways have remained private.

We raise the issue of "unintended consequences" because we think our government needs to tread carefully when policy changes are proposed. On the issue of road races and other community events – it is important to know what the ramifications are of denying an application. Cohasset is a beautiful place and one of the offshoots of its terrific location, its New England character, and ocean vistas, is that it is a highly sought-after locale for all kinds of events.

Selectmen and the Acting Town Manager raised the matter of finding out where the money is going that is collected by these non-profits at Cohasset events as a possible way of deciding whether to allow them. We think that could be problematic and might be complicated. Who is going to be responsible for the auditing?

It is interesting that the town is considering being "film friendly" – hoping for an east-coast version of Tinsel town. Filmmaking, while fun and interesting, can tie the town into knots! (Eastwick revisited, anyone?)

Cohasset is all about quality of life. When all is said and done, that is the town's biggest asset. No town should have to cope with a large community event, every single weekend. But cutting back or sending some of those organizations packing is a policy change that requires a lot of thought and analysis of the potential pros and cons. In this case forming a committee, as suggested, that can be objective, look at the entire picture and seek a wide range of input is in order.

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hats off to an extraordinary educator

Often we do not take the time to say thank you to an extraordinary educator who contributed so much to our community. Ms. Stephanie Wooley taught in the Middle School for seven and a half years during which time she introduced Edible Math, Pi Day, and Numbers Day demonstrating that math is a relevant part of daily life.

Her rigorous and disciplined classroom taught students that with perseverance and dedication, the most complex math concepts were within their grasp. Her level of energy never wavered, providing after school support in math while also serving as the seventh grade team leader, Math Department Chair, and advisor for Peer Leaders. Ms. Wooley, a long distance runner, shared her passion for the sport with her students encouraging them to join her in the intramural running club and her yoga group.

Beyond her day in Cohasset, Ms. Wooley served on the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education MCAS Assessment Committee in designing the math MCAS tests for several years. Fr. Bill's and Rosie's Place have enjoyed her baked goods as has the CMHS faculty. Stephanie's commitment to children, her peers, and the community has touched each of us at CMHS. While we will miss her, we wish her well as she embarks on her new career in the Duxbury School District.

As Cohasset moves forward, we need to continue to attract and retain the best faculty as embodied by Ms. Stephanie Wooley and acknowledge individual teacher's contributions.

Thank you Stephanie.

APPLICANTS SOUGHT

Open seats on Housing Authority, Health Board

Both the Housing Authority and Board of Health have vacant seats and are seeking applicants to fill them for the remainder of their terms. The Board of Selectmen is responsible for making the appointments and will hold a joint meeting with the respective boards.

Robin Lawrence from the Board of Health was in the audience at the selectmen's meeting and discussed longtime BoH member Steve Bobo's recent resignation.

Lawrence called Bobo "a very valued member of the board" and noted that his term is up in 2013.

Those interested in applying to either boards should send a letter of interest to the Board of Selectmen's office: 41 Highland Ave., or email Tracey Connors-Kelly at:

Senior Center survey online until Sept. 15

Cohasset residents can soon weigh in on the proposed Senior Center project. The town hired consultants from UMass Boston to create an electronic survey using the Survey Monkey format. The survey will be available online September 15, and residents will receive a post card the same day with log-in information and instructions.

Student volunteers will offer assistance to those who need help accessing the internet, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said.

COMMENTARY

'Town finances are a top priority'

MICHAEL MILANOSKI

Over the last six months, as your Acting Town Manager, I have been working with the various Boards, Committees, and staff to analyze how Cohasset Town Hall operates — or what can best be described as an operational audit of our municipal government structure. As we implement new procedures, policies and initiatives, our main objective is to create an environment that allows the town to deliver its services in a more accountable, efficient, responsible and transparent manner – we as Cohasset taxpayers expect.

Earlier this year, after analyzing financial reports, the Board of Selectmen together with the Finance Committees identified a number of issues that predicted the town was heading in an unsustainable management and financial direction including:

- $600,000 in excessive spending above approved town meeting budget;
- $200,000 legal budget fully expended midway through year;
- A dozen unlawful and/or unfunded special employment contracts;
- Multiple Union Grievances and Unfair Labor Practice Complaints.

The BoS has made the town's finances a top priority. Upon my appointment, the Board directed the new Finance Director/Town Accountant, Mary Gallagher, and myself to lead the transformation of our town finance department so that we could move forward with the challenges facing all municipal governments with a heightened level of confidence/accountability and a plan to address Cohasset's specific shortcomings.

My first action as Acting Town Manager was to implement a spending freeze; as a result, the Town's annual budget ended, on June 30, in the black with funds available to reimburse the Town's stabilization fund – a major accomplishment given that the freeze occurred two-thirds of the way through the fiscal year.

With recommendations from the Governance Committee that I recently had the privilege of chairing, the BoS adopted a new budget development process that promotes a collaborative review process utilizing the financial expertise of the Advisory and Capital Budget Committee. In addition,

- The Town adopted Financial Management Policies with the objective to earn an AAA bond rating. We created a five-year operating and revenue forecast as the basis for sustainable and responsible budgeting in which the Town provides the level of service we can afford within our projected revenue.
- The Town secured the second highest bond rating available: AA+. This is due to the confidence the Bond Rating Agency has with the current management team; the financial strategies as adopted in Cohasset's Financial Management Policies; sustainable budgeting; actions taken to rebuild the financial systems and operations; and the establishment of a trust fund to tackle our unfunded OPEB (Other Post Employee Benefits) liabilities of $32 million dollars. Because of the high bond rating, we secured a refinancing interest rate of 1.68 percent, without extending the length of the bond, resulting in a savings of $1,333,000 over 10 years on excluded debt primarily used on school construction.
- The Town hired Powers and Sullivan, a highly regarded municipal audit firm, after 20+ years with our previous audit firm. P&S will prepare Cohasset's first Comprehensive Annual Financial Report (CAFR) that is the highest standards in government accounting and financial reporting.
- The Town continues to refine the concept of "joint management" between the Town Manager and our Enterprise Funds — developing a productive and professional working relationship with the water and sewer commissions that included the hiring of a new water plant operator, Woodard and Curran that will save $1,300,000 in reduced operations fees over three years.
- The Town is implementing project management procedures with the Capital Budget Committee for all future capital purchases and projects to provide better management of schedules, and budgets while reducing cost overruns.
- The Town is committed to containing future legal costs by preparing cost benefit analysis for all future and potential litigation. For example the Town spent $70,000 on Planning Board related issues, including $26,000 in defense of an affirmative Planning Board decision that benefited a windmill developer. Implemented a couple of months ago, all fees that are legally allowed will be charged to developers going forward.
- The Town's public safety departments are working collaboratively to provide system solutions in the Town's long-term interest. Chief Robert Silvia, recently appointed to the Statewide 911 Commission, is overseeing administrative and finances of both departments. He has helped set the stage for new public safety initiatives that are being developed and implemented by Deputy Chief William Quigley and Assistant Chief John Dockray while they run the day-to-day operations of each department.

Acting Town Manager Mike Milanoski talks about the future of Cohasset during the Annual Town Meeting held Saturday May 12 at Cohasset High School. PHOTO/K.A. MCDONALD

We continue to seek opportunities to revise the Town's department structure to better deliver the services you expect. We are fortunate to have a core group of dedicated public servants, including four new professional hires:

- Jane Lepardo, our new certified Treasurer /Collector, has already made structural changes to manage your tax dollars with more efficiency and transparency and will be implementing several new initiatives over the next six months;
- Rob Bonnell, Cohasset's Chief Technology Officer, has already transformed the School Department's computer system/network and is in the process of doing the same for the Town. We are proud of the joint partnership with the schools and we will be seeking other opportunities for utilizing economies of scale.
- Felix Zemel, our new Health Administrator, comes to Cohasset with tremendous experience and qualifications to lead our public health initiatives; within his first few weeks on the job, he helped build a partnership with the students at the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research to tackle the Meeting House Pond issue;
- In early September our new Director of Project Management and Planning will start and will immediately be very busy overseeing town initiatives and assessing future infrastructure projects.

We continue to be proud of our top-rated school system, our professionally run library, the tireless efforts of our Elder Affairs staff, strong recreation programs, and the hard-working staff at DPW and in our other strong departments. Without the professional dedication of our town employees, during understandably very trying times of change, we would not be as far along as we are in implementing procedures that will make for a better and stronger town government. We will continue to work on improving our services and delivery while always keeping an eye on the 'financial ball.'

It is my intention to prepare a status report to the Citizens of Cohasset quarterly, with additional updates of issues that are important to communicate to you in a timelier basis. Should you have any questions the staff at Town Hall and your elected officials are always willing to hear from you. I hold open office hours on Tuesday from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. or you may contact Tracy Connors to schedule a meeting TConnors@CohassetMA.org or 781-383-4105.

Michael Milanoski of Cohasset is Acting Town Manager.

DOLLARS TO DOUGHNUTS

A real name changer

I know the popularity of names ebbs and flows but you have to admit that's a sea change from years past.

CRAIG SALTERS

I was watching the Little League World Series the other day and the team from New Castle, Indiana has a great bunch of kids and much to be proud of.

But, unfortunately, that wasn't what I noticed first about them. What I noticed was the first names of their lineup card: Mason, Janson, Cayden, Hunter, Niah, Bryce, Jarred, Blake, and Bryce (again).

So no John? No Jimmy, Bobby, Richard, or Chris? There's nothing wrong with their names – like I said, their parents should be bursting with pride – but, as an apprentice old fogey, it's hard to get used to.

Growing up, my best friend's name was John and so was pretty much everybody else's. If they weren't named John, then they were named James. As for the girls, there was always a Linda or a Nancy or a Mary or maybe, if the parents were feeling bold, a Christine or a Meghan.

Not anymore. According to the U.S. Social Security Administration, the top 10 male baby names for 2011 were: Jacob, Mason, William (OK, there's a classic), Jayden, Noah, Michael (again...phew!), Ethan, Alexander, Aiden and Daniel. For girls, the top 10 names were: Sophia, Isabella, Emma, Olivia, Ava, Emily, Abigail, Madison, Mia and Chloe.

I know the popularity of names ebbs and flows but you have to admit that's a sea change from years past. In the 1940s, the top male baby names were, in order: James, Robert, John, William, Richard, David, Charles, Thomas, Michael and Ronald. As far as traditional names, that's a World Series team with Ronald, obviously, as a utility player. For girls, the 1940s top 10 was: Mary, Linda, Barbara, Patricia, Carol, Sandra, Nancy, Sharon, Judith, and Susan. Again, a who's who of who was who.

In the 1960s, Michael and Lisa reigned supreme as top baby names but there were a few newcomers on the list, like Jeffrey for the boys and Kimberly and Cynthia for the girls. Still, though, pretty steady.

When my son Jack was born, my wife and I came within seconds of naming him Owen. At the last moment we went with Jack as more original. Years later, on his youth hockey team, he was the second Jack and had three Owens as teammates. Must have been something in the water.

I remember when Dylan had its heyday but it wasn't for the poet Dylan Thomas or the modern poet Bob Dylan (nee Zimmerman). No, it was for the cool rebel teen, played by a 30-something, on the TV show "Beverly Hills 90210." Likewise, today's popularity of Edward, Jacob and Bella can be tied to that teen vampire series "Twilight." So it goes, but I'm glad that type of imitation doesn't happen for every movie or television show. I mean, can you imagine having to chat at the water cool with your co-workers Darth and Spicoli?

I myself was named after Craig Breedlove, a daredevil who broke all sorts of land speed records in what was pretty much a rocket on wheels. I absolutely love my name and am proud of my namesake, but I always feel I'm letting Mr. Breedlove down when I putter along Route 3 at 55 miles per hour, content to listen to sports radio and let the world pass me by.

Oh, well, I guess times change and names change with them. Maybe John and James will come back, along with Charles and Edwin and Agnes and Bertha. Probably not, but did anyone guess Madison or Cayden? Really?

And remember: when you're in your golden years, your doctors will be named Bryce and Chloe and your nurses will be named Mason and Madison. So get used to it.

FOR THE RECORD

Gearing up to go back to school

Beyond school lunch menus and honor rolls, which have long been staples of the community newspaper, there is so much more to cover than we have time and resources for.

GREGORY MATHIS

Back to school can be an exciting time, but also very stressful for students, parents, and probably for school personnel as well.

Beach days and pool parties have been replaced with school clothes shopping sprees and stocking up on supplies for the school year.

As the anticipation – or is some cases, anxiety – builds toward that first day and first week of school, students are wondering who they're going to have for teachers, who is going to be in their class, and what time they have to catch the bus.

In addition to preparing coverage for the upcoming year, we'd like your help in capturing some of those back to school moments by submitting photos for our reader callout. You'll find instructions for submitting photos on the Your News page beginning next week, as well as on your hometown wickedlocal.com website.

Once we get the first couple of weeks of school under our belts, we'll be looking to once again launch into our coverage of the school community.

Beyond school lunch menus and honor rolls, which have long been staples of the community newspaper, there is so much more to cover than we have time and resources for. With all that happens each day in the various schools in town, we rely on principals, teachers, parents and even students to be our eyes and ears.

If you don't see coverage of your school, there's something you can do about it. Take a picture or two of the science fair, the spelling bee or any school event, and send it along with a detailed description of who's in the photo, what they're doing, the name of the school and any other pertinent information. Ideally, we'd love to have each school mentioned every week in the newspaper, but we need your help.

We get calls from time to time from frustrated parents of students complaining that all we cover is high school sports. "What about the marching band?" they'll argue. "What about the drama club?" "How about some coverage of National Honor Society students?" We do devote space and resources to covering local sports, so those are indeed valid points, especially if you're child isn't a star varsity athlete. We would certainly be able and willing to work with the various clubs and organizations to come up with more consistent coverage with a little help from those involved.

The same holds true for private schools in the area, where our limited resources certainly are a factor in the limited coverage you might get. We tend to focus on the public schools because we know each of those students are from the town we're covering. We don't always know who the local students are at the private schools, but with your help, we can make sure those students are being recognized for their efforts as well.

My goal would be to have a robust school section in the paper each week. In order for that to happen, though, we need your help.

Contact your local editor, Mary Ford (mford@wickedlocal.com) if you have any questions about getting your school information into the Journal or on the Wicked Local website, or send an email to gmathis@wickedlocal.com and I can help get those questions answered.

'Legal' policy gets revised

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said Tuesday that after speaking with Town Counsel, the legal policy the board adopted during its July 10 meeting warranted revision. The policy, enacted in an attempt to better control the town's legal budget, stated that all legal requests for Town Counsel must go through the town manager's office.

According to Town Counsel Paul DeRensis, the town cannot restrict all legal requests: "Any citizen has the right to go to the custodian of public records," the Town Clerk's office. What the board can do, however, is create a management policy of requests that come from town officials.

The selectmen voted unanimously to repeal the July 10 motion and made a new motion that requests from town officials will be coordinated by the town manager.

Our World lease extension

The Board of Selectmen voted to extend the 10-year lease of the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, which was set to expire at the end of August 2012, by one more month.

As required by law, the town has published a request for proposals (RFP) for the rear portion of the library building that the museum occupies, which used to be a condemned wing of the former Osgood School. The RFPs require a 30-day review process, so the lease needed to be extended for another 30 days while the process in underway.

The selectmen voted unanimously to approve the extension.

CONTRACT

tive leave in February and removed without cause in March.

Milanoski was appointed as interim town manager in February and worked unpaid for the first two weeks, until the selectmen voted to pay him a $2,000 weekly stipend. On March 20, the selectmen voted to extend him as interim for another 15 months; according to his contract, he was being paid a salary of $112,500 for the remainder of fiscal year 2012 and would receive $132,500 for FY 2013.

The contract was signed during the April 3 meeting but was not voted on in public session, which was a violation of the state's Open Meeting Law. According to the state Attorney General's office, while a board may negotiate contracts and agree on final contract terms in a closed session, "the public body must vote to approve or ratify any contract or collective bargaining agreement in open session before it can take effect."

The selectmen voted again on Milanoski's contract, this time in open session, during their June 26 meeting. Selectman Martha Gjesteby said at a later meeting that she would like to see the town publish a request for proposals (RFP) for an experienced town manager. The other selectmen said they were impressed with the work the acting town manager has done so far. Carlson announced at the July 31 meeting that Milanoski's contract stipulated a review six months into his employment, and that the review would take place during the Aug. 21 meeting.

Performance review

During Tuesday's discussion, four of the five selectmen gave glowing reviews of Milanoski's performance. Gjesteby had questions and suggestions for the town manager and was often cut off by Carlson, who insisted that she stick to commenting on the work Milanoski's done so far. The terms of the review indicated that the board would make "specific recommendations for improvement in the areas where they see shortcomings."

One problem Gjesteby said she has had is getting a hold of the town manager and other staff in Town Hall, citing an example of a time she called and later found out everyone was in a staff meeting; she asked for a meeting schedule so the board would know when Milanoski is unavailable. The other selectmen, meanwhile, said they never had a problem getting touch with the town manager, and that if he didn't answer his phone or emails immediately, he would get back to them shortly.

"I find that hard to believe," selectman Diane Kennedy said of Gjesteby's claim. "I call this office all the time and there's always someone here."

The board discussed eight criteria to measure Milanoski's performance by, which were eight goals he planned to accomplish in his first six months:

- Communication with the board
- Work together closely and harmoniously with the board and town committees
- Effectively advise the board of all matters that require board action
- Support the finance director with closing fiscal year 2012 books and overage
- Implement the board's fiscal policies in fiscal year 2013 and organizational plan
- Monitor legal expenditures and advise on cost/benefit of litigation strategies
- Apprise the board, in a timely manner, of any employee or union grievances
- Initiate a program to develop policies and procedures and companion manual

Kennedy said that having this list in Milanoski's contract was "reactionary" to what occurred during the previous town manager's term; the selectmen said when removing Coughlin that he failed to communicate effectively with them and other town boards. Kennedy said that the selectmen were looking for someone who can "balance the roles of municipal employees" and volunteer board members.

"I think Michael has done as good a job as anybody could," said Kennedy, adding that through his service on town committees, including an associate membership on the Conservation Commission last year and as Governance Committee chair (he resigned in March), Milanoski has been "a student of our municipal government."

"It's no accident that he was somebody we went to when we needed [someone] to baby-sit during some crazy times," Kennedy continued.

Selectman Fred Koed agreed that during his time on other boards, Milanoski "gave consistent, good fiscal advice."

Koed cited how Milanoski was able to help the town reign in its legal budget by charging Planning Board appeals back to the client.

"I find Michael is creative in many areas and am glad we have him on board," said Koed.

Carlson said that Milanoski keeps the board apprised of what's going on in town. Jenkins noted that Milanoski informs the selectmen of matters that fall under the purview of the Town Manager Act that he has the power to sign off on without the board's input.

"At least he gives us the opportunity to listen," said Jenkins.

When it comes to town finances and the addition of new personnel, including Finance Director Mary Gallagher, Treasurer Collector Jane Lepardo and Chief Technology Officer Rob Bonnell, the town is "leaps and bounds ahead of where we were a year ago," said Kennedy.

Gjesteby reminded the board that Gallagher was not Milanoski's hire but Coughlin's, but the other selectmen discussed how Milanoski worked together with Gallagher and the rest of the finance department to help right the town's financial ship.

Jenkins said that he did have one complaint about Milanoski: "He spends too much time [here]." Jenkins explained that Town Hall needs a Human Resources director and someone to handle engineering: "The town manager can't do HR and engineering in this town."

"Even though he knows how," added Koed.

The selectmen voted unanimously to close the review and to offer Milanoski their support and confidence.

Voting behind closed doors

Then came the executive session, during which the selectmen voted to give Milanoski a new contract that ends two years after his current contract.

Gjesteby said in a phone call Wednesday that Carlson should not have released a statement to the press. For one thing, what happens in executive session cannot be revealed until the minutes from that session are approved, according to Gjesteby.

"We do not release executive session minutes without a vote from the board," the selectman explained. Furthermore, the contract the board voted to offer the acting town manager "is not a legal contract. We haven't voted it in open session."

Carlson clarified this issue in a phone call Wednesday. "We voted to offer him an extension which he accepted," the selectmen chair said. "We now have to vote a contract [in open session] to reflect that. In the meantime his existing contract remains enforced."

Legal woes in Attleboro

Another point of contention brought up by Selectman Martha Gjesteby: Michael Milanoski, an economic development consultant, has a suit against the City of Attleboro after he was laid off from his job as executive director of the Attleboro Redevelopment Authority in 2009. The ARA appealed a Superior Court judgment last month to have the city reinstate Milanoski and pay him back wages and benefits, plus interest; he and a fellow plaintiff could receive as much as $400,000 to $600,000, according to published reports. Those reports state those numbers could be lessened by pay from other jobs they have received since their layoffs.

Gjesteby told Milanoski she had a "dilemma" with him: "You have to decide" between his old job in Attleboro and his current job, she said. "It's a nice thing to have to decide."

Milanoski responded that he couldn't comment on a pending legal matter, however, "I think people know what I'm trying to do with this community."

Selectmen offer Milanoski new contract

At the Cohasset Board of Selectmen meeting on Tuesday Aug. 21, 2012, the Selectmen conducted a review of Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski based on his first six months in office. The comments of the Selectmen were very positive and supportive of his actions.

After the board's other public business was completed, the board went into executive session to discuss some union issues and Mr. Milanoski's contract. The board voted 4 to 1 to offer him a new contract expiring June 30, 2015 to replace his existing contract, which expires June 30, 2013. This action effectively extends his contract for two years. Selectman Jenkins will negotiate the terms of the new contract with Mr. Milanoski and will present that contract to the full board for approval.

The board's decision was based on the high quality of his efforts to date, confidence that he will continue to serve the town very well and the desire to assure continuity and stability in this important position.

Report No. 33
August 17, 2012

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 313C

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. This week, Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on three roll calls and senators' votes on one roll call from July legislative sessions.

CHANGES TO STATE GOVERNMENT (S 2342)

House 152-0, Senate 39-0, approved and Gov. Deval Patrick signed into law a lengthy bill designed to make major changes in the way state government operates. Key provisions include requiring monthly rather than quarterly distribution of unrestricted local aid; requiring an independent debt affordability study to be performed and posted online before the governor sets a bond cap and issues bonds; requiring each state agency to have a performance management system in place; and establishing a commission to make recommendations on the feasibility of moving the state from traditional maintenance-based budgeting to a modern zero-based budgeting process -- a system that would require all state departments to start with zero dollars and prepare and justify their budget regardless of what it was in prior years.

Supporters said this would modernize and reform the way state government operates and contribute to a more open and transparent government. They noted the measure also abolishes many antiquated laws relating to state financing.

READ PROFICIENTLY BY THIRD GRADE (H 4243)

House 150-0, approved a bill creating an Early Literacy Expert Panel to advise the state's education departments on strategies to have all students in the state reading proficiently by the end of third grade. The panel would make recommendations for the implementation of a language-rich curriculum, professional training of teachers, and family partnerships for improving the quality of interaction between homes and schools to support children's language and literacy development.

Supporters said 39 percent of the state's third grade students read below their grade level. They argued that studies show 74 percent of students who have a difficult time with reading in third grade often continue to struggle throughout high school and are four times as likely to drop out before graduation.

The Senate has approved a different version of the bill which now goes to the House for consideration.

$45 MILLION SUPPLEMENTAL BUDGET (H 4324)

House 120-33, approved a $45 million supplemental budget designed to close out the books on fiscal 2012. Provisions include $7.08 million to cities and towns for the cleanup following Tropical Storm Irene in August 2011 and $8.4 million for the October 2011 snowstorm; $10 million for information technology upgrades and improvements; and $2 million for the eradication and control of mosquitoes.

Supporters said the package is fiscally responsible and funds necessary programs including several that are running out of money.

Some opponents said the House leadership was unable to demonstrate that the state took in enough tax revenue to pay for this $45M supplemental budget. Others said the budget rewarded agencies that failed to live within their budgets by giving them additional funding.

(A "Yes" vote is for the budget. A "No" vote is against it.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

SMOKING CESSATION PROGRAMS (S 2121) - The House gave initial approval to a proposal that would provide all residents insured under Commonwealth Care with coverage for smoking cessation programs, including use of a nicotine patch and counseling sessions. Commonwealth Care is the state's health insurance program for uninsured adults who meet income and other requirements.

The measure also allows the state to offer the same coverage to current or retired state employees.

FLYING FLAG AT HALF MAST (S 1573) - The House gave initial approval to a Senate-approved proposal requiring the state flag to be flown at half mast following the death of a police officer or firefighter killed in the line of duty. More rounds of approval are needed in both branches before the measure can go to Gov. Patrick.

OIL SPILLS ON STREETS (H 487) - The House gave initial approval to legislation imposing a $10,000 civil fine on companies that spill more than 100 gallons of oil on any Massachusetts road. The revenue would go to the city or town in which the spill occurred. The fine would be in addition to, not in place of, the company's responsibility to foot the bill for the cleanup.

LOW BIRTHWEIGHT BABIES (S 2406) - The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a bill requiring the Department of Public Health (DPH) to develop standardized procedures for discharging from the hospital babies who are born weighing less than 5.5 pounds or with any other high-risk problem. The DPH would also be charged with ensuring the procedures are followed.

Supporters said low birthweight babies who survive will suffer from higher rates of respiratory, cardiovascular, neurologic and gastrointestinal problems than other babies. They argued it is time for the state to get more involved in ensuring they have the proper care after leaving the hospital.

AFTERSCHOOL PROGRAMS (S 2111) - The House and Senate approved and sent to the governor a bill creating a 15-member Massachusetts Afterschool and Out-of-School Time Coordinating Council that would strive to increase access for all children to high quality afterschool and out-of-school time programs. The council would try to improve coordination between school districts and these programs and also try to attract public and private support to build a sustainable infrastructure for these programs.

JOB PREFERENCE FOR CHILDREN OF CORRECTIONS OFFICERS (H 4182) - The House gave initial approval to a bill that would put the names of children of corrections officers who died in the line of duty at the top of the civil service eligibility list. The children would only be eligible after passing the written and physical exams that qualify them to be on the list. Current law provides this preference to sons and daughters of police and firefighters.

COMPUTER SAVVY

CTO presents town tech plan

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

When it comes to technology, Cohasset is on its way to becoming a 21st century enterprise. Thanks to the town's new Chief Technology Officer, Rob Bonnell, the phone system has been given an upgrade, the outdated town website is being overhauled, and a more secure network infrastructure and better computer work stations are on the way. Bonnell's motto: Make it "better, faster, stronger." Also: "I don't like to spend money."

This was music to the selectmen's ears at their Tuesday night meeting, during which Bonnell presented what he has accomplished in his first 12 weeks on the job and what his plans are for the future of the town's technology.

First of all, Bonnell credited town officials for creating the CTO position (Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski and Superintendent Barbara Cataldo worked together to formulate the job).

"I was impressed," Bonnell said during his presentation. "It's forward-thinking to create this job for a town this size. It's almost not done at this point. I give Cohasset a lot of credit."

The CTO's position is split between the town and schools, with his office in the high school, but Cohasset's resident tech guy rarely sits still. Since coming to Cohasset in June, Bonnell has already garnered praise from various departments and earned himself a few nicknames.

"You've all heard the accolades," Milanoski said of Bonnell to the board of selectmen, calling the CTO "the wizard, the fixer."

Milanoski said that so far, Bonnell has been putting in around 70 hours of work per week. This is significant given that the CTO commutes to Cohasset from western Rhode Island. For someone who lives fairly far away and has only been on the job for two and a half months, it seems Bonnell has gotten a lot done.

The first part of the CTO's presentation was a list of highlights from his first 12 weeks. So far, he's created a new unified email server for all town employees and moved all of the old mail over. All town employees now have a town of Cohasset email address and have been asked to conduct all town business through that system. Bonnell said that this should help streamline the public records request process, with which Town Hall has had "some real issues with meeting public records requests, rules and regulations."

Bonnell has also revamped the town's new SoftRight accounting software by bringing the software's hosting in-town. The CTO explained that the town was going to pay a few thousand dollars to have the software hosted by SoftRight, but "that made no sense," said Bonnell. "I moved the server back into town."

This is part of a server configuration, which was "in need of help," Bonnell explained. "I cleaned up the server and made it more secure. The server has been put in place and is running in a virtual environment." He added that the server is "working well" with "no hiccups."

The CTO has set up an encrypted, virtual private network between the public safety departments, Town Hall and the schools. Bonnell has spent quite a bit of time solving tech dilemmas on the public safety side.

One of the first jobs the CTO did was to fix the public safety department's phone system. Bonnell said a vendor estimated the job would cost $10,000; however, with "the right people" helping out and an eBay search for the right part, Bonnell said he was able to do the job in four days' time for $1500.

Bonnell also helped the police department recover over 16 years' worth of data on an old server that "came to a screeching halt" during the CTO's second week on the job.

"There were no backups," Bonnell said of the sensitive data. "It was a very long weekend." The CTO managed to get all of the data back by that Monday.

Bonnell said he is working on a one-year, three-year and five-year action plan with the superintendent and town manager that involves how to update the town infrastructure and outline potential costs. Some cost will need to be devoted to new computer workstations, which Bonnell said are in dire need of updating.

"The computer hardware throughout town is probably four years overdue to do upgrades," the CTO said.

A more immediate fix is the town website, which has been moved onto a different server as its old host, Go Daddy, was no longer supporting the site. The old site went offline last Thursday and was unable to be updated; some committee agendas, notably the selectmen's, were missing from the site when they are normally uploaded on Fridays. Bonnell said he moved the website to a different server, which is at his house.

Bonnell said that his long-term goals involve lowering costs while still providing services to Cohasset citizens, to "make technology better, faster, stronger," and to "make government more transparent."

It's a lot of work for one employee, and Bonnell has no plans to set up an entire IT department. The CTO, who said he has owned his own business for 18 years, said that he would like IT on the town side "to end with me."

On the school side, Karen Gibbs works in the IT department alongside Bonnell, who consolidated their separate workspaces into one room. The CTO said he hopes to create a "tech team" and coordinate a program where high school juniors and seniors can be trained in IT and become A+ certified, which will provide the town with free IT service while students gain work experience.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson asked if Bonnell could have a budgeted prepared in time for fall Town Meeting; the CTO said that he hopes "to have numbers available by third quarter, get RFPs [requests for proposals] done by second quarter and start the implementation."

Selectmen vice chair Diane Kennedy said the work Bonnell has done so far and his vision for implementing new technology over the next few years is "impressive."

Carlson added, "It's a great start."

Term limits for Con Com?

Commission talks policies and procedures

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Conservation Commission is known for having long-serving members; some have been on the board for decades. But is that about to change?

During their Thursday, August 16 meeting, commissioners discussed revamping their committee bylaws, referred to as polices and procedures, and whether or not to enact term limits. The group debated limiting the full three-year membership to two terms. The associate membership, a non-voting position, is a one-year term that must be reappointed by the Board of Selectmen each year.

The group could also place a three-year limit on the chairman position.

Vice-chairman David Farrag noted, "The board of selectmen approves commissioners no matter what."

"If this board were to include self-imposed term limits, I don't know if the board of selectmen would follow them or disregard them," said associate member Patrick Kennedy, an attorney who was appointed to the Con Com in June and has worked on the policies and procedures. "If this is going to be a two three-year term limit policy, it's unclear right now whether that means someone who served two three-year terms would be disqualified from reapplying or being reappointed. Everyone sitting on this board right now is eligible for a minimum three-year appointment."

"The board of selectmen approves commissioners no matter what."
David Farrag, vice chairman

Farrag said that it's a question of timing. "You don't want [terms] to be too long and have stagnation." Too short terms, however, mean that commissioners are "just learning, and then they're gone. Maybe there's a medium somewhere that could be found."

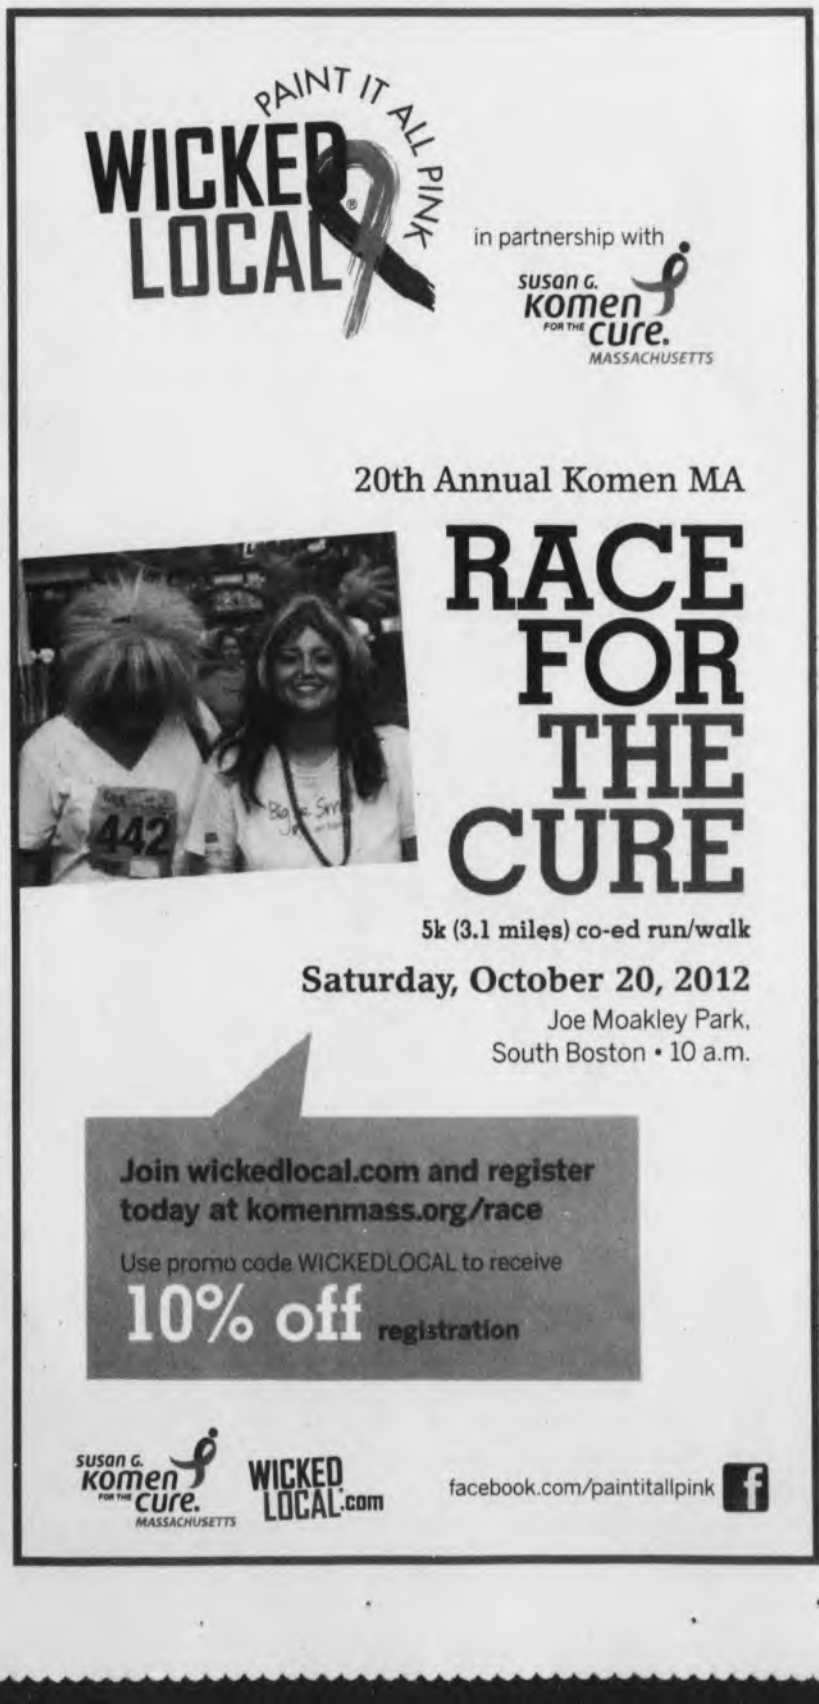
Associate member Dr. William Henry, another new associate this year, said he was in favor of term limits: "It's always good to get new blood."

Commissioner James Marten, who was appointed last year, noted that sometimes "there's a lot of ill feeling when long-term members are replaced."

Last year, the Board of Selectmen stunned the Con Com when they did not reappoint three longtime commissioners in favor of three newcomers. The decision was appealed by a group of citizens, who asked the selectmen to rescind the move and reinstate the ousted commissioners, but the selectmen said the matter could not be undone.

Marten was one of the new commissioners the selectmen appointed. He noted that in the past, "My observation was when they did in fact turn over members of the board, because they were such long-serving members, it discouraged new people from coming to apply because there seemed to be no point."

Farrag said that the Con Com once had trouble filling an open seat, and "went three years posting for an associate member and received no applications."



The board did not vote on new policies as a few members were missing from the meeting, but will discuss the matter again on an upcoming agenda. In the meantime, Farrag asked Conservation Agent Paul Shea to describe his experience with conservation commissions in other communities.

"It's very different in every town," said Shea. However, he explained that when commissioners serve for just a few years, "they're just getting up to speed, and [commissions] are losing good members."

Shea said that what the commission has discussed so far "seems fair... It's not like you get appointed and you're there for life."

SWIMMING

Waves hit the ocean

Weymouth Waves participate in the Swim and Fin Open Water Championships

On August 18, 2012 four Weymouth Waves took to the ocean for the Salem Sound Open Water Championships.

This USA sanctioned event was to encourage interest in open water swimming for both USAS members as well as USAM members.

The Open Water Championships offered a 500M, a 1 mile and a 5K swim. USA swimmers and USA masters swimmers gathered from Mass, N.H., and Conn. to compete in this difficult race. It was cool and raining in the morning - enough to discourage many from entering the 65 degree water with no wetsuit.

Three of our boys: Sam Rice, Tyler Lueck, and Peter McDonald participated in the 5K event. Not only did they compete, they all placed.

Sam Rice placed first in his age group with a time of 1:13.12, Peter placed third in his age group with a time of 1:07.55 followed by Tyler who placed forth with a time of 1:08.59. They were truly amazing in this 3.2 mile race.

Dean Spicer competed in the one mile distance, also winning his age group with a time of 24:12. For Dean, Tyler and Sam it was their first open water experience but certainly not their last.

Rox season ends in playoffs

Local players make marks in first season

Despite a late-inning rally for the second straight night, the Brockton Rox, which featured Cohasset/Scituate American Legion players Brendan Doonan, Jeff Cavanaro, Jordan Berry and Rob McCunney, fell to the Nashua Silver Knights, 3-2, in Game Two of the 2012 Futures Collegiate Baseball League (FCBL) semifinals at Holman Stadium on Monday night.

For the locals, it was a good season.

Doonan finished 2-2 with a 1.17 ERA and a save. He tossed 23 innings in 13 appearances, allowing three earned runs. He fanned 18, allowed just 12 hits and eight walks.

In the playoffs, Doonan pitched four scoreless innings, allowing one walk and one hit while striking out four.

Doonan also batted .500 with two RBI and a stolen base in 10 at-bats.

Cavanaro finished his first season with the Rox with a .250 average in 14 games, while Berry hit .231 with four homers and 22 RBI in 147 at-bats.

McCunney had a strong season, hitting .292 with three homers and 16 RBI in 89 at-bats over 23 appearances. He also had four doubles and a triple. In the playoffs, McCunney hit .333, with three hits in nine at-bats with an RBI.

With the win, the first-seeded Silver Knights advance to the 2012 FCBL Championship, where they will face the second-seeded North Shore Navigators on Tuesday night.

After Nashua (2-0) jumped out to an early lead in the first inning on an RBI single from Jon Minucci (Southern New Hampshire) that plated Rays Roman (Dakota State), the Silver Knights added two more runs in the second thanks to a two-run double from James Katsiroubas (UMass Lowell).

Brockton (0-2) finally scratched a run against Nashua starter Christopher Good (New Mexico) in the sixth inning when Norton's Sean Ryan (Wheaton) scored on a deep fly ball from Luis Gonzalez (Concordia) that was misplayed by the right fielder. The Rox soon tacked on another run in the eighth inning to pull within one after Tanner Reibenspies (San Diego State) stole third base and then came around to score on an error by the catcher.

With the Rox threatening late in the game for the second straight night, Nashua's Cole Warren (Rhode Island) shut the door on Brockton in the ninth to earn the save and seal the victory for the Silver Knights. Meanwhile, Good picked up the win (1-0) for the Silver Knights after six strong innings on the hill. The southpaw racked up six strikeouts while scattering just one unearned run on four hits.

Opening play a saintly experience

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

The start of play in the Legends Div. play in the Men's South Coastal Hockey League was a saintly experience.

Jim Callahan, who led the Legends Div. in scoring two seasons ago, started the new season with two goals and an assists to lead the Saints to a 6-1 win over the Crusaders.

Jim McNeill, Hanover's Tom Shaughnessy and Charles Ryan each had a goal and an assist for the Saints, who scored the last five goals of the game.

John Currie also scored for the Saints in the third period from Mike Purdy.

Jim Donovan of Marshfield tipped in a Jack Parson also of Marshfield shot in the first period for the Crusaders goal. Mark Kaplan also assisted on the Donovan goal.

The Legends Div. will have the Sharks play the Whalers at 7:50 p.m. and Toros will meet the Stingers at 8:50 p.m. on Sunday at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

Ready for a rematch

Chiefs shake off loss, prepare for Clippers

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

This is one time that Coastal Chiefs football coach Jim Sullivan did not have to contact Triple-A for this road map.

The first-year Chiefs start their tour of the second time around in the Triple-A level of the New England Football League on Saturday night with a trip to New Bedford High on Saturday at 7 p.m. to take on the Whaling City Clippers. The Chiefs inaugural game was against the Clippers, which was a 25-0 loss at Hanover.

Coastal will be coming off a 50-0 loss to the undefeated Boston Bandits this past Saturday at Jamaica Plain.

Sullivan though feels that his team has learned alot especially in the last two weeks of the season about life in the NEFL.

"We know that we are going to take our bumps and bruises at the triple-A level of this league (NEFL)," said Sullivan. "I was talking to the Bandits coaches and they were telling me at the triple-A level the rosters are 55-60 players. Our 22 players have come out and played with a lot of heart. The Bandit players were complementing us about out how hard we played after the game."

"We need more players to compete at this level. They (Bandit coaches) were telling us that team have 15-20 good athletes at the skilled positions. We need more skilled players and to get bigger player."

"We have the road map to be successful. The first step was putting the uniforms on, the second step was finding out that we could compete with some of the teams. We have probably played the top two teams (Boston and the North Shore Generals) in the past two weeks. We have learned what it takes to get there that is the road map we are following in the second half of the season. We will play most of the same teams in the second half of the year."

The second half of the season schedule starts off with the game against Whaling City.

The Chiefs were able to move the ball against the Clippers in the first meeting. They had two drives stall out inside the Whaling City five in the game.

"We know that we can compete with the them," Sullivan said. "We felt that we were able to run the ball on them the first time. We have a little more of a passing attack which will help us."

"We had some players that were putting on the pads for the first time at this level and they were a little tenative when we played them. We have a better understanding of what to expect."

Frank Mogavero did not play in the first meeting between the two teams, but the Chiefs running back had a strong performance in the 50-0 loss to the Bandits. According to the coach, he was able to run hard and produce some first downs.

The Bandits have been a program that has had great success in the NEFL with four titles in the last 10 years and Sullivan felt that the game was "tough learning" for his team.

GOLF NOTES

Every PGA Tour stop is all about the money

PAUL HARBER

In a few days, some of the greatest golfers in the world will rendezvous at TPC Boston in Norton for the Deutsche Bank Championship.

They will talk about how important this tournament is on the PGA Tour schedule, how the Greater Boston area is a golfing hotbed and how the golf course is one of the greatest in the world.

It's all lies. It's all hype.

It is just another stop on the money train and many won't know if they are near Bangkok or Boston. The only reason they are coming here is because of the $8 million purse and the FedEx points.

It's all about the money and that's all.

It's an athletic carny show. Instead of the bearded, fat lady and the guy that can swallow swords, they have guys who can hit the ball from one zip code to another.

It's about draining every piece of gold out of all the fans and all the corporations.

My, how far has the PGA Tour come in Massachusetts, even during this downturn in the economy.

We remember back to the time when Massachusetts had its first regular tour stop.

It was a time before huge corporate sponsors and huge TV contracts, when $200,000 tournament purses meant something.

It's a time when pros traveled in automobiles from one tournament to another instead of private jets.

It's ironic that less than an hour away from TPC Boston sits Pleasant Valley Country Club in Sutton, home of the PGA's first tour stop in Massachusetts.

Professional golf came to Massachusetts in the mid-1960s, thanks to one person, Cosmo "Cuzzie" Mingolla, PV's first owner.

Pleasant Valley might not have been the greatest golf course in the world, but it should rank among the top 25 in the state. However, it certainly was a perfect site to hold a professional tournament.

There was ample parking and from the clubhouse area, you could view eight of the 18 holes.

It was stadium golf before the PGA Tour conceptualized stadium golf.

It was a magnificent place to watch a tournament.

It had its own character. The hill at the side of the amazing par-4 17th green was perfect. It was rowdy, especially on a Sunday afternoon.

The gallery would hoot and holler and bet a few shekels on whether a particular golfer would make par or hit his approach into the water that fronted the green.

Furthermore, there was more interaction with the players.

The putting green was just an arms length from the fans.

It holds a special place in the lore of the tour. Champagne Tony Lema won here shortly before his untimely death in a plane crash. He was called Champagne Tony because when he won, he set up the pressroom with all the champagne they could drink afterward.

Then there was Tom Shaw, a good golfer and a great guy, who enjoyed partying as much as he did making birdies. When he won the tournament, he celebrated deep into the night.

On the Monday after the tournament, they found his winner's check in a Worcester bar.

There have been naked girls jumping in the club's swimming pool and many antics that did not make the newspapers.

It was a time when pro golfers where people, not corporations.

Problem was Pleasant Valley was not part of PGA Commissioner Dean Beman's vision.

Beman wanted the PGA Tour to build its own golf courses and hold all of their events on their own golf courses.

He figured, 'why give course owners part of the profits.'

That is how the TPC courses began.

Beman tried to purchase Pleasant Valley. Cuzzie's son, Ted Mingolla, ran the course at the time, and he was stubborn.

He refused to acknowledge the future and would not sell to Beman.

First, Beman kept raising the purse requirements, $500,000, then $750,000 and finally over $1 million.

Mingolla went broke trying to keep the tournament. He made some poor choices at tournament sponsors and eventually lost his course.

Meanwhile, the PGA got what it wanted.

They built a TPC course in Norton and Beman's vision is now reality.

Besides the Mingolla family, the biggest loser in the deal is the public.

TPC Boston is a lousy course; built on swampland fit for nothing, except, perhaps, mosquitoes.

The only difference between nearby Norton Country Club and TPC Boston is money sunk into the project.

The PGA Tour can throw plenty of perfume on its pig.

It is a lousy place to watch a tournament and you have to park off site and bus in.

Yes, you get the best players in the world coming to Norton, an $8 million purse and designating it as a FedEx event makes a world of difference.

But for the fan, there isn't much.

Pleasant Valley offered so much more.

But it's not about fan convenience.

It's all about the money the PGA can grab.

Connelly captures fourth Keyes Cup

Notes and quotes around the local golf scene...

Braintree resident David Fasano participated in the 14th Annual Golf Tournament benefiting Norwell Visiting Nurses Association and Hospice. Fasano played for Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group, one of the sponsors of the event held at Kingston's Indian Pond Country Club. In photo, from left, are Richard Welch Jr., director of management information services; Paul Casale Jr., executive director, Allerton House at Central Park Assisted Living in Weymouth; David Fasano, corporate foodservice director and Phil Glassanos, vice president of business development. COURTESY PHOTO

It seemed logical that a pair of women golfers from the South Shore would defend their titles in two high-caliber Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts tournaments being held on the South Shore this week.

Tara Joy Connelly of Cohasset GC jumped out to a five-stroke lead in the first round and never faltered as she cruised to a four-stroke victory (71-78-149) to repeat as champion in the prestigious WGAM Grace Keyes Cup for Class A and B players at Marshfield Country Club.

Connelly had an advantage. She learned the game as a teenager here on this wonderful Wayne Stiles and John van Kleek design.

This is Connelly's fourth Keyes Cup victory. Only Florence McClusky (nine), Ann Marie Tobin (six) and Marion Maney (five) have won this tournament more than Connelly.

For whatever reason, it was one of the smallest fields – 33 entries – since the tournament began in 1950. In 1958 at Brae Brun, there were only 30 participants.

In the Keyes Cup flight action, Linda Goulet of Presidents GC placed third, Deb O'Kelly of the Country Club of Halifax was fourth, and Helga Lind of White Cliffs CC was fifth.

Rockland High School sophomore-to-be Megan Khang, who had spent only seven days in her home in the past six weeks after traversing the country to participate in national tournaments, fired a four-under-par 140 (70-70) at Braintree Municipal Golf Course to win the championship flight of the WGAM Junior Championship for the second consecutive year.

Another local golfer who emerged victorious at Braintree Municipal was Allison Paik, 10, of Sharon, a first-time entrant who shot 37-39-76 (nine holes each day) to capture the Mite division of the WGAM Junior by 14 strokes over her nearest competitor.

"It feels good to come back and win my first tournament at home to boost my confidence," said Khang, who recently competed in the U.S. Women's Amateur in Cleveland and the PGA Junior Championship in Fort Wayne, Ind. in successive weeks. "It's been a fast summer, but definitely a lot of fun traveling. Getting my butt kicked at the (U.S. Women's) Amateur (7 and 6 defeat in first round of match play) was good for me. It keeps me focused on what I have to do in the future."

Fairways and greens

Good luck to Steve Gregg, the superintendent at Scituate Country Club for the last few years. He and his family are returning to Jackson Hole, Wyo., where he learned the art of greenkeeping. A Weymouth native, Gregg has a mean stick and can play, carrying a low single digit handicap. His two biggest thrills on the golf course where beating his decrepit old father, Steve Sr., a hack who does anything he can to win, and his second biggest thrill was fashioning a hole-in-one last year at the South Shore Four-Ball in Hingham. Gregg, who was carrying around his father as a partner, aced the 200-yard par-3 eighth hole, which was quite a feat... Several local players qualified for the upcoming Sept. 4-6 State Mid-Amateur, which will be held at Framingham Country Club, Joseph Frew of Granite Links and Brian O'Leary of Ponkapoag shared medalist honors with Dennis Konary of Old Barnstable. All three fashioned 2-under 70s at Poquoy Brook CC in Lakeville. Matt Czarnecki of Granite Links (1-over 73), Robert Mancini of Thorny Lea (74), John Nolan of Easton (74), Dave Pomarico (75) and Andrew Danieli of Indian Pond (75) made the cut. Rick Marcos, whose family built the golf course and were its first owners, also qualified. However he had a 78 and had to survive a sudden death playoff that pitted eight golfers battling for four berths. At Tekoa Country Club in Westfield, Andy Falcone of Marshfield Country Club shot a 1-over 72 to make it and Mark McCormick of South Shore County Club shot a 77 to be the first alternate... If you want to help the First Tee of Massachusetts and have fun doing it, you might what to consider participating in the Deutsche Bank Championship's Birdies for Charity Program. Each donation of $10 or more will allow the donor a chance to enter the "Guess the Birdies" Contest. The contestant who guesses the correct number of birdies made by professionals during the Deutsche Bank Championship will win the Grand Prize of two Red Sox season tickets for 2013 at Fenway Park. The first place prize is a pair of premium economy round trip airline tickets on Virgin Atlantic Airways. All participants will also be entered into a drawing to win a new set of Titleist irons. Here is a rundown of birdies at TPC Boston in past years: 2004 - 1,364; 2005 - 1,587; 2006 - 1,279; 2007 - 1,310; 2008 - 1,479; 2009 - 1,291; 2010 - 1,303; and 2011 - 1,266... The Oct. 5-7 Southeastern Amateur Championship will have special meaning this year. Roger Barry, former longtime golf writer for The Patriot Ledger and tournament cofounder along with Fordie Pitts, passed away in January and current tournament chairman Mike Prendergast is quick to realize the importance of this year's tournament. "This tournament would be nowhere without Roger and Fordie," said Prendergast, the 1980 tournament champion. "They drew it up on the back of a napkin, and look at what it's become. For all of Roger's notoriety at the national level, his friendship with Arnold Palmer and being president of the Golf Writers Association of America, Roger took great interest in the local golf scene. Prendergast noted that South Shore CC and Wollaston GC were part of the rotation for the inaugural tournament in 1960, and that Easton CC has proudly retained its opening round status since first becoming part of the tournament. Another important benefit of the tournament is that points are awarded toward the Mass. Golf Association Player of the Year standings for high finishes... Andrew DiRamio of Quincy fired a 1-over 72 to earn co-medalist honors in a qualifying round at the Black Hill Club in Old Lyme, Conn., which earned him a spot in the U.S. Mid-Amateur Championship on Sept. 8-13 in Lake Forest, Ill. Herbie Aikens of Kingston is an alternate after shooting 73.

"We had a tough time with some injuries," said Sullivan about the game with the Bandits. "We had to start all 150 pounds of Kevin Graden at tackle and he played with a lot of heart. Brian Aufiero played his first game for us with a taped up broken wrist and Bill Stella played with a lot of heart. Steve Farnick had to play the whole game at quarterback, because Tim Hajjar was hurt and he did a good job."

"Frank Mogavero ran the ball hard and ran very well. The Bandits complemented us on our heart, but playing with heart is not the only thing that we are looking to do. Boston did not try to run up the score. They were a class organization. When we looked at this game we knew that this was going to be tough. It was a great experience, because we got to see one of the class organizations in the NEFL."

SAILING

Bemis honored

F. Gregg Bemis (Cohasset and Concord) has been named as one of the nine sailors who are members of the 2012 class of inductees into the National Sailing Hall of Fame.

Best known for his work on the racing rules for the sport, his volunteer contributions include a long tenure as chairman of the national governing body's Appeals Committee as well as a leadership role in judging at junior and intercollegiate regattas.

He was honored by the international federation (then IYRU, now ISAF) who awarded him the Beppe Croce Trophy in 1989.

The prestigious award is for an individual who has made a voluntary outstanding contribution to the sport of yachting. A member of the Harvard class of 1922, Bemis was a national sailing champion who raced competitively into his 80s. He died in 1995 at age 94.

FANTASY FOOTBALL

Every Given Sunday: Fantasy Football

How fantasy has shifted to reality

By Jake Levin
For the Hingham Journal

Honest question: which season do you look more forwards to, your favorite NFL team's season, or your own fantasy team's season? Maybe New England isn't the best place to ask such a question, with a real football team that's gone 134-42 since 2001. But how about in a locale such as Cleveland? The Browns have gone 56-120 over that very same span. In Detroit, do you think fans have been more excited about the Lions potential (47-129 over the last ten seasons), or the potential of their fantasy squads?

Many trends in sports and pop culture tend to come and go, to fade in and out and remain as historical footnotes. Remember the popularity of the World Series of Poker back in the mid-2000's? You couldn't flip between the ESPN family of networks without running into some sort of poker game. Every four years, the talking heads say "this World Cup, soccer will take off in America!", only it never does, and who knows if it ever will. Fantasy football, however, has been an exception to the rule. There are legitimate professions to be made by becoming an "expert" in fantasy sports, with football trumping all. Not only can someone strive to be the next Al Michaels or Howard Cosell, one can strive to be the next Eric Karabell or Matthew Berry. (Seriously, go to ESPN.com and look if you've never heard of Karabell or Berry. You actually have to pay for some of the content).

Even as a Patriots fan, I look just as forward to the fantasy football season as I do the "real" one. In many ways, the fantasy is just as real as the NFL. I mean you're usually only rooting for one team on Sunday, unless you're a degenerate gambler, which isn't possible since gambling is illegal. But with fantasy football, there are players on multiple teams who will keep your interest on the games throughout the afternoon. Seriously, another Jaguars-Titans game being shown on CBS? Wait a second, you've got Chris Johnson and Maurice Jones-Drew involved? Sign me up. Don't wanna deal with the Rams-Cardinals late game on FOX? You might, with Steven Jackson and Larry Fitzgerald in the mix. All of a sudden, every game on Sunday could have implications for you and your team.

Of course, no fantasy football experience is complete without being in a great league. While public leagues are possibilities, the best leagues are without a doubt with your buddies. Having the draft offline in someone's basement is always a date circled on the calendar. You can't win your league on draft night, but you can certainly lose it. Just look at me last season, as I took Jamaal Charles in round 1 (tore ACL in Week 2); Peyton Manning in round 2 (didn't play a snap in 2011); and Chad Ochocinco Johnson in round 3 (swing and a miss). The results? Ocho puts it best: child, please.

I've been the commissioner of a league for seven seasons now dating back to 2006. I was in high school back then, I'm in college now. It's been a great way to keep the friendships alive as people have moved in different directions. A bogus trade proposal. A snarky message board post. A gut-wrenching defeat due to a Monday Night Football game. The drama of a fantasy football league can be quite entertaining. Everyone's got that one friend in a league that logs on to their account and picks a player up just as soon as news breaks about him, or news of another player who will be affected. Think back to Week 1 in 2008, when it was announced Tom Brady was out for the season. I'll bet Matt Cassel went off the waiver wire pretty quickly in your league.

The ups and downs of the fantasy season can oftentimes be just as exhilarating as those of the NFL season. Your team could be stocked with Aaron Rodgers, Arian Foster, and Calvin Johnson. More often than not, they'll all deliver. But if you think going undefeated in the NFL is difficult (read: 2007 New England Patriots), fantasy is a whole other monster. While you control who you draft, trade, and add/drop to your team, you still aren't actually controlling the players. They themselves remain the ones in control, in reality. So what was this about it all being a fantasy?

(Cohasset, URI) cruised through four frames of relief for Brockton, allowing just one hit and one walk along the way. Westwood's John Sheehan (William & Mary) followed suit in the eighth and ninth to keep the hosts off the scoreboard, conceding just one hit and striking out three in two innings of work.

Katsiroubas paced Nashua's offense with a 2-for-4 performance at the dish to go along with a pair of RBIs, while Roman went 1-for-3 with two stolen bases and two runs scored.

Reibenspies went 2-for-4 with two stolen bases and a run scored to highlight Brockton's night on offense. Ryan tallied a single, a run scored, and a pair of stolen bases, while Joe Gallub (Concordia) finished 1-for-3 with a walk and two stolen bases as well.

Braintree's Patrick Delano (Vanderbilt) suffered the loss (0-1) for Brockton after allowing three runs (one earned) on five hits and two walks.

In the playoff opener, an 11-9 loss, McCunney had an RBI single in the eighth inning that helped the Rox rally back from an 11-5 deficit, to bring the score to 11-9.

The Rox won 15 of their last 20 games to close out the regular season, finishing 30-23 overall to clinch a playoff berth in their very first season of collegiate baseball.

Meanwhile, Brockton led the league in attendance from wire-to-wire, while Campanelli Stadium became one of the most desirable places to play in the league, drawing rave reviews from fans, coaches, and players.

Hanover's Paul LaFond and Bob Bibeau scored a goal each, while Jay Parker also of Hanover and Bob Donahoe each had an assist for the Rangers.

ROAD RACE

End of Summer Classic

On Friday August 24, several hundred runners will again cover a 5-mile course along the roads and the Weymouth Back River in Hingham's own Bare Cove Park.

Sponsored by Marathon Sports, the 5th Annual End of Summer Classic Road Race starts at 6:30pm, just as sunset colors are painting the sky and river.

Proceeds from the race benefit the Friends of Bare Cove Park.

Funds from past races were used recently to re-grade, pave and stripe the parking lot at the Park's main gate.

Features this year include: Tech shirts to the first 400 entrants; cash and gift certificate prizes donated by Marathon Sports; REI team Challenge; WBCN mobile unit provides music before the race; Bag Pipers playing; water stops sponsored by Gatorade and Aquarian; this year's Post race celebration will be held at Raffael's/ South Shore Country Club.

Register on-line at www.endofsummerclassic. com. Early registration is $25; beginning August 20th, registration will be $30 (both with a small service fee).

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church: Two More Sundays on the Beach!

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is an inclusive, Christ-centered community committed to exploring the intersection of our faith and our lives. We invite you to join us on Sunday mornings and through a variety of special programs during the week. All are welcome to worship God with us at St. Stephen's!

This Sunday, St. Stephen's continues its summer worship schedule. Rather than our normal 8am and 10am services in the church, our early service is at 7am on Sandy Beach in Cohasset. Because this is before vehicle tags are checked, everyone is able to come! The second service is at 9am in the church. We will be having baptisms at both services!

This Sunday is also our second to last Sunday on our summer schedule, which means there are only two beach services left! If you've never worshiped with us on the beach, then you've missed out on a real Cohasset treat. But there's still time! See you at 7am at Sandy Beach this Sunday or next.

AA meets four times a week at St. Stephen's: Sundays at 7 p.m., there is a Closed Big Book Study. Tuesdays there is a Women's step meeting at 6:30p.m. and a closed discussion meeting at 8 p.m. Fridays at 6:30 p.m. there is a Beginner's meeting. All meetings take place in the Watermelon Room at the church office.

Please call the church office at (781) 383-1083 or visit ststephenscohasset.org for more information

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Valerie A. Lipsett

COHASSET – Valerie Alayne (Shaw) Lipsett of Cohasset, Massachusetts, age 75, August 15.

She attended Mount Holyoke College and received a degree from Boston University. Val became active as a community leader in Cohasset, helping to organize the South Shore Chapter of the League of Women Voters.

While raising two children, she became deeply involved with the Unitarian Universalist First Parish under Roscoe Trueblood, writing the curriculum for the Sunday School Program. As an active member of the Cohasset Historical Society she was Treasurer, Recording Secretary, photographer, graphic designer, and chaired several Committees right up to her death.

Val was part of the move of the Cohasset Historical Society from the Lothrop House to the Pratt Building.

Val was a writer, publishing poetry, opinion, and fiction throughout her life. She and her husband Max had several businesses, including ROIT Corporation and she was the Publisher of "The New England Farm Bulletin and Garden Gazette." Max and Val and their red truck were well known about Cohasset for years as "The Tinkers", repairing household things for frugal people. Many relied on Val's diligence in bookkeeping and tax preparation. She cared.

She was an enthusiastic genealogist, researching and documenting significant historical data for her family and many others. She was a world traveller and had just returned from a family trip to Ireland in June. She was a loyal friend. She will be missed.

Born January 1, 1937 in Adel, Iowa, the daughter of Burton and Audrey (Klepper) Shaw. Valerie is survived by her two children, Koren Lipsett (Gettysburg, PA) and Brian Lipsett (Naples, ME) and his wife Victoria Vest; three step-children, Kathy Blackadar (Hanover, MA) and her husband John, Jennifer Hagemann (Naples, FL) and her husband, Henry, and Stephen Maire (Worcester, MA) and his wife, Kim; four grandchildren, Alayne, Harrison, Beata and Alexander; 4 step-grandchildren, Leita, Kate, Christopher, and Caroline); Val's ex-husband, H. Gerry Lipsett (Marshfield, MA), father of Brian and Koren; two brothers, Gordon Shaw (MO) and his wife Jean, and Ronald Shaw (ME); and numerous friends. She was predeceased by her beloved husband, Max S. Maire.

In memory of Valerie Lipsett, consider honoring her with a memorial contribution to the Cohasset Historical Society, a non-profit organization, PO Box 627, Cohasset, MA 02025. Please offer an act of kindness for a stranger in her memory.

A memorial service and celebration of Val's life has been scheduled for September 29, 2012 beginning at 1 p.m. at the First Parish Church, on the Commons, Cohasset, MA.

SUNSET CONCERT

Classical meets rock outdoors at the Abbey

Back by popular demand, the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra presents Sunset at the Abbey on Saturday, August 25 at 5 pm, the perfect end-of-summer outdoor concert on the lawn at Glastonbury Abbey, Hingham.

This year's concert combines classical music with classic rock. Three top ASO musicians, Jessica Lizak, flute, Audrey Wright, violin, and Konstantinos Papadakis, piano, play a set of classical pieces in various combinations. Papadakis, an ASO favorite, will play from his recently-released CD, "A Short Liszt." They then join the South Shore's most fun classic rock band, Border Road, in a set that brings rock classics to life. Border Road is composed of outstanding local musicians Andy Bergsten, Bill Barton, Chuck McDermott and Preston Hoffman from Scituate and Hingham.

Bring a lawn chair or blanket and a picnic and enjoy the idyllic setting of the Abbey, just off Rte 228 (Hull Street) in Hingham. In case of rain, the concert moves indoors to the Old Ship Parish House, 107 Main Street, Hingham. Adults $12, youth through age 18 free.

For information and tickets, call 781-331-3600, or go online to www.atlanticsymphony.org

GIMME SHELTER

Mindy's looking for a new chapter

Adoption fees for adults cats reduced

Mindy is a young, all-black female who had a rough time of it before HSAR came out to trap her and her kittens. It was last winter and she had given birth outside on a patio at Linden Ponds, a retirement community in Hingham.

The seniors there took good care of the young family but they were glad to get out of the cold! Mindy's babies learned to love people in the shelter and were all adopted quickly. However, Mindy is still at HSAR because it has taken her a while to get over being abandoned. After months of hiding in a corner and staying on the highest possible shelf, she now likes to sit in a window catching sun and lets people pet her and rub her cheeks and neck. She gets along with other cats but would like a quiet home where she can continue to develop more trust and show more love. Please come in and spend some time with Mindy and maybe her life story will have a happy new chapter! As are all the cats here at HSAR, she is spayed and up to date on all her shots.

For information on Mindy or any of HSAR's wonderful felines, call Judy @781-534-4902, or visit: www.hsar.org. If you have a couple of hours to spare per week to care for and socialize with HSAR's residents, call Nancy @ 781-925-3638 to volunteer. You'll be glad you did! For all other inquiries, call 781-925-3121 and speak with Mary or leave a message. HSAR looks forward to hearing from you.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter offers a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

HSAR sends out a huge thank you to its many supporters.

The HSAR Board has reduced the adoption donation fee of adult cats from $100, to $25 from now through the entire month of August. HSAR has so many adoptable felines, who have resided at the shelter and are so ready for forever homes. HSAR hopes this will help in acquiring homes for many of them during the slower summer months.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 3, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might not like the sudden setback in your plans. But keep that headstrong Arian temperament in check and wait for explanations. Things will begin to clear up by week's end.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Enjoy the respite from your recent hectic schedule, but be ready to plunge into a new round of social activities. A new contact holds much potential for the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A trusted colleague has news that could change your perception of a current workplace situation. What had seemed unfair might prove to be highly favorable after all.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You still need to watch what you say and how you say it. What you assert as honesty, others might perceive as Crabbiness. Be patient. This difficult period clears up by the weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your Royalness needs time away from the limelight to catch up on things, from tidying your desk to making those calls you've put off. You're back in the center of things by the weekend.

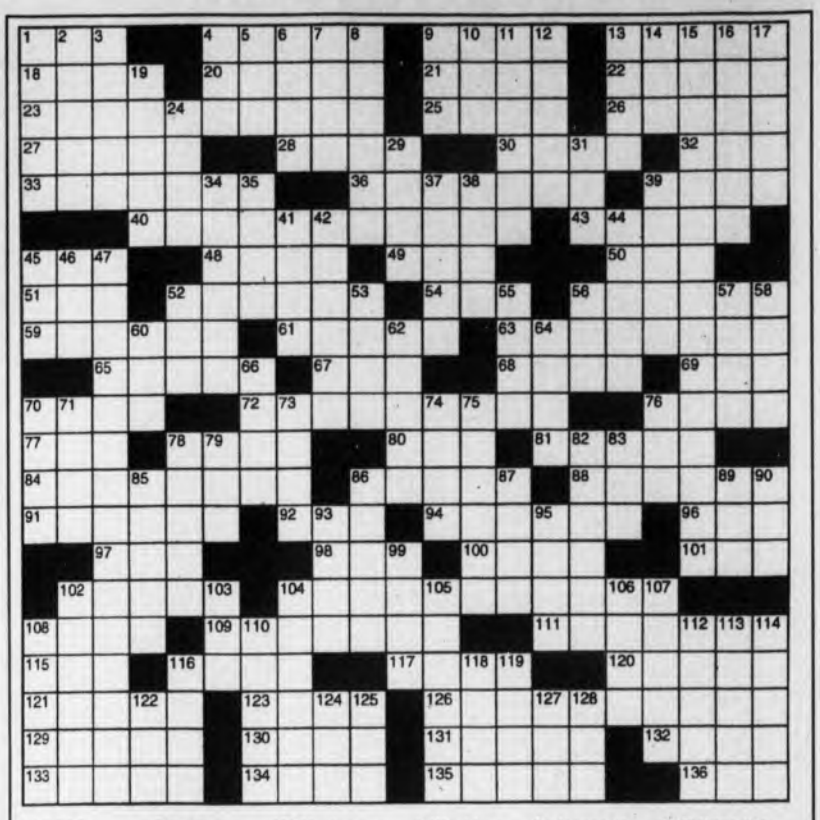
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Honesty is the best policy, of course. But you'll do better at achieving your goals if you can be less aggressive and more circumspect in how you phrase your comments.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your ability to maintain your balance in confusing situations continues to work for you. Stay on the steady course, one step at a time. The weekend shows improvement.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your indecisiveness could simply be your keen Scorpian sense warning you to be wary of making a commitment. Take this time to do a more thorough investigation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Good news: New information comes your way to help you make a more informed decision on how to deal with the opportunity that has opened up for you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) This is a good time to reinforce your self-confidence by acknowledging your good qualities to yourself. A lull in your social life ends by the weekend. Have fun.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It's a good time to let those recently pent-up emotions flow more freely. Why not start by letting the people you care for know how you really feel about them?

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Resist offers, no matter how well-intentioned, to help with a personal decision. Only you know what must be done, and you have the emotional strength to follow through.

(c) 2012 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a talent for getting things done. You also have a gift for bringing people together in both personal and professional relationships.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Cooking up a 'Storm'

Local health coach Linda Storm served up fresh, healthy fare at the Thursday, August 16 Farmers Market on the town common. Using ingredients she bought at the market that day, Storm whipped up zucchini spaghetti with chutney tomato sauce and "Indian Summer Succotash." As a certified health coach and yoga instructor, Storm's message is this: "Trying to live a healthy lifestyle doesn't have to be boring."

For recipes, check out the Mariner online and visit www.healthcoachlindastorm.com.

Ultimate lawn party for a great cause

Think the game of croquet died with Queen Victoria? Think again. It is alive and well and hilariously competitive at the annual Croquet Classic in Cohasset on Saturday, Sept. 22. It is the most fun you can legally have on someone's front lawn and it is all to support pediatric programs at South Shore Hospital.

The Friends of South Shore Hospital LINKS group invites you to join them for the ultimate lawn party at a private, waterfront home in Cohasset. Croquet is the main attraction, but a raffle with great prizes like Patriots tickets, a wonderful spread of gourmet food and adult beverages, and a relaxed and entertaining atmosphere also highlight the event. The point is—you don't have to know how to play croquet or even step on the croquet court to have a great time!

The LINKS members are young professionals with families of their own who live and work on the South Shore. They hold multiple events each year to raise funds in support of pediatric programs at South Shore Hospital. To register for the Croquet Classic and obtain additional details, please log onto southshorehospital.org/events or call 781-624-4170.

AT MUSIC CIRCUS SUNDAY

Martina McBride returns to her favorite venues

By R. Scott Reedy
Correspondent

Martina McBride will be at the Cape Cod Melody Tent, on Saturday, Aug. 25 and Sunday, Aug. 26, at the South Shore Music Circus.

Singer Martina McBride – who comes to the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis on Saturday and South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset on Sunday — could be on the go non-stop, between her recording and touring careers. The country superstar stepped off the road and out of Nashville altogether earlier this summer, however, so that one of her daughters could pursue her dreams.

"We moved the whole family from Nashville to Los Angeles for about six weeks. My middle daughter, Emma Justine, is 14 and she's always wanted to try her hand at acting. She took some acting classes and workshops," explained McBride by telephone recently from a Santa Rosa, Calif., tour stop. "This could be the beginning of realizing her dream, which is a beautiful thing. When I was Emma's age, my parents were very supportive of me. They did everything possible to help me be able to sing wherever and whenever I could, and I'm happy we can do the same for her."

When the Los Angeles sojourn ended, Emma, her sisters Delaney Katharine, 17, and 7-year-old Ava Rose Kathleen, and their dad, sound engineer John McBride, were happy to head back out on the road with Mom for a 21-city tour of moderately sized venues.

"I didn't really tour last summer, but I did play the Cape and Cohasset, because I just couldn't say no. I love the Melody Tent and Music Circus, because you can hear what people are saying. It was while I was in New England last year that I got the idea for this tour. Playing these size venues is like going back to basics. The shows are all about the music. That just isn't the case in a stadium or an arena, which is why these kinds of show are my favorite. They provide great opportunities for me and for the band, because they allow us to relax, take our time, and do more ballads. It is a much more spontaneous experience, where we really get to connect with the audience."

McBride, 46, has been using her powerful soprano voice to connect with audiences since 1990, when Garth Brooks moved her from selling merchandise at his shows to his opening act. Since then, McBride – a four-time winner of the Country Music Association's Female Vocalist of the Year award – has sold over 18 million albums on the power of hits like "Independence Day," "I Love You," and "This One's for the Girls."

On her current tour, McBride, a native of Sharon, Ks., population 200, will showcase her earlier hits as well as newer releases from "Eleven," her 2011 top-10 country album, on which she wrote six of the songs. Her 11th studio release, and first on Republic Nashville, the album features "Teenage Daughters," which she co-wrote, and "I'm Gonna Love You Through It," a moving ballad by Ben Hayslip, Sonya Isaacs and Jimmy Yeary, about the value of unconditional loyalty and friendship. Not unlike "Independence Day" (1994), which was about empowering victims of domestic abuse, the new song reasserts McBride's strong commitment to supporting women — whether they be in abusive relationships or battling breast cancer.

"We do the new song at every show now. It's very emotional for me and for many in the audience, too. It's always gratifying when you have a song that connects and really speaks to people. For me, it's all about being able to raise awareness. You play the song, people listen, and that's a good thing."

For McBride, whose pop-styled sound has led to crossover success on the adult contemporary charts, the connection doesn't come only through country music. The 14-time Grammy nominee and winner of numerous Country Music Association awards recently teamed with Pat Monahan of Train on the 2012 single, "Marry Me."

"Pat is one of my favorite singers," said McBride. "We did 'CMT Crossroads' in 2010 and we performed in Las Vegas together last year. We're usually at complete opposite ends of the world, on our own tours, but I hope we can sing together again."

Until then, McBride – who has also done duets with Vince Gill and Kid Rock – will remain focused on her solo career.

"My biggest desire is to keep making records and keep touring. I hope I get to do this for as long as I can, because I love it so much."

Martina McBride will be at the Cape Cod Melody Tent, 21 West Main St., Hyannis, on Aug. 25. For tickets and information, call 1-800-745-3000 or go online at melodytent.org. On Sunday, Aug. 26, Martina McBride will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset. For tickets and information, call1-800-745-3000 or go online at themusiccircus.org.

WOMEN'S BUSINESS NETWORK

Huff coming to Linden Ponds

Huff will speak about the challenges women face in building a career from the ground up, drawing on her own experiences working in television news for the past 27 years.

Longtime television news reporter Gail Huff will address the South Shore Women's Business Network at its upcoming breakfast meeting, to be held at 7:30 a.m. Thursday Aug. 30 at Linden Ponds' Derby Street Clubhouse, 203 Linden Ponds Way in Hingham.

Huff will speak about the challenges women face in building a career from the ground up, drawing on her own experiences working in television news for the past 27 years.

Huff is best known for her 17 years spent at Boston's WCVB-TV5. She is currently on leave from her role as a news reporter for WJLA-TV7 in Washington, D.C. to join her husband, U.S. Sen. Scott Brown, in his re-election campaign. A graduate of Waltham High School and Bentley University, Huff later attended Emerson College's graduate program for broadcast journalism. She is an active participant in various charity organizations, including the Alzheimer's Association, American Stroke Association and the Horace Mann Education Association.

Huff and Brown have been married for 26 years and live in Wrentham. They have two daughters, Ayla and Arianna.

Tickets for the networking breakfast are $25 for SSWBN members and first-time attendees, $40 non-members and may be purchased online at www.sswbn.org.

Schools, faculty ready for students

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

After a record-breaking hot summer, temperatures are cooling down, beach days are dwindling, and August is nearly through. After a long Labor Day weekend, Cohasset schools will be back in session.

The first day of school for all grades is Tuesday, September 4.

"I have a remarkable team I'm working with now. It makes for an exciting year."
— Barbara Cataldo, Supt. of Schools

"We're ready to roll, are certainly well-organized, and are ready for students and teachers to come back," said Carolyn Connolly, Cohasset's

More than fixing homes

Personal growth, memorable experiences

By Jenny Magruder
correspondent

The Appalachia Service Project is a program that began in 1969 in Barbourville, Kentucky. After having seen the great amount of poverty in this area, the Rev. Glenn "Tex" Evans decided he needed to do something to help. Thus, he gathered 50 student volunteers and brought them to Barbourville to improve the lives of impoverished families by fixing their homes.

Since then, the program has greatly expanded, and over 14,000 homes have been repaired by 260,00 volunteers. Included in this amount is the Town of Cohasset. Twenty-five years ago, the Rev. Gary Ritts, pastor at Second Congregational Church, and his wife Judy started the first ASP trip with volunteers from Cohasset.

Before Ritts came to the Second Congregational Church, he was an associate minister at a church in Fairfield, Conn., where he was in charge of the youth group

ELECTION SEASON

State primary is next Thursday!

What: State primary

When: Thursday, Sept. 6, 2012 (Election officials and the Legislature moved up the date from Tuesday, Sept. 18 to avoid a conflict with Rosh Hashanah, which begins on Sunday, Sept. 16.)

PRINT EXTRA

Polling hours: 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., at Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

Who can pull a ballot:

- If a voter is enrolled in a political party, they may only vote in that party's primary. For example, if a voter is registered as a Democrat, they may only receive a Democratic ballot, or if a voter is registered as a Republican, they may only receive a Republican ballot. Please remember that there are currently three political parties Democratic, Republican, and Green-Rainbow.

- An unenrolled voter, commonly referred to as "independent" may vote in any primary. When appearing at the check-in, the voter must declare which party ballot they want to receive. This information must be recorded on the voting list but does not change the voter's unenrolled status.

By the numbers: Cohasset has 5626 registered voters. There are 3135 unenrolled, 1204 Democrat, 1270 Republican and 5 Green-Rainbow. There are 12 registered as Libertarian, which is a political designation, not a party.

Looking ahead: This year's general election date is Tuesday, Nov. 6

Fact: The Thursday primary also occurred in 1988 and 1964.

For more on the primary, see page 11.

TOLMAN TELETHON

Smith boys are young ambassadors

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Like most boys their age, the Smith brothers of Cohasset, 10-year-old Gregory and 7-year-old Daniel, love sports, summer camp, and Harley Davidson motorcycles.

The boys "lead very robust, healthy, active lives with lots of friends and family and do a lot of fun things," says their mom, Sharon.

The Smith boys also deal with a neuromuscular disease, which both of them have had since they were little. But neither of them let the diagnosis keep them down. Gregory and Daniel are both ambassadors for the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA), and are regular participants of the Annual Tolman MDA 24-Hour Telethon, started by fellow Cohasseter Jay Tolman.

This year marks the 36th since the telethon was started in 1970, when Tolman was still in college. The boys have been helping out for the past few years and are excited to hold up the tradition.

In fact, Gregory and Daniel have been MDA ambassadors since they were in fourth and first grade, respectively.

"I give them a lot of credit for being as young as they are doing this," their mom, Sharon, said in a phone call.

Their role as ambassadors involves doing something that many people fear: public speaking. At this point, the boys have become old pros.

"They've gone to different places and spoken in front of

ON THE MOVE

New Senior Center has an address

This week marked yet another milestone for the proposed Cohasset Senior Center. The Social Service League of Cohasset is building the Center for Cohasset Elder Affairs.

Many people have seen the project announcement sign located on Sohier Street diagonally across from the Paul Pratt Library and last week the Cohasset Assessor's office officially assigned the street address for the new center as 91 Sohier St.

The Social Service League's architects Bargmann Hendrie + Archetype, Inc. have been developing plans for the new Center and are working towards applying for permits in the fall. The Social Service League Building Committee plans to have local permits by the end of 2012 with an anticipated groundbreaking in Spring 2013.

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the right (by the candy display) after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Open seats on two boards

Both the Housing Authority and Board of Health have vacant seats and are seeking applicants to fill them for the remainder of their terms. The Board of Selectmen is responsible for making the appointments and will hold a joint meeting with the respective boards.

Those interested in applying to either boards should send a letter of interest to the Board of Selectmen's office: 41 Highland Ave., or email Tracey Connors-Kelly at:

tconnorskelly@townofcohasset.org

Veterans agent contact number

Interim Veterans Agent Garrett Hunt has an office above Sovereign Bank at Cohasset Plaza (380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Suite F).

The best way to reach Hunt outside of office hours or to make an appointment is by calling 781-635-4407. The number is also listed on the outside of the building, front door at the street level.

BRIEFLY

Title 5 is at Health Board

Cohasset Board of Health will hold a Public Hearing in the Basement Meeting Room at Cohasset Town Hall on Monday, Sept. 17 at 7 p.m. in order to amend the Cohasset Board of Health Supplemental Rules and regulations to Title 5 of the State Environmental Code.

An initial discussion about the amended regulation will take place during the Public Hearing of the Cohasset Board of Health on Tuesday, Sept. 11 at 8:45 p.m. at the same location. A copy of the draft regulations is available for viewing at the Cohasset Town Clerk's office at Cohasset Town Hall during normal business hours.

POLICE BEAT

Investigation into fireworks suspended

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police said the fireworks seized Saturday night (Aug. 18) on the breakwater at the entrance to the harbor were high-end, consumer-grade fireworks. The fireworks display, which was planned by the Roys, 49 Margin St. — who were celebrating their son's wedding reception that night — was brought to the attention of the police through the detail officer working at the event.

The penalty for possession of consumer-grade fireworks, which is a misdemeanor, is $100 fine, unlike illegal possession of commercial fireworks, which is a felony, police said.

Deputy Chief William Quigley said this week that the initial investigation has revealed that the person who was found in possession of the fireworks does not appear to be the person who purchased them.

"Without investing substantial investigative resources, which would include sending our detectives out of state, this investigation will be suspended and the case will be closed if no other information becomes available," he said.

Quigley said police constantly seize fireworks being set off around town every summer, especially around the Fourth of July, but police have not had a seizure of this magnitude. The penalty for illegal possession of anything from firecrackers up to high-end consumer-grade fireworks is the same: the $100 fine, police said.

The state Fire Marshall's Office took possession of the 200-300 pounds of fireworks confiscated that night and destroyed them, police said.

Mistaken 9-1-1 calls

Police responded to at least six abandoned or accidental 9-1-1 calls over the past week, which is a fairly routine matter. Police always follow-up and send a cruiser to confirm that nothing untoward is going on. Several recent accidental calls involved callers misdialing 4-1-1 for directory assistance and callers misdialing while trying to call a number oversees.

However, police said someone intentionally calling 9-1-1 as a prank could face a misdemeanor charge with a penalty of up to 2-1/2 years in jail. Deputy Chief William Quigley said the statute is the same one that governs sounding a false alarm, such as pulling the alarm in a firebox when there is no fire.

Erratic operator

At around 5 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 25), Cohasset police received a dispatch that a cell caller was reporting an erratic operator near Shaw's Plaza who was headed north on Route 3A in a Chevrolet Silverado pickup truck. Cohasset police were not able to catch up with the truck but Hingham police spotted the vehicle near the Rotary and pulled it over on Route 3A near the Bathing Beach. The Quincy man, who told police he was on his way home and had been at the Marshfield Fair was arrested and charged with drunken driving.

Expired plates

• At 11:11 a.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 21), an officer on patrol stopped a 2006 Ford pickup truck with expired plates near Beach Street and Highland Avenue. The operator, a 51-year-old Kingston man, was cited for having an unregistered motor vehicle, which carries a $100 fine. His truck was towed.

• At 7:12 p.m. on Tuesday (Aug. 21) at the intersection of Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Pond Street, an officer on patrol stopped a 2007 Ford Explorer, operated by a 38-year-old Cohasset man, with expired plates. The car was towed and the man was issued a $100 citation for an unregistered motor vehicle.

Summonsed

A 36-year-old Quincy man is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation following a traffic stop on North Main Street at 9:42 a.m. on Sunday (Aug. 26). An officer on patrol observed that the 2004 Chevrolet Malibu the man was driving had an expired inspection sticker and pulled the car over. Further investigation revealed the man, who had been in the country for eight years, only had a Brazilian license and did not have a Massachusetts driver's license. His car was towed.

Well-being check

Police went to the home of a Cohasset woman at about 10:54 a.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 22) to see how she was doing after receiving a call from the Apple store in Hingham where she had been a customer that she had not been feeling well and needed an escort to her car. Police checked on her and she was fine.

Bridge jumpers

Police responded to a call from a concerned citizen that small children were jumping off the Border Street bridge while their parents were watching at about 2:44 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 22). When police arrived, the group was gone.

Phone fight

Police received a call at 4:13 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 22) about a woman who was screaming and yelling on her cell phone while walking on South Main Street toward the village. Police said the woman, who lives in an apartment in the village, was fine and was apparently having a fight with someone over the phone.

Boat assist

Police received a call from a concerned grandmother at about 7:38 p.m. on Wednesday (Aug. 22) that her grandchildren, who were sailing from the harbor to the lighthouse, were overdue by about an hour. Police said the trailer they were using to launch the boat off Parker Avenue had become disabled in the water. When they returned, they were unable to get the boat back onto the trailer. Police found them working on the trailer.

Missing man

A concerned caller reported an elderly man, who lives on Pond Street, was missing at around 10:36 a.m. on Thursday (Aug. 23). Several areas were checked including the beaches and harbor. The man was located at the library, one of his favorite places, police said.

Erratic operation

Police responded to a report from a cell caller at 9:37 p.m. on Friday (Aug. 24) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) about a Jeep being operated erratically. Police stopped the Jeep near the Jack Conway office near the Scituate line. The 58-year-old Marshfield man, who was driving the Jeep, checked out OK. He was cited for failure to drive in marked lanes, police said.

Loud talk

What was reported as a domestic in progress at 11:18 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 25) in the parking lot at Cohasset Plaza turned out to be a loud discussion between a male and female from Braintree who work for a cleaning company, police said.

Tracks

Police told a 47-year-old homeless man to stay off the right-of-way by the railroad tracks. Police responded to a report from a walk-in at 11:09 a.m. on Sunday (Aug. 26) about a man walking on the tracks. Police found the man near the tracks and gave him a warning. Had they seen him along the tracks, he would have been arrested, police said.

Arguments

• Police responded to an apartment in the Avalon complex at 10:08 a.m. on Monday (Aug. 20) where they stood by while the resident's ex-wife collected some of her things. The ex-husband, who called police seeking an officer, was concerned she was going to go beyond retrieving her things and take some of his stuff, police said. Police said there were no restraining orders and no violence occurred.

• Later in the week, police were back at Avalon at another unit for a 9-1-1 hang-up call that came in at 6:55 p.m. on Friday (Aug. 24). The dispatcher reported hearing a fight. Police arrived and found a verbal argument between husband and wife. Peace was restored.

Unwanted guest

A Cohasset woman, who called police at 9:25 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 20), asked them to get her boyfriend out of her house. Police said the boyfriend, who lives in the same neighborhood, left of his own accord.

new Middle-High School Principal.

Connolly isn't the only new face students will see around the hallways. The Middle-High school has a new assistant principal, Brian Scott, and several new teachers (see sidebar).

The Joseph Osgood School also has a new administrator at the helm: Bob LeCount, the new interim principal.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo is starting her second school year in Cohasset.

"One year later, I've settled in but am still considering myself very lucky to be here in Cohasset," Cataldo said. "The people are wonderful; the kids are engaged; there are a lot of kids with really unique talents here."

The superintendent was complimentary of her staff as well.

"Teachers have been coming and going all summer, which shows dedication," said Cataldo, adding that she has spent much of the summer getting to know the staff members "as a leadership group."

"I have a remarkable team I'm working with now," the superintendent said. "It makes for an exciting year."

In addition to new faces, new programs and innovations are on the way, from a new math program at Osgood, an improved school lunch program at Deer Hill, iPad training for teachers, iPads in the classrooms, and new technology overall.

With so many changes underway, the 2012-2013 seems to be off to a fresh start — fresh like snow. But don't say the word "snow" to a superintendent.

"To the chagrin of seniors, I'm praying for another snowless winter," said Cataldo.

Osgood

School for Cohasset's youngest students starts at 9:10 a.m. and ends at 3:10 p.m. The town's pre-k through second grade school will also see some changes.

Enrollment has decreased slightly this year, with less students in second grade than last year because the 2011-2012 class one of the largest the school has had.

This year, there are 35 pre-k students; 115 kindergartners; 113 first graders; and 131 in second grade.

Interim Principal Bob LeCount, who started his new job two weeks ago, said the school is piloting new programs in math, handwriting and the writing process. While the traditional three "r's" are still prominent, the school is also looking toward incorporating new technology.

"I think introducing technology to the classroom as one of the tools in the toolbox is probably going to be my primary goal," said LeCount. However, technology is just one of the "things I'm thinking of; I want to spend time meeting with teachers before we make any changes and get their input."

As the first day approaches, the Osgood principal said that he's good to go: "I'm eager to start the school year."

Deer Hill

Like its neighboring school, Deer Hill will also pilot a new math program, called EnVision, this fall. The biggest news, however, might be the changes to school lunch. The school is complying with new state requirements with more strident nutrition standards.

While Principal Jennifer deChiara said that the school's lunch program "up to now has been within the guidelines withstanding, it's really going to be stepped up with the nutritional aspect." Both students and parents "are going to notice a difference."

Successful programs from last year are continuing this school year. The school will continue the Reading Street program with writing instruction designed by the teachers last year to coordinate with thematic units and the new Core Curriculum in English/Language Arts. The Words Their Way Word Study program, which helps students understand the rules of spelling, will also continue. Students will enjoy science instruction in the STEM lab and the enrichment program EMC, (Enrich, Motivate, Challenge).

"We're always trying to make improvements to our academic program," said deChiara.

Deer Hill enrollment for the coming school year is 426, which is a slight increase over last year.

Middle-High School

Over the summer, there's been a change in leadership at the top of the junior-high school. This year, both the principal and assistant principal are new. It's not often to see this kind of changing-of-the-guard happen simultaneously, but in talking to both Principal Connolly and Assistant Principal Scott, it seems to be a smooth transition.

"I didn't know Carolyn prior to interviewing for this position," Scott said of Connolly. "But we share the same philosophy, values and understanding of education... I've found working with her to be great."

Both new administrators are still settling in to their new positions, but Connolly said it has "been a really nice transition."

Starting her new role in Cohasset has been "fantastic," she said. "Everyone I've met is super-enthusiastic, and I can tell already that I've never worked with such a dedicated staff. Everyone is really supportive."

Scott agreed, saying, "Everyone I've met has been wonderful." The assistant principal also noted that even and a big part of his job was to continue the ASP program at the church. After moving to Cohasset, he wanted to introduce the program to the town, but thought that the extra four hours would be too long for the ASP trip. Thus, he and Judy organized a mission trip to Maine in 1988, and brought seven volunteers along with them to help a family in need.

ASP

Since this initial trip, the Ritts' have continued taking service trips, but have switched to ASP. The maximum number of volunteers was reached five years ago, with 196 people and five centers. This year, there were 80 volunteers and three centers, which made organizing the trip much more manageable for the Ritts'.

Cohasset ASP attracts volunteers of all ages from both Cohasset and the surrounding communities. Every year on a Friday morning in June, first timers, veterans, and adults meet at the St. Anthony's parking lot, pack up the buses, and head down South to make a difference in someone's life.

Each year the projects are different. They range from painting walls to create a teenager's dream room, putting a tin roof on an elderly man's home, digging a drainage trench for a family with four small children, or rebuilding someone's kitchen after an unfortunate fire. The work is sometimes strenuous, and makes for some incredibly tired volunteers at the end of the day, but being able to make a small difference in a person's life makes all of the hard work worthwhile.

The ASP week entails more than just fixing houses, though. Some of the most memorable experiences come from getting to know the family whose house is being repaired, playing with the children, and attending the different activities that the center leaders have planned for each night. These activities can range from an initial introduction night with everyone in the center, to a field trip to a local coal mine to learn about the history and culture of the area.

ASP also gives people a chance to learn about how different peoples' lifestyles can be. Ritts says, "Going on ASP gives you an appreciation of a culture that's foreign, even when it is in our own country. We find how smart these people are. It is a 'natural' smart." The people in Appalachia know their surroundings. They know the names of the trees and plants in the area. They know the best way to fix a roof with a leak in it. They know how to survive with what they have.

No matter what age you are, or whether it is your first time or 25th time on the trip, each person takes something away from the ASP experience. Kirk Jackish, a first-time adult, remembers the Friday afternoon when his team had completed their project, "We stood with the owner outside and looked back at all we had accomplished. There was a feeling of satisfaction from accomplishing something, but also an emotional connection with the owner of the house."

Tyler Durant, who has made the trip for five years, believes that his perspective has definitely changed on each trip, but in subtle ways. "At first I thought the rewarding feeling was simply because I knew that I had made someone else's life a little more warm, safer and dryer," says Durant, "But the purpose of the trip is for personal growth as well...Sometimes it's the lady behind the counter at the local Dairy Hut that can have the most profound impact on you."

ASP is something that cannot be given justice in words. It has to be experienced, for it is a feeling. It is the feeling that you have impacted somebody's life, the feeling that you have made a friend, the feeling of understanding that people truly are not that different from each other, even if their lifestyles differ incredibly. It is one of the most unique and amazing things that Cohasset has to offer, and an experience that should not be missed.

SCHOOLS

though school has been out of session for the summer, "even in summer it's a very busy place. It has struck me that a lot of our faculty never stop working with kids."

Connolly said the Middle-High School staff is psyched for students to reenter the halls. "We cannot wait to have kids back in the building."

This year, there are 142 sixth graders; 116 seventh graders; 112 eighth graders; 124 freshmen; 81 sophomores; 101 juniors; and 91 seniors.

Students are due to report at 7:30 a.m., with alternating grades attending a meet and greet with the principal and assistant principal in the auditorium between 7:30 and 10 a.m. There, Connolly said she'll deliver her message for the school year, including student expectations and school procedures, to make sure students and staff "are on the same page."

Scott said he is looking forward to the first day.

"There's a good sense of anticipation, like any beginning of school," the assistant principal said. "While you want to make sure you have all the things taken care of that you want to take care of, it's a very exciting time."

Scott said that he loves fall because "there's always a sense of renewal. After a long summer off, you get a chance to start afresh, try new things, and let last year be last year."

And those first day jitters? Connolly said she welcomes them.

"Opening day butterflies, in my opinion, are a really good thing," said Connolly. "It means everybody is still excited to be here. There's a healthy anticipation for year ahead, and we're excited to meet new students and see how the new year will unfold."

Weekend

Hi Cohasset and Happy Labor Day Weekend! For many, it is a weekend that brings 3 days of fun, relaxation and parties and a way to "end the summer" although we have many warm and wonderful days to enjoy (I hope) in September as well. For others, it brings the many emotions of getting ready for the first day of school that is happening next week and for still others,(like myself) it brings the emotional and proud of course, time of bringing our children to college. Whether freshmen or seniors, I wonder if it gets easier, it must, right? I want to wish everyone, students and parents alike, all the best and for all to have a happy, healthy and fantastic start to the school year, no matter the age. Enjoy this weekend as well, stay safe, have fun and enjoy, Cohasset!

Top hurdler

I received some great news this past week about a young lady here in town, Isabelle Dunne, who has been quite busy this summer and has a family who (rightly so) would like to share their pride. Isabelle qualified for USA Track and Field National Olympics this July in 400 Intermediate Hurdles. She placed 1st in her age group for 400m Intermediate Hurdles in the NE Regionals on Long Island, in early July and then went on to the National Jr. Olympics, in Baltimore, Md., placing 16th out of 54 girls in her age group. She is a junior at Thayer Academy.

You worked hard Isabelle and your efforts were certainly recognized by these amazing results. Nice job.

Yale graduate

Congratulations go out to Sarah Dalton Brown, who was recently awarded a BA degree from Yale University with distinction, for maintaining a cumulative 4-year GPA of 3.65 or greater. During Yale's 311th Commencement ceremonies, Sarah was also awarded the Richard Hegel Prize for excellence in writing for her senior essay.

Wow Sarah, great accomplishments and your family and friends are so proud, nice work and all the best in your future path.

Family fun

Here is a great event for the family this Sunday, Sept. 2 from 1-4 pm at the Beechwood Ballpark. Come out for one last bash before the summer is over! Bring your family, bring your friends - all ages are welcome. Come listen to local singer/songwriter Adam Ezra, play in our wiffleball tournament, or rally for a game of ultimate Frisbee! Free food, games and entertainment provided by Beechwood Congregational Church.

Exhibit

The South Shore Art Center will present an art exhibit by Cohasset resident Jan McElhinny at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Sept. 5th through Oct. 31. The show, titled Pentimenti, predominantly features Jan's current work in abstraction. If you would like to meet the artist at a free reception, come to the library on Friday, Sept. 14 from 5-7 pm.

Library

Are you looking to learn basic computer skills? Come to a free hands-on workshop on Wednesday, Sept. 12 at 10:30 am at the library and take advantage of this wonderful program designed for novices and it is a free offer to all. You may register online at the library's website or call the library at 781-383-1348.

Elizabeth C. Goldsmith, author of The Kings' Mistresses, will give a free presentation of her book at the library on Thursday, Sept. 13 at 7 pm. A Q&A and book signing will follow and books will be available to purchase.

I want to end the column with a best of luck to all Cohasset students, teachers, faculty and bus drivers as they start back to school next Tuesday. Please remember drivers to slow down, watch for children as they are waiting for the buses, crossing at crosswalks, watch for bike riders and walkers and especially, stop for all the busses when you are supposed too! Why? Because it's the law and it's for the children in our community...It takes a village to raise a child!

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

CMI to host Rowing Race

Roundabout is Sept. 16

Coxswain James Earle with Learn To Row crew, May 2012.

Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) will host the Minot's Light Roundabout rowing race on Sunday, Sept. 16 in the waters off Cohasset between Sandy Beach and Minot Lighthouse. This 4.25-mile race will start and finish off Sandy Beach, making viewing the race great for shoreside spectators. The course runs out past The Grampus Rocks, to marks off Minot Lighthouse and back to a finish line off Sandy Beach. The Roundabout is open to a variety of sea-worthy rowing craft, including the sturdy 4-oared CMI shells and smaller craft rowed by one or two people.

Racing will run from 11 a.m. to noon, with boats going off in staggered starts, followed by awards and music by the Rusty Skippers Band. Registration is open at 9 a.m. on the day of the race, but preregistration is recommended.

CMI offers rowing to youth and adults of all experience levels, in its 3 Mainville 26 4-oared ocean-going shells, as well as in smaller boats. In the summer of 2012, 38 youth rowers age 14-18 rowed at CMI, some trying rowing for the first time, others returning to improve their skills. About a dozen of these experienced rowers will row after school this fall, and most will do some racing in October. Eighty adults rowed with CMI this season, and several of these adults will be preparing to race in September or October.

In the summer of 2012, 38 youth rowers age 14-18 rowed at CMI, some trying rowing for the first time, others returning to improve their skills.

CMI welcomes new and experienced rowers every season; a few have rowed in college but most have no prior experience. If YOU want to row next spring/summer, come on down to Sandy Beach on Sept. 16 and meet some CMI folks.

If you have questions about the Roundabout, contact CMI Board member and Roundabout Chair Doug McLellan (douglasmclellan@verizon.net). For further information about CMI and its rowing or boatbuilding programs, check out the CMI web site ROWCMI.COM or email ROW.CMI@comcast.net.

Tufts senior leads Cohasset Harbor Research Study

By Maddie Curley and Giselle Hart
Special to the Mariner

The research team has been improving their procedures every day and opening their minds to new ideas. Important questions are asked and answered by the students about ecological relationships and the interactions between the biotic and a-biotic environments.

For many local students, summer is devoted to basking in the sun at Sandy Beach. For Conor Ofsthun, a Cohasset High graduate and rising senior at Tufts University, this summer has been the perfect time for sun, fun and research at Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR).

Ofsthun became interested in Environmental Science while studying at Tufts, and he signed on to help lead CSCR's new Benthic research project last spring. The Benthic zone is the "lowest level of the ocean for sediment and organisms," explains Ofsthun. The organisms living in Cohasset Harbor's benthic zone are an important indicator of harbor health, and this data will help further the sediment bacteria research collected at CSCR last summer.

A group of eight Cohasset and Scituate High students have helped Ofsthun and local ecologist Sarah Grady, Ph.D, sample and analyze the ocean floor in hopes of gaining a better understanding of the harbor and what is living beneath the surface. The research team has been improving their procedures every day and opening their minds to new ideas. Important questions are asked and answered by the students about ecological relationships and the interactions between the biotic and a-biotic environments.

According to Ofsthun, working at CSCR has helped him and all the student researchers understand the "importance of preparation, consistency and keeping an open mind." Ofsthun has also appreciated the opportunity to conduct and lead hands on research at CSCR this summer. "The chance to get real life research and report writing experience is something every student interested in science should be a part of," added Ofsthun.

OUR VIEW

Being 'bored' is OK

If there is one thing that we would describe as our pet peeve concerning the young generation – it is the phrase "I'm bored." We find this statement to be a demand when voiced by, let's say a 9-year-old. In other words – the meaning is: "I'm bored, so what are you going to do about it?"

We're not sure when "I'm bored" came into fashion – but, in our view, it is a combination of over-programming, over-supervision, lack of outdoor activity, and overuse of technology whether those devices are iPods, cell phones or video games.

In the "good old days" – we were not bored. We did not use that term as children. We ran outside, we played unsupervised sandlot softball, fixed up old go-carts, wrote letters to pen pals, climbed trees and sometimes we would just lay on the grass and stare at the cumulus clouds overhead, wondering which ones looked like elephants or camels. For the record, we also had plenty of homework, landline telephones, and a lot of television (albeit aired on only three basic channels).

When left to their own devices – we are sure that children can figure out how to use their time, even if that means daydreaming!

Our answer to "I'm bored" – is a simple one: "Go write a poem." We're sure that great poets were often bored – as well as great inventors. They simply filled those times with creativity.

We were interested to learn this week that there is a childhood affliction, dubbed "Nature Deficit Disorder." The principal at one of the elementary schools in Hingham recently raised the issue and has a plan at his school to get students outside more and to implement a school-wide curriculum theme that connects students to nature, addresses the issues associated with nature deficit disorder, and promotes outdoor creative play within the school's wooded setting.

Apparently NDD has been around for some time. The term was coined by author Richard Louv in his 2005 book, "Last Child in the Woods: Saving Our Children From Nature Deficit Disorder."

The subject got us to wondering, would William Wordsworth have penned "Daffodils" or Robert Frost "The Road Not Taken" – if they spent all their time inside glued to an electronic device?

Getting kids outside, connecting with nature – can be a good thing.

Albert Einstein put it best when he said: "Joy in looking and comprehending is nature's most beautiful gift."

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Roys were singled out, treated unfairly

Deputy Chief of Police Quigley cites safety as the reason he ordered his reticent officers to stop the fireworks in celebration of the Roy's eldest son's recent wedding, at which I was a guest.

As a resident of Cohasset living on the harbor, I am perplexed as to why Quigley felt there was such a threat to the public safety on a relatively quiet Saturday in August, and didn't perceive an equal or greater threat on July 4, when many fireworks shows were lit on the very beach from which the Roys were going to light their show.

On July 4, the beach was full of people, tents and campfires. The fireworks were set off in the midst of these campsites and people, by people on the beach, many of whom I suspect had been drinking.

On Aug. 18, the night of the Roys' wedding, there were no people or campfires on the beach and the fireworks were being set up and lit by sober, responsible adults. The fireworks set off on July 4, were probably purchased in stores in New Hampshire, similar to those in which the Roy's purchased their fireworks and judging by the show(s) on July 4, which in total lasted well over two hours, I would guess the police would have found many more fireworks to hand over to a bomb squad that night then on Aug. 18. (As I know the show planned for the night of Aug. 18, was less than half hour)

If there is such a concern for public safety, why were the Cohasset Police not in full force on July 4, a night which they know, as well as any Cohasset resident, will see the sky lit for hours with "dangerous and illegal" fireworks and during which the beach and harbor were crowded with people and campsites?

One may question the motivation for the police department's actions, given this egregious disparity in the enforcement of the law.

SENIOR SCENE

'Movie Queen' featured many familiar faces, scenes

I've lived here long enough to recognize all the scenes, such as the First National Store and Norman Card, Bill Poland and his garage, the old Osgood High School and others.

LOUISE SMULLEN

Although there are a few weeks of summer left according to the calendar, it is essentially over. Children will be back in school, as will their teachers. People will be back from vacations. Playground activities over and the pool closed. Some of the grandparents I know are seeing their grandchildren heading off to college for the first time – always a bittersweet event.

This month there was a viewing of the movie made in Cohasset titled "The Move Queen." It was shown on a large screen so that the actors and actresses could be better seen. A large number of people attended. For those who are not familiar with the movie, it was filmed in Cohasset in 1939. All the actors and actresses are Cohasset residents, many of who were recognized by people in the audience. I heard one call out "There's my Grandfather!" We were fortunate to have a life-long resident there. He recognized many of the faces and would call out their names. Even though I'm not considered a "townie," I've lived here long enough to recognize all the scenes, such as the First National Store and Norman Card, Bill Poland and his garage, the old Osgood High School and others. It was fun to watch.

Soon our Wednesday seminars will begin before lunch. Read your September VISTA for details. On Sept. 11, Karen Oronte of Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs, will show us how to trace our ancestry on the computer by using Ancestry.com. On Sept. 12, from 11 a.m. to noon we will have a discussion about the Nov. 6, ballot question proposing legalization of doctor-prescribed suicide. (This presentation will be by private entities and is not presented by the Town of Cohasset. The Town is not responsible for its contents or presentation, and neither the Town of Cohasset nor Cohasset Elder Affairs endorses either side of this topic.)

On Sept. 18, from 12:30 to 12:45 p.m. there will be a discussion of Balance Awareness. On Sept. 19, from 11 a.m. to noon, John Galluzzo, author and Adult Education and Citizen Science Coordinator for Mass Audubon, will discuss his discoveries during his recent yearlong quest to walk in a new location for 30 minutes every day. His talk is titled "Thirty Minutes a Day Across the South Shore."

On Sept. 25, Golden Living will be serving the monthly complimentary lunch. Those who have attended their luncheons have really enjoyed them. On Sept. 26, from 11 a.m. to noon, we will learn about exercise you can do in a chair. As will all of our programs, call to make a reservation at 781-383-9112.

We are looking forward to the end-of-summer annual picnic, to be graciously hosted by Michelle and Michael Hubley. It will take place at noon on Sept. 5. There will be great camaraderie, plenty of good food, plus entertainment. Van service is available for those needing transport. For those driving, park at the water department on King Street. A shuttle will drive you to the picnic site. Be sure to call 781-383-911 to make your reservation – see you there.

Senior Center survey online until Sept. 15

Cohasset residents can soon weigh in on the proposed Senior Center project. The town hired consultants from UMass Boston to create an electronic survey using the Survey Monkey format. The survey will be available online September 15, and residents will receive a post card the same day with log-in information and instructions.

Student volunteers will offer assistance to those who need help accessing the internet, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said.

ONE-DAY ADVENTURES

Plum Island is full of surprises

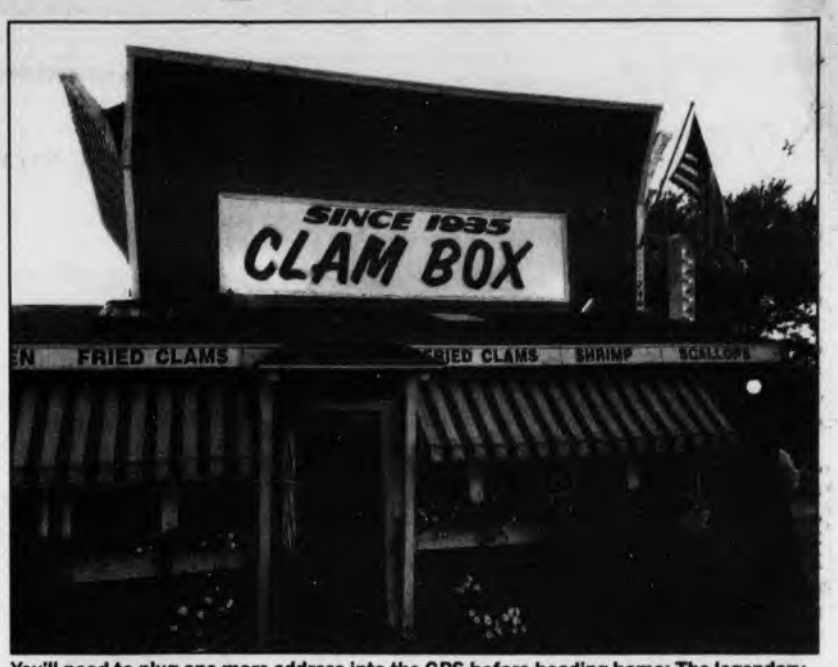
JOHN MCMAHON

What did we do before the invention of GPS? Global Positioning Systems are used for fitness, marine and aviation, but I am speaking specifically about automotive navigation systems. Over 200 million units have been sold in the U.S. since 2004 and over 80 percent of the U.S. population claims to use their smart phone navigation system for guidance at least a portion of the time. No more clumsy maps in the glove compartment. No more stopping at gas stations for assistance. The only downside I see is that sometimes "getting lost" can lead to great discoveries. Prior to purchasing our first GPS five years ago, my wife and I took a wrong turn trying to find a friend's house in Newburyport. In the process we discovered Plum Island and have made it an annual trip ever since.

When you plug Plum Island into your GPS you will see it sits about 60 miles to the north of Cohasset. The 11-mile island is actually divided between four towns and cities and has an estimated population of 22,000 (similar to Hingham). One road leads you over Plum Island River via a charming old drawbridge and past Plum Island Airport, the oldest private airfield in the United States. The expansive salt-water marshes of the Parker River Wildlife Refuge will be visible on the passenger side, setting the tone for a beautiful day surrounded by nature.

Now for a recommended agenda:

Sunday morning, Newburyport hosts one of the best farmers markets I have ever attended (Santa Monica being # 1) down by the Tannery Marketplace, with over a dozen local farms represented plus fine food purveyors (baked goods, smoked fish) and artisans (hand made jewelry, clothing). Start with a freshly made egg, cheese, chorizo sandwich from Kelly Brook Farm, then browse the aisles for something special to bring home.



Now head over the aforementioned drawbridge to Plum Island and at the end of the Plum Island Turnpike grab a parking spot in one of the convenient pay lots (mostly automated so have $1 bills ready). Newbury Beach is right across the street. Even on weekends you will be amazed by the lack of crowds. This beach somehow remains a well-kept secret and is great for long walks. Stroll past the South Beach inspired boutique hotel "blue" and keep an eye out for rare shorebirds like Piping Plovers. Two words of caution, there is a significant undertow so keep an eye on younger kids if they go in the water. Also do some research prior to going to make sure greenhead flies are not going to be around.

One road leads you over Plum Island River via a charming old drawbridge and past Plum Island Airport, the oldest private airfield in the United States.

The slow pace on Plum Island should be embraced. When lunchtime gets close, find your flip-flops and walk up Northern Boulevard a few blocks to Mad Martha's for some local flavor. Mad Martha's is truly a hidden gem, with an intimate space, friendly staff, great lunch specials and fitting music in the background. It is an essential stop. Afterwards, a stroll back to your established spot on the beach and you will feel like a Plum Island native.

Assuming four hours on the beach is enough, start heading towards the Town of Newburyport but before the drawbridge take a left into the 4,662-acre Parker River National Wildlife Refuge. There is a $5 per car admission fee and after the gate hand a pair of binoculars to the kids in the backseat to check out over 300 species of resident and migratory birds (the ranger at the front gate will provide some basic literature to help identify key species). If you have extra time, park in one of the designated lots and utilize the observation towers sprinkled throughout for commanding views or hit Sandy Point to look for sand dollars.

You'll need to plug one more address into the GPS before heading home: The legendary Clam Box in Ipswich. COURTESY PHOTOS

After the Refuge, continue on your path to Newburyport for some shopping. The whole shopping area (anchored by State Street) can be covered in a little over an hour. Being a lover of independent bookstores Jabberwocky Bookshop in the Tannery is a rare brick and mortar treat. Best of British on State Street is worthwhile (imagine if Harrods had a small satellite location in the U.S.) and perusing vintage items with reasonable prices at Oldies Marketplace can yield great rewards.

Walking distance from Oldies Marketplace is Plum Island Kayak; a family-run business with a friendly knowledgeable staff, ready to take you on a sunset kayak tour. A quick introduction to kayaking/safety before departure makes this accessible for all skill levels. Paddle in the direction of Salisbury Beach (not a bad workout) and enjoy a beautiful sunset on your way back into the harbor.

You'll need to plug one more address into the GPS before heading home. The Clam Box in Ipswich lives up to the hype and is en route to I-95. Prices are a little high (native clams with sides $21.99) and lines can be out the door so call in your order from Newburyport and grab a picnic table outside to fuel up for the drive home.

John McMahon of Cohasset would love to hear from you, whether you have questions, comments or maybe event ideas for one-day adventures. He can be reached at: jmcmahon131@gmail.com

Responsible stewardship of the land is ongoing

JON BELBER

In the late 1990s, Frank and his wife Jean moved back to the family farm and hired a farm manager to transform the hay fields into fields of broccoli, salad greens, herbs and flowers.

August 29th is Frank White's birthday. Frank grew up on the farm and was a fifth generation member of the White family that has worked the land and tended the property where Holly Hill Farm stands for over 300 years. The main barn dates back to 1785 and the farmhouse to 1863. The view towards the salt marsh and the Richardson Brook is familiar to the way it was in the 1600s (so I am told), though perhaps now with a few more fragmites and homes.

This farm, this land along Jerusalem Road, is currently being cultivated for organic vegetables, the trails are being walked and maintained by friends, visitors and family members and the buildings are home to various projects that keep the education and farm busy and productive. Frank documented lots of history and put into place the foundation for us to grow as a community resource.

In the late 1990s, Frank and his wife Jean moved back to the family farm and hired a farm manager to transform the hay fields into fields of broccoli, salad greens, herbs and flowers. In addition to growing the farm as a place to come purchase local, organic produce, Frank and Jean sought to establish the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, which, since 2002, is the non-profit organization committed to teaching children, adults and families about organic farming and sustainable, agricultural practices.

Frank and I spent many hours talking at his kitchen table about how to reach out to schools, teachers in Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham, Marshfield and to Boston, Quincy and Brockton. There are not many farms left on the South Shore, though I write about people's efforts to grow produce, to care for the land and to return some of the abandoned parcels to agriculture.

When Frank was a kid, he worked up on Deer Hill in Cohasset helping at a dairy farm. This summer, we have just concluded nine weeks of programs where we have welcomed kids ages 3-22 to come to Holly Hill for a week or more to sow seeds, weed the invasives, explore the woods and learn about farming. I know Frank would appreciate the continued efforts of folks to come to the farm and learn from where their food comes.

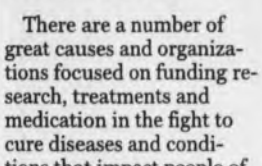
Another key facet of our conversations was teaching about responsible stewardship with the land. It is also a tenet of organic farming, in that one needs to feed the soil with healthy nutrients, such as compost. Providing good health for the soil is essential for that soil to then help grow the tomatoes, squash and beans. Mother Nature's woods annually teaches us this lesson, when the trees drop their leaves, that eventually turn to compost and feed the plants. Working and teaching with Jean, Cindy, the farmers, the volunteers and the teachers here at the farm is part of the ongoing stewardship. We are trying to make sure important skills of growing and understanding the environment around us continue for future generations. I am glad Frank and Jean returned to the land and taught me about a terrific responsibility.

This fall, I hope to finally collaborate on a farm garden or two at the Osgood and at the Deer Hill schools in Cohasset, so that the local kids and community can learn about farming, right outside their classroom door. We may not have the dairy cows return as in the 1940s, but it may be one small birthday present for one thoughtful man.

Jon Belber is a Scituate resident and the education director at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset. He teaches students and adults about organic gardening and farming. His column appears twice monthly in the Journal. He can be reached by email at jbelberhollyhill@hotmail.com. For information on upcoming programs at Holly Hill, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

Open Meeting Law regulations finalized

New Open Meeting Law regulations, laid out by Attorney General Martha Coakley, state that "deliberate ignorance" is akin to deliberately setting out to violate the law.



The state's top law enforcement officer finalized two Open Meeting Law regulations on Tuesday seeking to add greater clarity to the rules that govern how municipal boards and commissions can hold meetings.

Coakley's finalized regulations clarify that an "intentional violation" of the law comprises acts intended to violate the law, carried out with "deliberate ignorance," or done after being informed by a court or the attorney general that the action violates the Open Meeting Law.

Coakley also updated the regulations for how members of public bodies can participate in meetings remotely, making clear that local boards of selectmen can set consistent restrictions for remote participation in public meetings.

FOR THE RECORD

We're still thinking pink

GREGORY MATHIS

For the second year in a row, GateHouse Media will be partnering with the Massachusetts chapter of the Susan G. Komen for the Cure Foundation

There are a number of great causes and organizations focused on funding research, treatments and medication in the fight to cure diseases and conditions that impact people of all ages, from all walks of life.

All of these worthy groups are competing for research dollars, money provided through fundraisers, as well as public awareness.

Each family is faced with its own circumstances, its own health issues and its own causes. In my family, we've either dealt with or are dealing with a host of illnesses, including heart disease, stroke, Alzheimer's/dementia, head injuries, Crohn's and colitis, prostate cancer, ovarian cancer and breast cancer.

Through our family's trials and tribulations we have found ourselves drawn to helping the various organizations that support research and funding for these diseases and conditions. I'm sure it's the same for most families.

The reason I bring this up is because we're about to launch our fourth annual campaign to aid in the fight against breast cancer. For the second year in a row, GateHouse Media will be partnering with the Massachusetts chapter of the Susan G. Komen for the Cure Foundation. The first two years of the campaign supported the American Cancer Society.

The kickoff of the Paint It All Pink campaign is generally met with phone calls and emails from readers asking GateHouse to consider supporting their cause. The argument often centers on a couple of points; there's already a lot of awareness and money raised for breast cancer, there are more deadly diseases that need the funding, or there are diseases that are just as deadly and are more in need of awareness and funding.

And these are great points. I understand.

But I also see what GateHouse Media New England has been able to accomplish as a company over the last three years, working with the American Cancer Society and now the local Komen foundation. Through Paint It All Pink, GHMNE has donated close to $80,000 to the breast cancer cause and will likely top the $100K mark in year four.

It shows sticking with a cause can make a big difference over time, instead of making a much smaller difference by going off in too many directions.

So once again we will be dedicating space in our newspapers and on our Wicked Local websites to this worthy cause.

As we've done for the last three years, your newspaper will be pink the first week in October as we kick off Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

A big part of our coverage over the years has been the inspiring and compelling stories readers have shared in their own words. Please consider sharing your story. In the next couple of weeks, you will see a reader callout in your community newspaper, as well as on your Wicked Local website, with details on what we're looking for and where to send the information.

As a company, our focus is on breast cancer and Breast Cancer Awareness Month. For those with other causes to champion, continue the fight and continue to make whatever differences you can. I know I will.

Selectman Jenkins to negotiate TM's contract

The following is a press release from the Board of Selectmen.

At the Cohasset Board of Selectmen meeting on Tuesday August 21, the selectmen conducted a review of Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski based on his first six months in office. The comments of the selectmen were very positive and supportive of his actions.

After the board's other public business was completed, the board went into executive session to discuss some union issues and Milanoski's contract. The board voted 4 – 1 to offer him a new contract expiring June 30, 2015 to replace his existing contract which expires June 30, 2013. This action effectively extends his contract for two years. Selectman Jenkins will negotiate the terms of the new contract with Milanoski and will present that contract to the full board for approval.

The board's decision was based on the high quality of his efforts to date, confidence that he will continue to serve the town very well and the desire to assure continuity and stability in this important position.

At the Aug. 29 meeting the board approved the minutes of the portion of the Aug. 21 executive session dealing with Milanoski's proposed new contract. The board also approved the public release of the minutes, which are available at Town Hall. The paragraph dealing with the motion approved on the 21st reads:

Selectmen Jenkins made a motion to enter into contract negotiations with Michael Milanoski that would include creating a new contract through June 30, 2015. The motion was seconded by Selectmen Koed. The vote taken was 4-1 in favor (Carlson-Aye; Kennedy-Aye; Koed-Aye; Jenkins-Aye; Gjesteby-Nay).

Tolman MDA telethon party is this weekend

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Live music, a Zumbathon, raffles, camaraderie, refreshments, and much more will add up to a fun-filled time for a good cause at the 36th Annual Tolman MDA (Muscular Dystrophy Association) 24-hour Telethon Party this Labor Day weekend.

The popular event has raised $523,600 to date. This year's goal is $20,000. Proceeds benefit MDA research and the many patient services the Association provides, in memory of Richard Berberian, Jr., John Fasci, Jr., Mattie Stepanek, and Mary Cronin.

The party starts Sunday, Sept. 2, at 6 p.m. and runs through Monday, Sept. 3, until 6 p.m. at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St. (Route 228), Hingham.

The Zumbathon, led by three Zumba instructors, is a new fund-raising feature, added this year to kick off the event from 7 to 9 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 2. A $20 donation ahead of time will reserve a space in the program, or $25 at the door.

The party coincides with the national MDA telethon, "MDA Show of Strength." Despite the fact that the national event has been reduced to three hours from the original 24-hours when Jerry Lewis was host, the Hingham event remains unchanged.

Cohasset resident Jay Tolman, who grew up in Hingham, started the telethon party in his backyard in the 1970s. As in the past, Tolman's father, John, now 91, will travel from Florida to participate in the event.

"We couldn't do it without the help of my family and the many dedicated volunteers who give tirelessly of their time," Tolman said.

His wife, Jodi, and their three children, Chloe, Jack, and Charlie, have been and continue to be among the event's biggest supporters.

For more information or to make a donation, visit tolmantelethon.com. Or stop by the party and throw a donation into the famous fishbowl. (No telephone calls asking for donations are made during the Hingham event.)

MDA Fact Sheet

MDA is the world's largest nongovernmental sponsor of research seeking the causes of, and effective treatments for, neuromuscular diseases such as muscular dystrophy and ALS (amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, or Lou Gehrig's disease). The Association also provides comprehensive health care and support services, advocacy and education.

MDA combats neuromuscular diseases through programs of worldwide research, comprehensive medical and support services, and far-reaching professional and public health education. With national headquarters in Tucson, MDA has more than 200 local offices across the country, sponsors some 200 medical clinics and supports more than 300 research projects around the world.

The Association's comprehensive services program includes diagnostic and follow-up medical consultations, flu shots, support groups, MDA summer camps for youngsters, a national medical equipment program, assistance with equipment repairs and modifications, and resource referrals.

Through its national advocacy program, MDA works to make life better for people with muscular dystrophy and related muscle diseases by providing representation in matters of public policy and research advancement, nationally and internationally; and facilitating active involvement in these areas by the people it serves.

different groups of people to raise awareness" for MDA, said Sharon. "That's their role, to go to places and tell people how much the Muscular Dystrophy Association does for us a family."

It may seem like a lot for two elementary-aged kids to handle, but Sharon said the boys love being spokesmen.

"They've enjoyed it," Sharon said. "They really have enjoyed giving their speeches and writing them and talking to people, encouraging people to raise money and donate their time."

And the Smith boys like to give back to people who give of themselves to aid a good cause, Sharon explained.

"They feel good being able to say 'thank you' to the people who donate their time and money to the MDA. That's why I was so excited for them to take on that role — it's hard to tell people 'thank you' if you don't know them in person. This way, we get to thank them personally."

The MDA has been kind to her family, said Sharon, from helping with expensive medical bills to providing the kids with some good old-fashioned fun.

"Through the MDA, the kids get to go to fantastic summer camp in New Hampshire every summer," she said. "It's an overnight camp for a week. They have an amazing time and the camp counselors are wonderful; they take such good care of these boys."

Along with volunteer counselors who "dedicate their whole summer to help people with some type of illness have fun at camp," Sharon said many companies sponsor the camp. And with its very own carnival, it seems the MDA camp blows a lot of other summer camps away.

Of course, the kids still have the usual "rustic camp experience," said Sharon. "They do a lot of arts and crafts, the usual stuff like food fights, pranks, swimming, and sleeping in cabins... It's a really cool camp experience."

Daniel and Gregory have fun making friends at camp, but really love the motorcycle demonstration put on by Harley Davidson. Bikers even take the kids out for a spin.

"It's awesome!" said Daniel. "I can't wait to go again next year. I love the Harleys! Riding in the side car is a lot of fun."

Gregory agreed, saying it's something he looks forward to every summer.

"I am inspired by the other kids at the MDA camp— they continue to push on even when it is difficult," said Gregory. "It is the best week of the year. I hope I can always go."

Hope is something the MDA seems to inspire. The association, said Sharon, "gives us families a lot of hope that someday there will be treatments and/or cures" for neuromuscular diseases. "I do look forward to the day when there are specific treatments." Over the past few years her boys have endured "a lot of operations," Sharon explained. "Some years are more difficult than others, but they're very happy, healthy kids."

Families like the Smith get a little bit sunshine not only through the summer camp program, but with family cook-outs, parties, fundraisers, even trips to Martha's Vineyard that the MDA invites them to. While the MDA holds many social events and fundraisers for families affected by neuromuscular diseases, they also make major contributions to the cause.

"Clinics and researchers rely on MDA for funding," Sharon explained. And the association "also helps arrange clinic visits with specialists we need to see that are difficult to get appointments with; we can establish very important relationships with prominent physicians in Boston through them."

The Smiths were recently given wheelchairs from the association, which was a "major help."

"There's a personal side," Sharon said of the MDA's involvement. "We need treatments and cures more than anything."

The Smith family is also grateful to Tolman, who happens to live "around the corner" from them, for dedicating his time and resources toward funding research.

"He has a heart of gold," Sharon said of Tolman. "He is thoroughly dedicated to the cause of helping cure neuromuscular diseases. His entire family takes on this effort. They put a lot of work into it, do a lot of planning for it, and raise a lot of money, but make it a very fun event for parents and kids, too."

Sharon said that it's nice to have a fellow advocate in the neighborhood.

"I feel lucky that he's taken this on as personal challenge or personal goal because he gets the whole community involved," said Sharon. "He's such an enthusiastic and avid spokesperson for muscular dystrophy... We're very lucky to have him on our team."

Tolman said over the many years of the Telethon event he has had the honor to meet many of the local MDA families.

"I had the pleasure of meeting Sharon, Jeff, Gregory, and Daniel Smith, four years ago, when they stopped by our Telethon event in Hingham," he recalled. "After speaking with Sharon and hearing what the boys have been through and how their form of Muscular Dystrophy effects there day to day life, it became clear, once again, why we work so hard every Labor Day to help end Muscular Dystrophy. The positive spirit and courage of these boys, Sharon, and Jeff are an inspiration to us all."

Also part of the same team? Cohasset firefighters, who fight not only flames but neuromuscular disease with their annual Fill-the-Boot drive. Members of the Cohasset Local #2804 of the IAFF were at the Super Stop & Shop located at 400 Chief Justice Cushing Highway last Friday, Saturday and Sunday to fundraise for the MDA. The International Association of Fire Fighters (IAFF) is a longtime friend and the single-largest sponsor of MDA, contributing more than $400 million since 1954.

The Annual Tolman MDA 24-Hour Telethon kicks off on Saturday, Sept. 2 at 6 p.m. and goes until 6 p.m. the following day, Monday, Sept. 3 (for more information, see related story).

Volume 38 - Report No. 34 August 24, 2012

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week. Beacon Hill Roll Call reports local senators' roll call attendance records for the 2012 session through August 24.

The Senate has held 179 roll call votes in 2012. Beacon Hill Roll Call tabulates the number of roll calls on which each senator was present and voting and then calculates that number as a percentage of the total roll call votes held. That percentage is the number referred to as the roll call attendance record.

Only 13 of the Senate's 39 members have 100 percent roll call attendance records.

The worst roll call attendance record belongs to Sen. Frederick Berry (D-Peabody), who missed 101 roll calls (43.5 percent attendance) because of an illness.

The second worst record belongs to Sen. Barry Finegold (D-Andover), who missed 52 roll calls (70.9 percent attendance) because of the death of his sister.

SENATORS' 2012 ROLL CALL ATTENDANCE RECORDS

The percentage listed next to the senator's name is the percentage of roll call votes for which the senator was present and voting. The number in parentheses represents the number of roll calls that the senator missed.

WITNESS INTIMIDATION (H 3977) - The House gave initial approval to a bill that would broaden the current state law that makes it a felony to threaten and intimidate witnesses involved in pending cases. The bill would expand the law by applying it to cases that have been adjudicated and closed.

Supporters said the current loophole allows a person who threatens someone when the case is closed to be charged with only a misdemeanor. They argued it is not fair to have this loophole that jeopardizes the safety of witnesses once a case is closed.

PARENTS WHO KILL THEIR SPOUSES (H 454) - The House gave initial approval to a bill that would terminate the parental rights of any person convicted of killing their spouse unless there is proof of past physical, sexual or psychological abuse committed by the deceased parent against the convicted parent. The rights could also be granted to the convicted parent if the child is deemed "competent" and wants to continue to have a relationship with the parent.

Supporters said it is outrageous to require children to continue an unwanted relationship with a parent who killed the other parent. They argued these kids are traumatized enough and should not be forced to visit the killer in jail.

ALLOW DOMESTIC VIOLENCE VICTIMS TO BREAK THEIR APARTMENT LEASE (S 2402) - The House gave initial approval to a bill allowing victims of domestic violence to break their apartment lease without a penalty if they notify the owner in writing that they or a member of their household is a victim of domestic violence, rape, sexual assault or stalking.

Supporters said the measure is designed to help victims move if their assailant knows where they are living. The measure also requires owners to change the tenant's exterior locks if the tenant or occupants reasonably believe they are in danger.

REDUCE DRUG ABUSE (S 2122) - Gov. Deval Patrick signed into law a bill aimed at cracking down on the abuse of prescription drugs in Massachusetts. The measure requires all doctors to register with the Prescription Drug Monitoring Program, a statewide electronic database that collects data on prescriptions dispensed in the state. Currently, participation is voluntary, and only 1,700 of 40,000 prescribers have signed up.

Supporters say the program is aimed at preventing potential abusers from "doctor shopping" — obtaining multiple prescriptions from several doctors who are unaware that another physician has already prescribed the medication.

Other provisions include requiring pharmacies to notify local police when reporting theft or loss of drugs; requiring doctors to use tamper-proof pads to write prescriptions; and banning possession, distribution and manufacture of "bath salts," synthesized stimulants disguised as a therapeutic mineral.

VIOLATIONS OF MINIMUM WAGE LAW (S 924) - The Senate approved and sent to the House a bill that would increase from two years to three years the statute of limitations for bringing a suit against an employer for violating the minimum wage or overtime pay law. This change would match the state's current three-year statute of limitations for filing suit for nonpayment of wages.

May, Davis take aim at Hedlund

By Ed Baker
ebaker@wickedlocal.com

Democratic state Senate hopefuls Steve May and Genevieve Davis recently criticized Republican incumbent Sen. Robert Hedlund of Weymouth for proposing changes to a statewide ban on "happy hour" in bars and restaurants during a South Shore Democratic Caucus forum at Tufts Library in Weymouth.

ONLINE EXTRA

See Steve May's and Genevieve Davis' closing statements from the candidates' forum at wicked local cohasset .com

Davis said Hedlund supports expanding happy hour, which she called inconsistent with his sponsorship of Melanie's Law, a statute that tightened the penalties against drunk driving.

"He can't be on both sides of the fence," said Davis, a Norwell resident.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission banned offering discounted or free drinks during certain hours in 1984 following the death of 20-year-old Kathleen Barry of Weymouth. Barry died when she rode atop a friend's car in the parking lot of the former Ground Round restaurant in Braintree Sept. 9, 1983.

Davis and May said Hedlund's support for changing the ban could put him in violation of the state's conflict of interest law because it would allow the Four Square Restaurant and Bar that he co-owns in Weymouth Landing to serve drinks under the legislation if lawmakers approve.

"He is so disengaged," said May, a clinical social worker and executive director of the Forum on Genetic Equity, following the forum. "The last bill (proposed happy hour changes) would personally enrich him. A lot of tavern owners are against it."

Hedlund said he has never sought to lift the ban on happy hour and that he researched the state ethics law before co-sponsoring an amendment to avoid committing a potential conflict of interest violation.

"I don't support the end of happy hour bans," he said. "The press has sensationalized this and got it wrong. What she (Davis) needs to do is read the actual amendment. It has nothing to do with eliminating happy hour."

Hedlund said he and Democratic state Sen. James Timilty of Walpole proposed an amendment to the ABCC stating that whatever regulations it establishes for a new casino would have to be done with an eye toward other establishments where liquor is served.

"In other words, whatever they allow the casinos to do, they would have to allow anybody to do, and that (amendment) would have negated the giving of free booze at a casino," Hedlund said. "Everybody has interpreted that the amendment would allow happy hour to occur statewide."

Hedlund said the state Senate approved his amendment.

"I read the amendment two days ago before the ABCC," he said. "Nobody wants to see the end of the ban on happy hour. I look forward to debating her (Davis) on that, and I do thank her for highlighting my efforts on Melanie's Law."

Hedlund said neither Davis nor May has any private sector experience, which demonstrates why they believe he could benefit from a change in the happy hour regulations. He also said the happy hour ban is confusing and a lot of restaurants don't realize they are violating it with their liquor promotions.

May said Hedlund is not in touch with his constituents.

Hedlund said May's analysis of him being out of touch with Plymouth-Norfolk constituents was "pretty good for somebody who has only been in the state for three years," and that he was quite effective during the past legislative session.

Hedlund said some of the legislation he helped push through included EBT card reform and a law that does not permit someone to register a car in Massachusetts without a driver's license.

May said he wants to serve in the Senate to make sure a new Fore River Bridge is built.

"It's been six years since a Democrat has challenged the incumbent," he said. "The Fore River Bridge remains unfinished and it will be the biggest project in the state since the Big Dig."

Hedlund said he worked hard with former Democratic state Treasurer Timothy Cahill to come up with a funding plan for constructing a new bridge.

"Initially they (MassDOT) thought they would utilize the existing bridge pilings for the new bridge and that set the (construction) timetable back," Hedlund said. "If he (May) is complaining about the bridge, he might want to consider weighing in with a Democratic governor and a Democratic Congressional delegation that can't get the Coast Guard to change its requirements. There is also a Democratic state representative (Rep. James Murphy of Weymouth) who shares the district with me that the bridge is in. I hope he (May) shares his concerns with the Democratic state representative and the governor."

MassDOT's effort to construct a new vertical lift bridge over the Fore River moved ahead earlier this month when its board of directors awarded a joint $244.6 million contract to build the bridge to J.F. White Contracting Company of Framingham and Skanska Koch, a New York-based firm.

Davis said the eventual bridge construction is an opportunity to attract new businesses to North Weymouth.

"We need to start a discussion about what kinds of busineses that can come to that area," she said.

Davis said she has worked with small businesses and nonprofit groups during the past 40 years, and this experience would benefit the Plymouth-Norfolk district.

"A month ago I met with voters in Scituate during the Heritage Days fair," she said. "I met a woman and she started to cry. She said, 'I hope you win. I'm terrified that (former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt) Romney will be president and that my taxes will go up.' Two years ago I had some people speak to me that I had approached and they said they were worried about losing their job. I have worked in nonprofit groups for 40 years. I've dealt with people in the LGBT (lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community) and I can make a difference. I can make things happen."

Davis also said she supports efforts to strengthen programs at community colleges to help students learn skills that will lead them to employment opportunities and retraining courses for workers who are unemployed because of technology upgrades.

May said the most important issue in the Plymouth-Norfolk District is having enough jobs for constituents.

Davis and May said they would work hard to reduce the MBTA's debt service costs and to keep transportation services intact.

"It is a crisis that we find a solution to the problems with the MBTA," Davis said.

Davis said she would rely on her business experience of helping nonprofit groups reduce costs to reduce the T's debt. She said she would have a financial expert review the T's expenses and make recommendations to lawmakers about reducing the debt.

May said he would use his administrative skills as head of the National Association of Social Workers chapter in Vermont to reduce the T's debt.

Davis and May said they would relay on their life's experiences if they get to run against Hedlund.

"I believe our life's experiences are different," May said. "I'm in my mid-30s."

"I'm not," Davis said as the gathering laughed with her.

May said he wants to serve in the Senate because many people in his age bracket are struggling with debt that include paying off college tuition loans and mortgages.

Davis said she has lived in Norwell for 30 years and raised a family there.

"I will use my years of experience to make good decisions," she said.

Davis said she would not support tax increases to cover rising municipal costs.

"Right now the economy is at a fragile point," she said. "One of the reasons it is not recovering faster is because properties have lost value and people's portfolio's have lost value. We can't reduce taxes right now, but we can't increase them."

May said the economic recovery has been disproportionate.

"The folks on top have done quite well," he said.

State House News reporter Andy Metzger contributed to this report.

Why is the Primary on a Thursday?

This is not the first time a state Primary has been held on a Thursday. The Thursday Primary also occurred in 1988 and 1964.

The 2012 Primary was moved from Tuesday, Sept. 18 to Thursday, Sept. 6 to avoid a conflict with the Jewish holiday, Rosh Hashanah. The change was approved by the Legislature.

Holding the election earlier on Tuesday, Sept. 4, would be too close to Labor Day, officials said. According to published reports, Secretary of State William Galvin said holding the election on the 6th rather than the 11th or the 13th would provide more time for any potential recounts and allow enough time for general election ballots to be printed and sent to military overseas voters. At least a 7-week window is required by state law between the primary and general elections.

SPORTS NOTES

COLLEGE LACROSSE

Flibotte named All-American

Congratulations to 2008 Cohasset High School graduate Mark Flibotte, for being named to the 2012 NCAA third team All American by U.S. college coaches.

Flibotte was also named to first team All New England by NE College Coaches Association and was Inside Lacrosse magazine's "Nike Player of the week" in for the week of April, 3, 2012.

The graduating senior backboned Bowdoin and was a 2012 captain at the very top level of college lacrosse for the No. 11 ranked team in the country, this Coho lacrosse alum seem to keep producing.

HOCKEY

Seahawks programs open

Seahawks hockey has openings for our Learn To Skate, Learn to Play Hockey, Mite C In House, and other programs.

Learn to Skate is a weekly one hour program designed for children ages 4 and older who are novice skaters or have never skated at all.

Sessions will be taught by the same coaches consistently each week. Learn to Play Hockey is the next step following Learn to Skate for those four years old and up who want to learn the fundamentals of hockey. The program has weekly skills a game.

The Mite C In House program is our continued developmental program designed to assist the advanced house league player.

MAYFLOWER SPRINT TRIATHLON

Dash for the cash

New twist added to Saturday's Sprint Triathlon

By Rob Duca
Correspondent

PLYMOUTH – Scenic and grueling, the Mayflower Sprint Triathlon's new format this year will feature a "Battle of the Sexes" that promises a fantastic finish to this Saturday's race. Now in its third year as a sprint triathlon after being held as a full Ironman competition in its first two years, the event will pay $1,500 to the first elite male or female competitor to cross the finish line.

"It's the only format like this, as far as I know, anywhere in the country," said Chris Hebert, race director. "We want to see a man and woman coming down Water Street not knowing if the man is going to catch the woman at the finish line. We want it to be as close as possible."

The format will provide elite female competitors with a five-minute head start, although race organizers

BOYS SOCCER

Depth, defense strength for Skippers

Boys have largest talent pool in years

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Over the past several seasons, the Cohasset boys soccer team has grown in numbers as their win totals and postseason appearances, including a trip to the Div. 3 South Sectional Finals two years back have continued to impress.

This season doesn't look to be any different, with 46 players coming out.

"We've got a ton of kids," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said, adding that the talent is spread out between the classes. "I have more guys than I've ever had. There are enough for two teams. We have a lot of seniors and very good younger players. We'll have enough for a varsity and a junior varsity. Both should be good. We have people fighting for quality playing time."

With the good mix of players, Willis is pleased to have an experienced team to work with.

"We lost four starters, including two captains," he said. "Jonah Adkins (midfield) was the league MVP. Jamie Timothy was a great midfielder."

The Skippers will rely on three captains to provide leadership this season.

Seniors Anthony Nahill, Nick Brown and junior Joe Buckley are the captains.

Nahill is a two-year varsity starter on his third season with the varsity, while Brown will be playing his fourth season, his third as a starter.

TALKIN' GOLF

And the award winner is . . .

PAUL HARBER

Summer is too darn short!

Yeah, I know it isn't officially over until the third week of September and please don't preach to me about how great golf is in the fall.

I know that.

But summer golf is filet mignon while golf any other time of the year is hamburger.

In the summer you can rise with the sun and tee it up before 5 o'clock and still get in a day's work. Or, you can tee it up at suppertime and finish 18 holes long before darkness chases you to the clubhouse.

However all good things must come to an end and so does summer, which means this is the final column of the year as well.

The Golf Clubhouse closes for the season.

Next week high school football and soccer, volleyball and cross-country will push Talkin' Golf and Aces, Etc., off these pages.

It has been a fun summer.

We never lacked for cannon fodder.

Because our season is so short, the tournament dance card was packed.

So, in our final installment, it is time to bestow a few awards.

We'll call them the Harbies because Oscar, Emmy, Tony and Cleos are taken.

Clarence Darrow Best Argument (i.e., Gripe) Award

To attorney Drew Elinoff, who argues, "Why can't they make divots ground under repair. Why should one golfer be penalized because of another golfer's lack of courtesy." Elinoff is a 12-handicapper, but he won't be for long. Last weekend he had rounds of 76, 79 and 77.

Pat Bradley Golfer of the Year (women's division)

To Meghan Khang, the Rockland High School sophomore-to-be has unlimited potential and it won't be long before she is among the top professionals on the LPGA Tour. This summer she qualified for the US Women's Public Links, US Women's Open, US Women's Amateur (making match play) and the US Girls' Junior. I don't know if that has been done before.

Paul Harney Golfer of the Year (men's division)

To Doug Clapp of Walpole and Old Sandwich Golf Club of Plymouth, who had a sizzling hot summer. He had top 10 finishes in the Norfolk County Classic, Ouimet Memorial, New England Invitational, Hornblower Memorial and was fourth low amateur at the State Open. He made it to the round of 16 at the State Amateur, losing to eventual champion Mike Calef and then was a good sport and caddied for Calef the remainder of the tournament. He also shared medalist honors at Wellesley CC in the U.S. Mid-Amateur qualifier. He will be at Conway Farms GC in Lake Forest, Ill., for the national championship Sept. 5-11.

Donald Ross, A Job is Never Done Award

For giving 110 percent and never being satisfied with his golf course, to South Shore Country Club general manager Jay McGrail. First he brought the course back from the dead. Now, he is restoring the bunkers (see photo), elevating this 90-year-old design to elite status among upscale public courses in New England. The bunkers were like a mustard and ketchup stain on a wedding dress.

Jack Neville Best Club Pro (public courses)

To Bob Beach of Braintree Municipal Golf Course. There are and have been so many dedicated golf professionals from our region. Charlie Lanzetta and Kenny Campbell, for instance, have done so much for junior golf. But Beach has taken it one step further. He has done more for the game than any other professional in the region – by far. He is committed to giving golf course access to a number of diverse groups, individuals with physical and mental handicaps have experienced that wonderful thrill of that first birdie because of Beach.

South Shore Country Club's bunkers are the final piece of the puzzle, bringing this Wayne Stiles and John van Kleek design back to a prominent role among courses in New England.

ACES, ETC

Grattons are tops at Father & Son

On Tuesday afternoon under sunny skies at Crestwood Country Club in Rehoboth, the team of Duncan Gratton and son John of Dedham Country and Polo Club combined those elements perfectly to capture the senior division of the 2012 Massachusetts Father & Son.

The pair combined for a 4-under par 67, three strokes better than the five teams tied for second.

It marks the Gratton's first MGA Championship and their first-ever as a team.

"It is just unbelievable and it's nice to have a good partner," said Duncan. "[John] has had a great year, and I am just along for the ride but it was a blast."

The road to victory was paved early on as the Grattons carded three birdies and zero bogies to make the turn at 3-under par 32. They used powerful drives off the tee by John and accurate approach shots by Duncan to surge ahead of the field. It also helped when Lady Luck came to visit them early on.

On the par-4 fourth hole, John's drive found a tree but somehow managed to bounce back into the fairway and leave Duncan with a nice look at the green.

"We had a good bounce in the fairway and I had 68 yards in," said Duncan. "I hit it to two feet and John made the putt . . . Johnny was making all of the putts today."

That fortuitous bounce was all the Grattons would need on this day. The same game plan – John off the tee and Duncan in the fairway – led to a pair of six-foot birdie putts that John made on the 7th and 9th holes.

Without knowing where the other teams stood, the Grattons played even par golf through their final six holes and had no idea that they had captured an MGA Championship title when they exited the scoring table. In fact, Duncan was still talking about his missed 18-inch par putt on the 14th hole after they had finished up.

"I had been stewing about that putt for hours," said Duncan, who more than made up for the miss by finishing off the round with a birdie on the 525-yard, par 5 18th hole.

When the final results were announced, however, the disappointment turned into pure joy as the father and son – along with their friend and trusty caddy Colin Kalell who made the trip from Dedham to carry both bags – celebrated their first family victory.

"It is the best," said Duncan. "Like every round of golf we left two or three out there, but we also got lucky like when his ball hit off a tree."

Najarian earns medal

Daniel Najarian of Marshfield Country Club fashioned an even par 72 at Duxbury Yacht Club last week to earn medalist honors and a berth in the State Mid-Amateur Championship, which will be held Sept. 4-6 at Framingham Country Club.

In for the last qualifier for the championship, which will have a new champion this year because Brockton CC's Mike Calef has moved to Texas and will not made the trip back to the Bay State to defend his title.

It was a pretty smooth round for Najarian, who dropped 15 pars around an eagle-3 and a pair of bogeys.

He earned his eagle on the 475-yard fourth hole to make the turn at 2-under and then bogeyed the 562-yard 13th hole and the 356-yard 18th hole.

Also qualifying at Duxbury were Michael Willock of Plymouth CC (74), Matt Vaughn of Wampatuck CC, (75), Mike Verde of Easton CC (75), Tom Lennon of Wampatuck CC (76), Vincent Bucci of Old Sandwich GC (75) Gary Fornari and Stephen Kuhn, both of Plymouth CC (77), Bob Hamilton of Thorny Lea GC (78), Scott Dabney of Dedham C&PC (78) Sean Sweeney of Walpole CC and Charlie Rozanitis of Hatherly CC (both 79s).

Wire to wire

A wire-to-wire victory is one of the hardest things to do in sports. But Eddie Kirby of Alpine (R.I) CC did just that winning the 92nd NEPGA Championship and the Tom Mahan Sr. Trophy at Salem Country Club. Kirby is best remembered entering the final round of the 1989 U.S. Open at Oak Hills (N.Y.) CC in 15th place. "Everything was on the line," said Kirby. "British Open, Masters, everything." Kirby went on to play with the world No. 1 at the time, Greg Norman, "he did not beat me, look it up," Kirby said emphatically. Kirby was correct, Norman did not beat him that day. They tied with final round 76s. Today's situation was slightly different, though Kirby did have the opportunity to earn more than he did that day in the 1989 U.S. Open, he had a victory on the line, and a check worth roughly double what he earned at Oak Hills. At the NEPGA, the top 13 qualified for spots in the National Club Pro Championship next June 23-26 at Sunriver Resort in Oregon. It will be the second time the tournament will be held at Sunriver. The first time was 2007. The NEPGA Championship and its qualifying berths were tightly contested. Among the qualifiers were Jeff Martin of Norton Country Club and Boomer Erick of Boston Golf Club of Hingham. Also qualifying were Kirby, Jeff Seavey of Samoset Resort, John Hickson of Dick's Sporting Goods, Kirk Hanefeld of Renaissance Golf Club, Frank Dully, Kernwood Country Club, Matt Arvanitis of Concord Country Club, Mike Dugas of JW Parks, Troy Pare of Wannamoisett Country Club, Marc Spencer of Windham Golf Club, Travis Hall of Ipswich Country Club and Rick Karbowski of the Auburn Driving Range. Congratulations to all who qualified for the National Club Pro Championship.

Young gun

Tucker Dalton Gullbrants of Brockton is beginning to make a name for himself in local junior golf. He shot 81 last week at D.W. Field in Brockton to win his age group at the Brockton Junior City Open. Even more impressive was the fact that his score was third-best overall among other tournament competitors who ranged from ages 14-17. Also, Gullbrants didn't play from the customary forward tees for his age group. He was lumped in with everyone else playing from the white tees at 5,500 yards, which is 300 yards longer than what he recently played from at the U.S. Oh, he is 10 and a fifth-grader at the Hancock Elementary School. He has been learning the game as a junior member at The Harmon Club in Rockland over the last three years and gets a lot of inspiration from another junior golfer who practices there. "Megan Khang is a positive influence on the junior members there," said Tucker's father, Kevin Gullbrants. "Tucker looks up to her. He knows what kind of summer she's been having. He's got a lot to learn but, so far, Tucker has been a great student."

EEE EFFECT

EEE a game changer, literally

By Patrick Ronan
The Patriot Ledger

Several towns have called off night games due to the heightened danger of people getting infected with a mosquito-borne virus.

Athletics fields will be closed from dusk to dawn at Whitman-Hanson Regional High School, Pembroke High School and Silver Lake Regional High School until the fall's first frost. The curtailed hours are in response to increased threat levels for Eastern equine encephalitis, or EEE.

Risk levels for contracting mosquito-borne illnesses

CRITICAL: Multiple cases of human disease are extremely likely Halifax, Plympton, West Bridgewater, Easton, Taunton, Raynham.

HIGH: Multiple cases are very likely

Hanson, Pembroke, Kingston, Carver,

Middleboro, East Bridgewater, Bridgewater, Lakeville, Norton

Last week, state officials said an alpaca living near the Halifax-Plympton line died of EEE, a virus transmitted by mosquitoes. Threat levels for EEE were elevated to "critical" in Halifax and Plympton and to "high" in nearby communities of Kingston, Pembroke and Hanson.

In Pembroke, all outdoor activities must be finished by 5:30 p.m., said Brian Fitzgibbons, athletic coordinator for the town's schools. He expects the restrictions to be lifted by late September or early October.

The Pembroke High football team's home opener against Whitman-Hanson on Sept. 28 will now be played at 3:45 p.m. instead of 7 p.m. Silver Lake's home contest Sept. 14 against New Bedford was moved up to 4 p.m.

Several night soccer games were also rescheduled.

Although most South Shore towns are at a "low" or "moderate" risk for mosquito-borne EEE and West Nile virus, health officials are still taking taking precautions.

Scituate, currently a low-risk town, recently had its school grounds sprayed with a mosquito-killing pesticide.

There have been three cases this year of humans contracting West Nile in the state this year. All three victims – two men from Cambridge, one in his 70s and the other in his 60s, and a woman in her 70s from Berkshire County – are expected to live.

Only one person in Massachusetts has been diagnosed with EEE this year – a Middlesex County man in his 60s. He is believed to have been infected while traveling out of state.

SOCCER

Buckley has been a starter and defensive staple since his freshman campaign.

He's the first junior to be named a captain while coach Jim Willis has been coach at Cohasset.

"Joe made the All-Star team as a sophomore," Willis said. "He'll be counted on to anchor the defense as a centerback."

Offensively, Willis will look to senior forward Nick Tangherlini, an all-star last season and the top scoring returning starter.

One thing Willis hopes for is a little more scoring, although he feels it will come from a number of different places.

"Last year we had six kids with more than five goals," he said. "We didn't have a superstar or a 20-goal scorer."

There is potential however.

Alex Kent is a senior who will be making his varsity debut this season. Kent scored 20 goals with the junior varsity last year.

"There's an ocean of difference between the varsity and the JV," Willis pointed out. "We'll put Alex next to Nick and see what they can do. Alex got a lot bigger this year and he's learned to play, and how to finish. I hope he helps.

"I feel we'll have numbers across the board. We possess, attack and spread it around. There are a lot of scrappy defenses in our league. All games are close. We know we have to be more aggressive and be quicker with our release."

An example of the difference and what might be expected could be John Mills, who scored bundles for the JV two years ago, and chipped in six goals off the bench for the varsity last season.

As usual, Cohasset's biggest strength is the defense, which will have the help of sophomore goalie Pat Federle.

"Pat had the lowest goals against average from a statistical standpoint," Willis said of his second-year starter. "He's tall and aggressive. He'll continue to get better."

Three freshmen, including Federle started last year, and they'll also return stronger.

"Sam Morris is on the outside," Willis said. "He can put offensive pressure on people. Teddy Kraven will play in the midfield and some defense."

Also in the central midfield will be junior Ryan McKeon, who started next to Buckley last season.

Skipper goalie Pat Federle hopes to expand on his outstanding freshman campaign this season. STAFF FILE PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

"Ryan and Teddy will hold the fort," Willis said. "And they're both good at distributing."

Senior Connor Goetz is a relentless, aggressive player who provides energy.

Senior Bobby Nahill should provide some speed at outside fullback, while Justin Cobin and Devin Kennedy are seniors who will play all seven front positions off the bench.

Willis likes the fact that he has extra options this season.

"In the past I've had a tendency to play starters the most," he said. "I'd use three or four guys off the bench. This year with our depth, if people understand their roles and don't worry about playing time that could change. Guys know if you're a bench player your job is to go out and give extra energy for that 10 or 20 minutes. Play with reckless abandon. Go after it. That's the kind of thing that wears defenses down. That should be a strength for us.

"We have a lot of athletic kids and soccer players. The kids are stronger. Many of them have been playing with club teams, pickup soccer and camps. I'm impressed."

reserve the right to make late adjustments on the head start depending on the quality of the field.

"We arrived at that time based on past races, but you never know who might show up," Hebert said. "We could get an Olympian or two who comes in at the last minute."

A field of 500 is expected, along with 50 relay teams. The triathlon begins at 7:30 a.m. at Pilgrim Memorial Park. The competition includes a 1/3-mile swim, an 11-mile bike race and a three-mile run. Entry fee is $85 for individuals and $125 for two- or three-person relay teams. All entrants must present a valid, current USAT annual membership, or they can purchase a one-day USAT license on race day for $12.

There will be awards and prize money to the Top 3 finishers in each age group and category. The "Battle of the Sexes" category will pay the Top 6.

The swim portion will begin at the State Boat Ramp and exit at the dock at the bow of the Mayflower II. Athletes will transition to the bike race, which proceeds down Water St, past Stephens Field, and along Sandwich Road before turning around at Forges Field. The run will consist of two 1½-mile laps down Water Street, past Plymouth Rock and onto Cole's Hill, providing scenic views of Plymouth Harbor.

"What's neat is that spectators will be able to look up and see them on the way back winding their way down," Hebert said. "You'll be able to follow them for the last three-quarters of a mile. It will be a really fun finish."

Non-elite competitors will also have the opportunity to watch the finish due to a format that will send them out one hour earlier in three-minute waves.

Cohasset Appalachia Service Project 2012

With a total of 80 volunteers, dividing into 12 crews, these hearty folks were able to work on seven homes of disadvantage families in West Virginia and five homes in Tennessee. Making up the total included 29 adults, 12 college age "CIT's" (counselors in training) and 39 teenagers.

Departing Cohasset in two coach buses on Saturday, June 23; dividing into vans and continuing on, the group eventually arrived at their final destinations late Sunday afternoon. Starting right off on Monday morning, the crews headed out to various homes to begin to help make them "drier, warmer, and safer." Ending their workweek on Friday, on Saturday morning they piled back into vans once again and headed back for an overnight in Winchester, Va. Early Sunday morning, they reported back to the bus-pickup point. Due to heavy traffic, the buses finally made it to Cohasset around 10:45 in the evening.

No lives were left untouched by this experience. That's why they keep going!

Some notable memories from journals recorded during the week:

"Our work will continue to ripple, long after we return home."

"I can't recall anyone I know in (the big city) saying, 'I want to make enough money so I can be kind and have it have a real effect,' but I heard a 17 year-old say those exact words while digging a 90-foot drainage ditch in 100-degree heat."

"These homes are in such poor condition and it's unfair that we're living in luxury while these people are barely scraping by. This makes it our responsibility to help and be supporting projects like ASP we are making a small dent in this problem."

"We were truly blessed to have been able to help (our homeowner) and her extended family."

"Hope to see you all next year!"

GIMME SHELTER

Petunia is just about purr-fect

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue has a special young female to introduce this week. Petunia was chosen as our featured cat and when you hear more about her, maybe you will come for a visit and fall for her as we have.

It's been a pretty busy summer for Petunia as she delivered a small litter recently. She is really just a kitten herself at 3 years old. Luckily, for her and her kittens, they were rescued and have been safe here at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

As you can see, Petunia is a pretty little girl and she is not too shy about it either. Posing for pictures came naturally for her this past week! She is quite social, very curious, and loves the cat tree and scratching post in her room. When she gets comfortable with people and is through looking over and under everything around her, she does enjoy lots of petting and being held in your arms. That's when the purring gets going.

Here at the shelter, it is a little crowded in her room, and most of her roommates are bigger so it does make her feel a little anxious. Right now, being an only cat would be probably be the most comfortable situation for her. Since she loves getting to the window, we can only imagine what fun it would be for her to be in a home where she could do some exploring, relax in a sunny window and be with a family or one person who will love her, play, and give her warm hugs and attention. In return, she will reward you with purrs, attention and love! As with all of out cats, Petunia will be spayed and up to date on shots so she is right here, waiting for you. Do you have room in your heart and home for this little sweetie?

If so, please call our adoption coordinator, Judy at: 781-534-4902.

By the way, two of Petunia's adorable kittens are now spoken for and are learning to get along without their Mom in their new forever homes. We do have little Mellie, who is still available and just as sweet as can be. Both of these pretty girls are hoping that they will be chosen and find their forever homes soon.

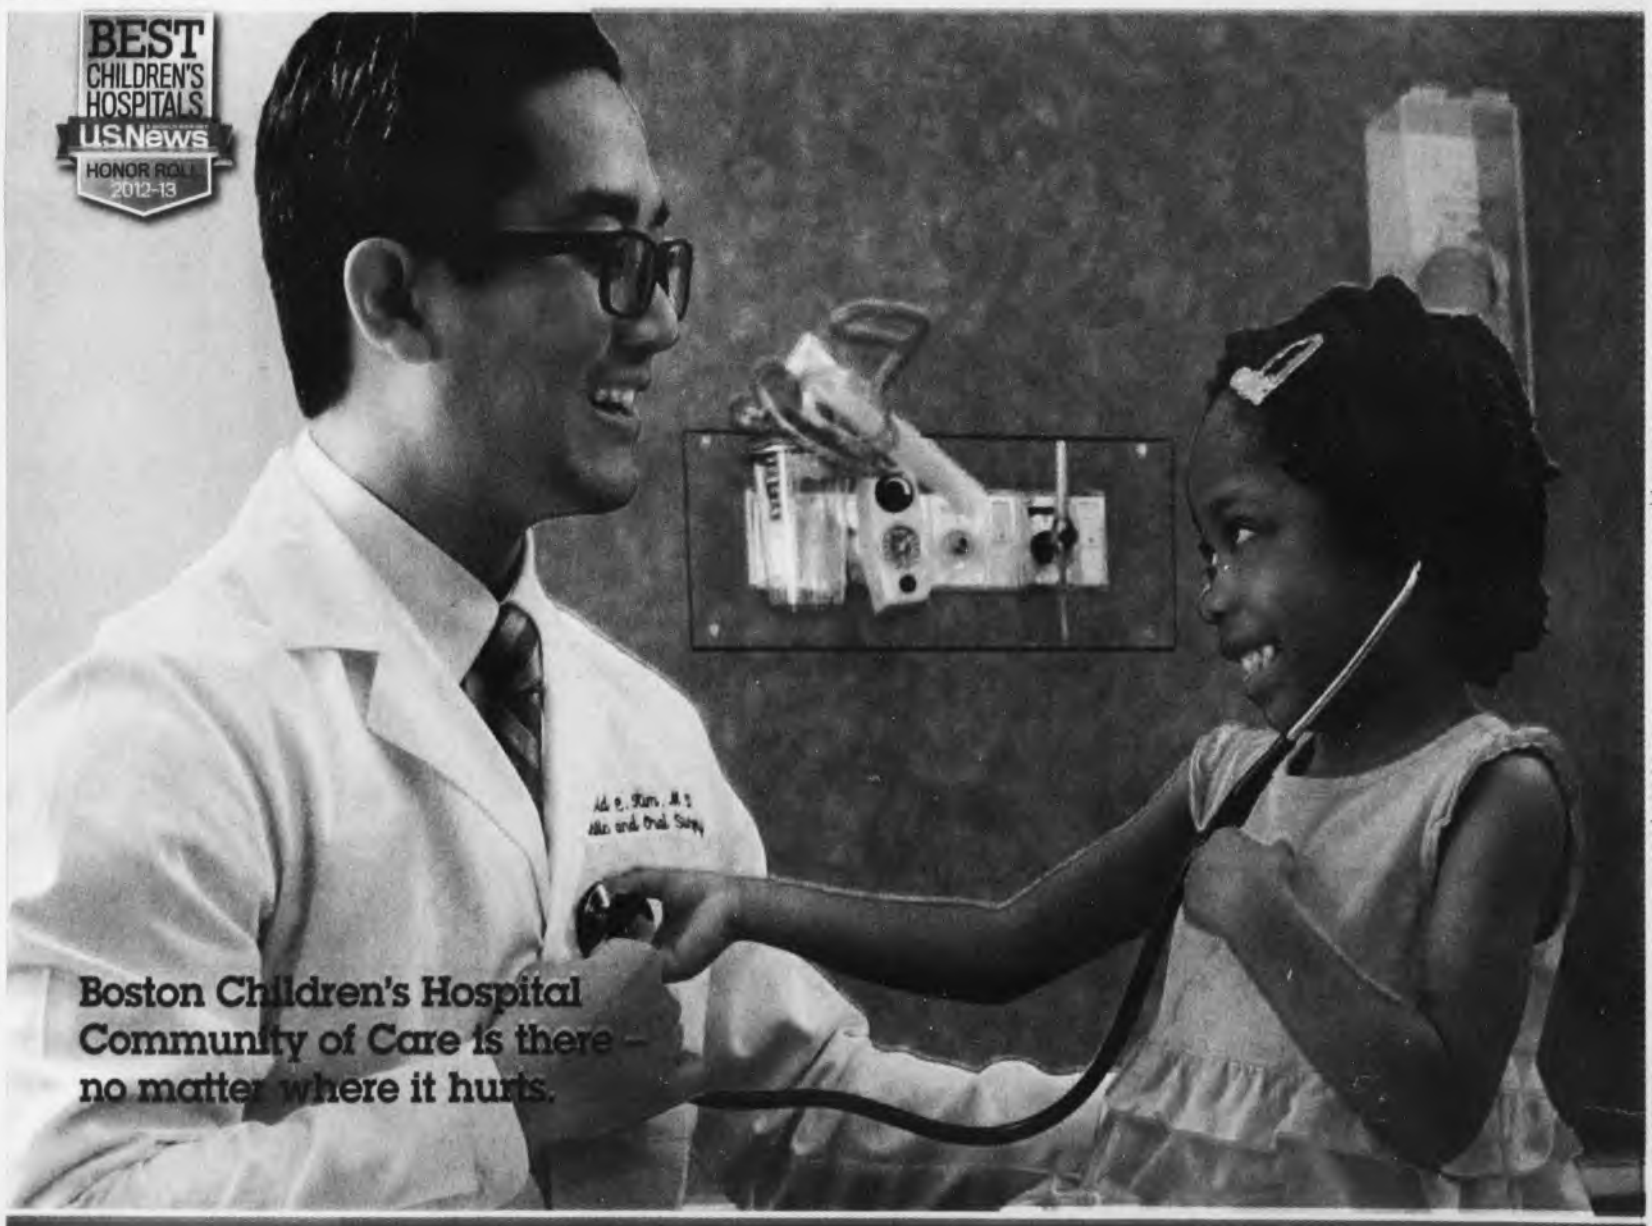
She is quite social, very curious, and loves the cat tree and scratching post in her room.

All of us here at the shelter are hoping for loving families and forever homes for our many feline friends. It is such a joyful time when we see our adopters come in and connect with a special friend and new family member, so please come see us soon.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is open for visitors and loving people who are looking to adopt on Mondays from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and on Saturdays from 2 to 3 p.m. If you cannot be here during our regular hours, we can arrange for appointments.



We are located at 50 L St. in Hull. The office number is 781-925-3638. You can also see more pictures and information on our available cats and kittens on our website, www.HSAR.org. Visiting www.Petfinder.com is another great way to see all of our available cats. Just enter our zip code, 02045, and you will be directed to our updated list. If you would like to contact us by e-mail, hsar@verizon.net is our address.

Here at the shelter, we run on donations, so thank you to all who send donations, drop off their cans and bottles, and also to the wonderful people who stop in with food, toys and supplies that we all need! It sure helps to keep our "kids" healthy and happy.

There is always something to be working on here at Hull Seaside. If you have some free time and would like to volunteer for direct care or fostering of our animals, or support us with fundraising activities, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638 for more information. Our mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO Box 787, Hull, MA 02045.

ON THE ROCKS

Cohasset was a seafaring town

From 1780 to 1885 Cohasset was a seafaring town. Barques, schooners, brigs and smaller craft were built here and sailed with cargoes trading with Europe, South America, the near east and far east. The captains who commanded them were rugged men. In addition to physical strength and courage they needed knowledge of navigation and the sea.

Such a man was Captain Francis L. Pratt (1818-1897). He was 11-years-old when he made his first trip on a square rigger, a voyage that went from Boston to Charleston, to Liverpool, and back to Boston. In his narrative he exclaims, "now, notice, ye big boys of 17 loafing about town, I was 11-years-old when I shipped on this vessel among all strangers as a green hand!"

At the ages of 18 and 19, he served as first mate on the Brigs Ceylon and Russian. His first command was the schooner Bela Bates on which he had sailed as a boy of 11. Captain Pratt was a teetotaler and he substituted coffee for grog as a stimulant to the sailors when working the vessel in a gale.

After many years, many cargoes and many ports of call, Captain Pratt decided to give up the sea, and spent the rest of his life on shore. He figured that he had sailed about 78,000 miles during his career as a sailor.

Exhibit to open

The Cohasset Historical Society is celebrating Cohasset maritime history throughout the month of September. Save the date for Opening night on Saturday, Sept. 8.

Opening night will highlight a unique exhibit featuring relics of the many ships that were storm driven on the reefs off the Cohasset shores as well as artifacts from Cohasset's rich seafaring history.

Most wrecks occurred in the 19th century, when the shipping channel into Boston Harbor was narrow and passed close to many ledges. Ships were predominately powered by sail and at the mercy of the wind, which frequently blew them onto the rocks.

A cocktail party at the Society will celebrate Cohasset's worldwide shipping trade and current fishing and lobster industries.

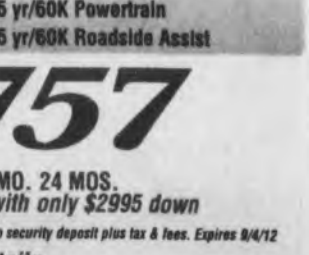
Ultimate lawn party for a great cause



Think the game of croquet died with Queen Victoria? Think again. It is alive and well and hilariously competitive at the annual Croquet Classic in Cohasset on Saturday, Sept. 22. It is the most fun you can legally have on someone's front lawn and it is all to support pediatric programs at South Shore Hospital.

The Friends of South Shore Hospital LINKS group invites you to join them for the ultimate lawn party at a private, waterfront home in Cohasset. Croquet is the main attraction, but a raffle with great prizes like Patriots tickets, a wonderful spread of gourmet food and adult beverages, and a relaxed and entertaining atmosphere also highlight the event. The point is—you don't have to know how to play croquet or even step on the croquet court to have a great time!

The LINKS members are young professionals with families of their own who live and work on the South Shore. They hold multiple events each year to raise funds in support of pediatric programs at South Shore Hospital. To register for the Croquet Classic and obtain additional details, please log onto southshorehospital.org/events or call 781-624-4170.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 10, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A change that you'd hoped for is down the line. But you still need to be patient until more explanations are forthcoming. Continue to keep your enthusiasm in check.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your social life expands as new friends come into your life. But while you're having fun, your practical side also sees some positive business potential within your new circle.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your workplace situation continues to improve. Look for advantages you might have missed while all the changes were going on around you. That trusted colleague can help.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Resist the urge to hunker down in your bunker until things ease up. Instead, get rid of that woe-is-me attitude by getting up and getting out to meet old friends and make new ones.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Now that you're back enjoying the spotlight again, you should feel re-energized and ready to take on the challenge of bringing those big, bold plans of yours to completion.

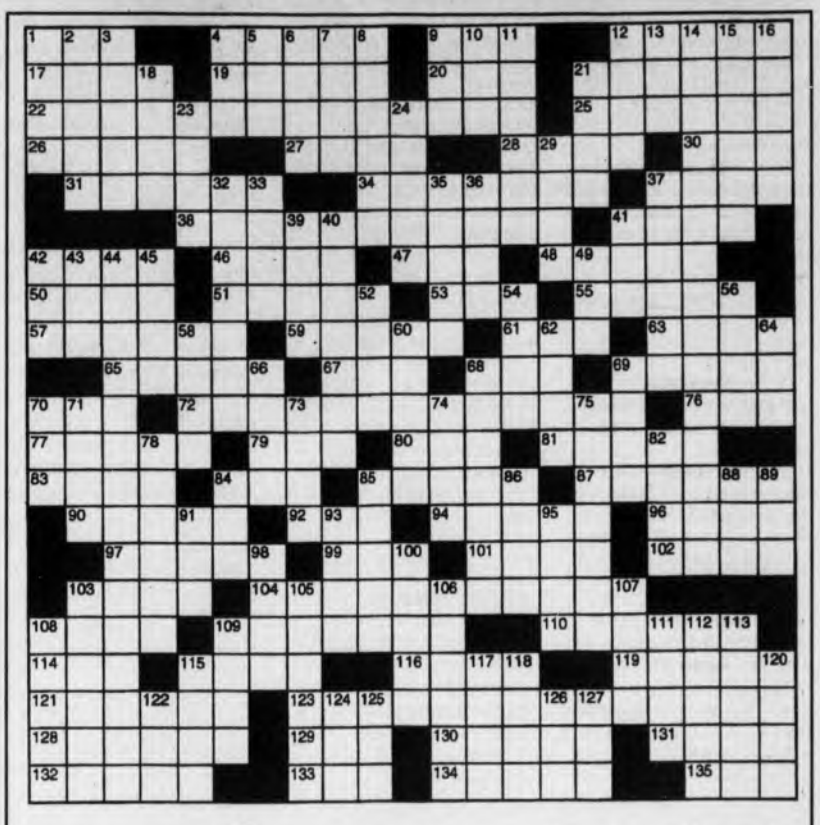
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A former friend would like to repair a relationship you two once enjoyed. Your positive response could have an equally positive impact on your life. Think about it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Resist making impulsive decisions. Stay on that steady course as you continue to work out workplace problems. Be patient. All will soon be back in balance.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel confident about taking a promising offer, but continue to be alert for what you're not being told about it. Don't fret. Time is on your side.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) People dear to you might be planning a way to show appreciation for all you've done for them. Accept the honor graciously. Remember: You deserve it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Congratulations. Your self-confidence is on the rise. This could be a good time to tackle those bothersome situations you've avoided both at home and at work.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You feel obligated to return a favor. (Of course, you do.) But heed advice from those close to you and do nothing until you know for sure what's being asked of you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your loving reassurance helped revive a once-moribund relationship. But be wary of someone who might try to do something negative to reverse this positive turn of events.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a wonderful matchmaker who can bring people together to form long-lasting relationships.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church: Last Sunday on the Beach!

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is an inclusive, Christ-centered community committed to exploring the intersection of our faith and our lives. We invite you to join us on Sunday mornings and through a variety of special programs during the week. All are welcome to worship God with us at St. Stephen's!

This Sunday, St. Stephen's concludes its summer worship schedule. Rather than our normal 8am and 10am services in the church, our early service is at 7am on Sandy Beach in Cohasset. Because this is before vehicle tags are checked, everyone is able to come! The second service is at 9am in the church. We will be having a baptism at the beach service!

This Sunday is also our last Sunday on our summer schedule, which means that it is the last chance to worship with us on the beach until next summer! If you've never worshiped with us on the beach, then you've missed out on a real Cohasset treat. But there's still time! See you at 7am at Sandy Beach this Sunday.

Our normal worship schedule (Sunday morning at 8am and 10am), as well as our children's education program, Godly Play recommences next Sunday, September 9th.

AA meets four times a week at St. Stephen's: Sundays at 7 p.m., there is a Closed Big Book Study. Tuesdays there is a Women's step meeting at 6:30p.m. and a closed discussion meeting at 8 p.m. Fridays at 6:30 p.m. there is a Beginner's meeting. All meetings take place in the Watermelon Room at the church office.

Please call the church office at (781) 383-1083 or visit ststephenscohasset.org for more information

David E. Place

David E. Place

MILTON–David Elliott Place, age 91, of Milton, MA, died peacefully at home on August 23, 2012.

Brimming with passion for life's adventures, a pragmatic business acumen, and commitment to service, Place declared, "I've never been bored a day in my life!" Congenitally optimistic, Place rode the high seas of life, literally and figuratively. At age 17, he and two friends purchased Seaboots, a vessel that was, at the time, underwater; for the cost of six wooden barrels, they resurrected the sailboat by lashing ropes to its rails at low tide and raising the ship as the tide came in. Until age 80, he intrepidly sailed his ketch, Arabella, Down East and beyond to Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. He reveled in the magnificence of the Maine woods and skied the winter slopes of New Hampshire. The Place dinner table was always set for drop-in guests who didn't mind dogs and boisterous chaos.

Place attended Milton Academy (Class of '39) and Harvard College (Class of '43). At Harvard, he managed the Harvard football team, campaigned for Wendell Willkie for President, and joined the Navy ROTC; upon graduation, fellow students voted him their permanent Class Secretary. When a broken leg disqualified Place from Navy assignment, he took a Third Mate license and piloted U.S. hospital ships in the Mediterranean and Atlantic.

Following the war, Place returned to Harvard Law School (Class of '48) and then joined the law firm of Ely, Bradford, Thompson, and Brown. From 1953-55, he was appointed Assistant U.S. Attorney for Massachusetts and then Special Assistant to the U.S. Attorney. In over five decades of legal work with Gaston Snow & Ely Bartlett, as Managing Partner for 15 years, and subsequently Choate Hall & Stewart from 1991, Place "never turned down a request for assistance," writing client wills and trusts, advising new and venerable business ventures as legal counsel and trustee (The Forté Dupree Company, Greylock Management Corp, McCrillis Land Association among many), as well as springing wayward kids out of jail. His late friend, Robert Sceery of Cohasset, gave his own children one piece of advice: If you are ever in trouble, remember just one number: "1943" -- Place's Harvard class year and telephone number. Place was known for his philanthropy, setting a personal example and urging of wealthy clients to share their good fortune with good causes.

Active in politics, Place worked on both sides of the aisle, with U.S. Presidents Dwight Eisenhower, Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan, and George W Bush and Massachusetts Governors Endicott Peabody, William Weld, and Deval Patrick. He consistently advocated a progressive social agenda in his political life.

When not steering a sailboat, Place served at the helm of innumerable public and non-profit enterprises. Among his most personally meaningful public assignments: Cohasset Town Moderator (1969-1980), General Counsel to the U. S. Department of the Air Force (1981-1984), Deputy Commissioner to the U. S. Arms Control Standing Consultative Commission (1984-1986), and Chairman of the Massachusetts Judicial Nominating Council (1991-1996). He served on diverse Boards of Directors and Corporations, such as the Jackson Laboratory, New England Deaconess Hospital, Mass General Hospital, Boston YMCA, International Institute of Boston, Dana Hall School, Boston Public Library, McCrillis Land Association, and the Massachusetts Trustees of Reservations.

Place's embrace of life and genuine interest in everyone he met won him a lifetime of endearing friendships. Above all, his life exemplified values he instilled in those around him: loyalty, integrity, active citizenship, gratitude, and service to others. Ken Paigen, geneticist and former Director of the Jackson Laboratory in Bar Harbor, Maine, wrote the following tribute when Place stepped down from the Board after 30 years: "To David: friend, advisor, legal sage, and source of worldly wisdom; even more an unfailing source of support and encouragement..."

David Place is survived by his wife, Susanna Badgley Place, of Milton, MA, and their children, Louise and Alexander Place; his former wife, Penelope G. Place, of Cohasset, MA, and their children, D. Elliott Place, Richard Place, Penelope Gleason, and Josiah Place, and four grandchildren, Nathan Place, Rachel Place, Isaac Place, and Mark Place; as well as his brother, H. Calvin Place, of Wellesley, MA.

A celebration of David's life will be held on September 8th at 2 pm, at St. Michael's Episcopal Church, 112 Randolph Ave, Milton, MA; a reception will follow at his home at 224 Adams Street, Milton. In lieu of flowers, contributions can be made in David Place's name to The Epiphany School in Dorchester, MA (http://epiphanyschool.com) or The Island Education Fund at the Island Institute in Rockland, Maine (http://www.islandinstitute.org.)

Family movie night in the park

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The merchants of Ripley Road are working together to bring a little movie magic to Cohasset. David Bigley, owner of All the Best natural foods, approached the Board of Selectmen's office on behalf of his neighboring storeowners who would like to hold a family movie night in Constitution Park sometime this fall.

The film has yet to be determined but will be family-friendly, and shown on either a Friday or Saturday night.

There will be no charge, and snacks may be provided. The event is being designed as a "goodwill gesture to the community," Bigley said in an email to the selectmen's office.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski brought the request to the selectmen's attention during their Tuesday night meeting. The board discussed whether similar events had been held in that location in the past, but couldn't come up with any examples. They also pondered whether neighbors on North Main Street would be affected by the noise.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson suggested the film be shown in the early evening so that "if it impacts residents, it wouldn't be too late at night."

Since it appears to be a one-time event, the selectmen voted unanimously to grant the merchants a one-day entertainment license.

"I personally think it's a great idea," said selectmen vice chair Diane Kennedy.

Bigley said in a phone call Wednesday that he didn't know his request was on the selectmen's agenda or that it had been approved, but he was glad to hear the news.

"I was just inquiring what I needed to do to make this happen," the health food storeowner said of his email request. He and his fellow merchants have not yet decided on a date for the event or on which film will be shown, but Bigley said he is "delighted we got permission." The All the Best owner said he and other business owners on Ripley Road are hoping the family-friendly event will help "generate some interest down in this section of the Village."

The movie night in Constitution Park, located next to the post office, will likely take place in October, said Bigley. Look for updates in a future edition of the Mariner.

SSRECC UPDATE

Lives saved

Dispatch handles simultaneous calls

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's public safety dispatchers have relocated to the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC) in Hingham, and so far, the move to regionalized dispatch appears to be working. Four years after Cohasset inked an agreement to join in regionalization, the SSRECC opened its doors in January 2012 with the town of Cohasset officially joining in last month. The SSRECC also serves the towns of Hingham, Hull and Norwell, providing emergency call answering and dispatch services for the towns' police and fire departments. All SSRECC dispatchers are E-911 and Emergency Medical Dispatch (EMD) certified.

Last Wednesday, August 29, four subsets of dispatchers at the SSRECC received three different emergency 911 calls and dealt with each one simultaneously.

At approximately 8:18 a.m. that day, several calls came in reporting an electrocuted man in Hingham. One dispatcher remained on the line with a caller while another dispatcher sent out Hingham emergency responders. The dispatcher on the phone confirmed the victim was away from the power source and whether it was safe to approach him; the dispatcher then asked the caller to check

COMMEMORATING 9/11

Interfaith ceremony Tuesday at 9 a.m.

On Tuesday, September 11, Cohasset's American Legion Post #118, police and fire departments and churches will hold a memorial ceremony to honor those who perished during the events of Sept.11, 2001. Cohasset has held a non-denominational service on the town common every year on 9/11 for the past 10 years.

All Cohasset residents are invited to attend the ceremony. Each clergyman from every church in Cohasset is given time to say a prayer or give a brief reading during the service, which typically lasts between 15 and 30 minutes. While the 9/11 commemoration is a bit more "low-key" than the town's Memorial Day and Veterans Day services, it is still an opportunity to "pay tribute to police, fire, service men and women, and everyone who fell that day," said Tom Wigmore, commander of Cohasset's Sons of American Legion. Wigmore has helped organize the ceremony along with the police and fire chiefs each year.

Following the ceremony, which includes prayers, songs, ringing of the church bells and laying of a memorial wreath, all participants are invited to join in a collation at the fire department.

Tuesday's 9/11 Memorial Service: Order of events

- 8:40 a.m.: Fire, Police and Veterans Honor Guard Units assemble at Town Hall
- 8:55: Units march to the Common and assemble at the Flag Pole
- 9:00: Prayers offered by members of the local clergy
- 9:05: Ringing of the Church Bells
- 9:10: Singing of "America the Beautiful"
- 9:15: Laying of memorial wreath
- 9:20: Taps
- 9:25: Dismissal

A collation will be held at Fire Department Headquarters immediately after the service. Everyone attending the service is invited.

This memorial service is being coordinated by the Cohasset Fire Department, the Cohasset Police Department and the American Legion Post #118.

Cohasset firefighters salute the flag during the playing of taps for their comrades who lost their lives on 9/11 in New York during last year's observance on the Town Common. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

BRIEFLY

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the right (by the candy display) after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

FISH volunteers

Cohasset F.I.S.H. is currently in need of a few more volunteer drivers. This organization provides rides to medical appointments for those in Cohasset without other options. Each volunteer is scheduled to drive (if needed) one weekday per month using their own vehicle. Our corps of drivers has declined over the summer months as a result of relocations, disabilities, or simple aging issues — thus the need for more volunteers.

If you are available and might be interested in serving Cohasset residents in this easy manner, please contact Dick Avery at 383-6043 or leave a message with the F.I.S.H. answering service (781) 545-7073.

POLICE BEAT

$300 sneakers for trade online

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police received a call last week from a concerned mother about the fact her son had put a pair on sneakers, valued at $300, on Craig's List to trade for another pair. He sent his sneakers to Texas but had not received the pair he swapped for and the trading party was no longer on Craig's List.

Police said this week that they have not heard back from the mother so possibly the swapped pair of sneakers had arrived and were in transit when she called. Apparently, trading sneakers online is not uncommon.

Homeless man

Cohasset police responded to a 9-1-1 call last Monday (Aug. 27) from a concerned resident about a homeless man setting up camp behind St. Stephen's Church. Police said investigation revealed the 61-year-old man had the pastor's permission to stay there.

Moving truck

A large moving truck, operated by a 24-year-old Billerica man, was backing down Deep Run last Tuesday (Aug. 29) and damaged the two stone pillars at the entrance to the neighborhood, police said. A police report was filed and the moving company will be responsible for fixing the masonry on the pillars.

Pigeon

Police had two reports last week about what the caller thought was a homing pigeon – possibly from the Marshfield Fair – that had taken up residence in the courtyard at the high school. As it turned out, someone had been feeding the pigeon. The animal control officer said once bird realizes there is no more food, it will move on.

Threats

A 51-year-old Cohasset man, who is an attorney, called on Tuesday (Aug. 28) to report he was threatened with harm by a client over issues with a bill. The attorney wanted the matter logged, police said.

Missing man

A 91-year-old man, who lives at a senior facility locally and has access to a car, was overdue on Tuesday (Aug. 28). He was reported missing at around 7 p.m. by his family. Police put out calls to area towns to try and locate the gentleman. He returned home the following morning at about 11:45 a.m. and reported that he did not understand what the fuss was about as he had just spent the night with his girlfriend.

Harassed

A jogger reported to police last week that while he was jogging near Sandy Beach a gold/beige Jeep Cherokee approached him. The men inside were wearing backwards baseball caps and asked him if he wanted to go and then proceeded to harass the lifeguards. Since the incident was an hour old when reported, there was nothing matching the description of the car in the area, police said.

Dispute

A 39-year-old Cohasset man who lives in an apartment reported to police that his 62-year-old landlord had agreed to have some work done on the apartment before Sept. 1. On Aug. 30, workers arrived but the tenant did not let them in as he felt the late arrival violated the agreement he had with the landlord. A check with the building inspector also revealed no permit had been pulled for the work.

Bike stolen

A 44-year-old Cohasset man's $300 Trek Mountain Bike was reported stolen from the MBTA parking lot last Thursday. Police said the man did not have the lock that day but wrapped the chain around the bike rack but when he returned the bike was gone.

Boat capsized

An officer on patrol in the Sandy Beach area spotted a small sailboat capsized off the shore with two people hanging on around 2:08 p.m. on Thursday (Aug. 30). The harbormaster was notified but by the time help arrived, the boaters had righted the sailboat and were OK.

Wrong house

Police responded to a 9-1-1 call from Fernway at 4:30 a.m. from a concerned resident who said a teenaged boy with no shirt had attempted to get into her house and she did not know who he was. When police arrived, the teen ducked into the bushes. Police said the two officers at the scene did their best to hold a perimeter and called the K-9 unit.

Once the K-9 was on the scene, the boy ran into the house across the street from the caller's, police said. As it turned out, the house he went into was where he lived. The boy, who is 17 and was intoxicated, thought he was going home when he went to the neighbor's house and inadvertently scared her, police said.

Vandalism

Two boats were vandalized while parked at the private marina at the end of Parker Avenue last week. A 65-year-old Cohasset man reported his 25-foot center console Hydra sport boat was vandalized and a 57-year-old Cohasset man reported his 30-foot cabin cruiser was vandalized. Police said vandals discharged fire extinguishers inside the boats causing damage.

Jumpers

Police dispersed two groups of jumpers off Cunningham Bridge on Monday (Sept. 4) at 2:54 and again at 3:31 p.m. While Border Street jumpers are a common occurrence – jumping off Cunningham Bridge is a rare occurrence. It is a violation of a town bylaw to jump off either bridge.

Off road

Police responded to single-car accident on Monday (Aug. 27) on N. Main Street around 9:41 a.m. Police said a 49-year-old Cohasset man in a 2008 Jeep Grand Cherokee dropped a soft drink on his lap and veered off the road, sideswiping a utility pole. The Jeep was towed and the man was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes. National Grid was notified about damage to the pole.

NORFOLK COUNTY

Mentors sought for ex-offenders

They meet periodically at the jail with the purpose of developing a rapport. When the offender wraps up his sentence and leaves jail, the mentor maintains contact with him to help him stay on the right path.

Norfolk County Sheriff's Office and Volunteers of America are seeking volunteer mentors from various walks of life to work with offenders before and after their release from jail to help them return to their communities as law-abiding citizens.

VOA and Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti began the mentoring program at the Norfolk County Correctional Center in Dedham approximately one year ago. Mentors are paired with an inmate while he is serving his jail sentence. They meet periodically at the jail with the purpose of developing a rapport. When the offender wraps up his sentence and leaves jail, the mentor maintains contact with him to help him stay on the right path.

"We've had some very good results with this program," VOA chief operating officer Henry Goodhue said. He said each mentor-offender relationship is unique. Mentors do things such as phone inmates to remind and encourage them about probation meetings, doctor's office visits and other important appointments. They can lend a sympathetic ear and provide successful examples when it comes to dealing with substance abuse. They can help ex-offenders deal with employment and housing issues.

"It's great for the offender to have a community-oriented contact," Goodhue said.

Sheriff Bellotti noted the mentor program is administered with funding from a U.S. Justice Department grant. "We already have approximately 40 mentor volunteers working with Norfolk County offenders," Bellotti said. Volunteers include a retired court official, small business owner, construction worker, financial services representative and a former school teacher.

"We're looking for anyone who is committed to the work. We're particularly looking for military veterans who may relate well to some of the inmates who are military veterans," VOA mentor recruiter Bart Timilty said. Volunteers go through a general screening process followed by individual and group training along with guidelines about boundaries one should maintain with the offender.

People interested in becoming a mentor should send an email to btimilty@voamass.org or call 617-755-0975 and ask for Timilty.

DISPATCH

whether the man was breathing, gave the caller CPR instructions, and stayed on the phone until fire department personnel arrived on the scene.

One minute later, at 8:19 a.m., the SSRECC received two separate emergency calls — one reporting a missing two-year-old in Hingham, another for a medical emergency in Norwell. The dispatchers were able to handle these calls while the phones continued ringing with alarm and informational calls.

Cohasset officials are praising the effectiveness of regionalized dispatch.

"The system showed it worked last Wednesday," Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said at Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson called the SSRECC "a huge step forward" for dispatch services.

"A life was saved, a lost child found, and a medical emergency responded to, all in the course of a day's work for the dispatchers who work for the SRECC," a SSRECC press release stated.

Cohasset Fire Chief Robert Silvia, who was recently appointed to the state's 911 commission, said that the streamlined dispatching process is the reason that towns like Cohasset have opted to regionalize emergency call services.

"The state 911 department has required all dispatchers be properly trained in emergency medical dispatch, and this is the reason why," Silvia said in a phone call. "The system worked as it was supposed to, and the employees did a phenomenal job. The outcome is what everyone hoped for and spoke well to how the team concept worked... It's been a long road to get where we are and we've still got a long way to go, but it shows what we're capable of when everything works the way it's supposed to."

BACK TO SCHOOL

Principals report on opening day

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The 2012-2013 school year is off to a smashing start, according to Cohasset's principals. All three – Osgood principal Bob LeCount, Deer Hill principal Dr. Jennifer deChiara, and Middle-High School principal Carolyn Connolly – came before the School Committee Wednesday night to give their rundown of the first week back, so far.

Two of the three principals are new hires this year; LeCount started in July, while Connolly was hired in April.

LeCount is no stranger to Cohasset or Osgood, having worked as Osgood's Adjustment Counselor for 11 years before leaving in 2008 to serve as principal of the Primavera Educational Center in Bellingham.

Connolly was most recently assistant principal at Pembroke High School; she had worked there since 2004. Prior to that, she worked in the Silver Lake district from 2001 until 2004.

Third-grader Samylle Soares walks in to Deer Hill School with her mother Luana, and her 22-month-old brother Sam on Tuesday for the first day of school.

Last year, Superintendent Barbara Cataldo gave an opening day report to the school committee during their first meeting of the new school year; this year, Cataldo said she wanted to do things differently. The superintendent invited the principals in to present instead.

First- and second-graders walk into the Osgood School on opening day.

Osgood

LeCount began by telling the school board and audience members that it was "good to be back" in Osgood after four years away, and that he is honored to be there.

The Osgood principal said that the new school year for Cohasset's pre-k to second grade students "began in stellar fashion."

"The building was clear and bright, which is a compliment to the custodians," LeCount said, adding, "The rooms were prepped and ready for students... there were no major problems."

First and second graders started school on Tuesday, while pre-k and kindergarten began on Thursday. LeCount said that kindergarteners had the opportunity to meet their teachers last week and participated in preliminary screenings for motor activity and language, though "nothing too in depth."

LeCount elaborated in an email to the Mariner that he is a fan of this transition period for young students.

"I think we do a much better job of transitioning our students to the next grade from when I was young," LeCount said. "We would learn who our teacher was when we got to the first day of school. Now we know much sooner, students meet with teachers from the next grade ahead of time, and have the chance to meet their new teacher prior to school starting. Children are therefore better prepared to begin school. I credit faculty and parents for being attuned to the children's need to participate in transition activities."

LeCount complimented the Osgood staff to the school board, saying, "We have a terrific team there; I have to give them credit."

This year, teachers are implementing new programs for handwriting, "empowering writers," and the EnVision math pilot. LeCount said this is "just a snapshot" of things to come.

Students line up by class at Osgood before school on Tuesday.

Deer Hill

Principal deChiara reported that opening day was "fabulous, in spite of the rain."

Teachers were in and out during the summer getting the classrooms ready for students, deChiara said. Deer Hill is piloting the same math program as Osgood, along with a new lunch program.

The Deer Hill principal explained that new state requirements for nutrition led to changes in school meals, and admitted she was nervous how the changes would be received. But so far, students and parents seem to be welcoming the change.

"Kids seem to be taking everything and liking everything," deChiara said of the cafeteria offerings, adding that she's heard "positive feedback from parents."

School committee chair Jeanne Astino asked deChiara if the school changed the lunch schedule; apparently deChiara had toyed with switching lunch and recess. In the end, the traditional schedule won out. The principal explained that recess will continue to follow lunch because she was concerned if recess came first that students wouldn't have enough time to wash their hands before eating. However, deChiara added that she's open to suggestions.

Before school opened for students, deChiara said her staff had a "fruitful day of professional development," during which they "engaged in community-building activities."

"It's important to establish strong, positive relationships between teachers and students, and that's what they've been focused on," deChiara said of the staff.

Midde-High School

It seems the new principal of CHS has hit the ground running. Connolly said that she likes being able to "lap all the classrooms four times a day," and that she's enjoyed meeting students, even "a few rascals."

However, the principal added that she's very impressed with Cohasset students so far, especially the seniors.

"My greatest charge is to seniors," said Connolly. "You set the tone... my expectations are high. So far, I'm terribly impressed."

The principal explained that she treats the seniors as the young adults that they are, provided they earn that trust and respect.

Connolly has also reached out to incoming freshmen in a new way; this year, she and assistant principal Brian Scott (who is also new to CHS this year) hosted a freshmen orientation.

The principal and assistant principal "weren't sure how well it would go over," Connolly said of the new event. "But attendance was extraordinary."

Having an orientation before starting high school "was a nice stress reliever for freshmen," said the principal. It gave ninth graders a chance "to find their lockers and their way around without the pressure of the older kids."

The adjective Connolly used to describe opening day, overall? "Smashing."

"I remain delighted to be here," the new principal said to the school board. "I could not be more thrilled with the position and thank you again."

HOOKING UP:

Sawchuk takes lead on Lightkeepers connection

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

During a recent selectmen's meeting, selectman Fred Koed brought up the option of connecting the Lightkeepers House to the municipal sewer. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski summed up the problem there: "During large events the septic system may overflow into the harbor."

Milanoski said he got in touch with Sewer Commission chair Wayne Sawchuk, who offered to work with his construction company to determine what would be needed to get the Lightkeepers connected and identify possible capital costs. Sawchuk would need six to eight weeks to finalize the plan, but wants to get the project done by the end of the year, according to the town manager.

"Wayne's taking the bull by the horns and running with it," said Milanoski.

In an email last week, the sewer commission chair offered a preliminary update. Sawchuk said that so far, he has contacted two members of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation (a non-profit that maintains and operates the Lightkeepers Residence) and plans to discuss the proposed sewer connection, future usage and operating costs with the CLC board's president Dick Avery.

"A potential route for the Lightkeepers new discharge pipe has been identified, and it would likely connect to the same forced sewer main serving the Cohasset Sailing Club building, going out to Border Street," Sawchuk wrote. "Some plumbing inside the building would likely be rerouted to the outside in a different location, and a grinder pump unit would need to be installed."

The sewer commission chair said that he plans to detail "the costs for the installation, the recommended route, the presence and depth of ledge along the proposed route, the depth of the connection to the existing sewer pipe, the proposed location of the grinder pump (either inside the building or outside), the plumbing changes that may have to be made, along with a timetable for completion, and if a new filing will need to be made to the Conservation Commission to perform the work, and if the estimated cost of construction will trigger the need to go out to bid to perform the work.."

The chairman will report his plans to the rest of the sewer commission at the next meeting, which has yet to be scheduled, and will consider the board's recommendations.

In the meantime, Sawchuk responded to an email from former selectman and former Harbor Health Committee chair Karen Quigley, who sent an excerpt of a 2007 report on sewer options for the Lightkeepers House. The report explained some problems with the current septic system at the house; with the building on a rocky ledge and the septic system in the rear parking lot, the system can be overloaded with heavy usage. According to the report, the Board of Health recommended the Lightkeepers be hooked up to municipal sewer, and the sewer commission voted to do so; the Board of Selectmen also asked the hookup to be included in the 2008 budget.

Quigley said in an email that the hookup was included in the budget, but was "subsequently deleted due to lack of funds and lack of political will." She added that, "since the town has ordered residents, organizations and businesses to hook up to the sewer system, the town should also be required to hook up its property."

Sawchuk said in a phone call that while he has not yet spoken with the Lightkeepers Corporation, he spoke with the treasurer who said the board would be willing to pay for sewer usage charges. However, Sawchuk said he is planning to get quotes from various contractors to find "the least cost to everyone involved."

For now, Sawchuk is in the exploratory stage of the project and said he will have more updates once he meets with the sewer commission and Lightkeepers Corporation, and takes a look at the current septic system and plumbing himself. And while he did volunteer to cover the project's installation, Sawchuk is hoping the town or Lightkeepers will share some of the connection costs. The sewer commission chair said that he would take a step back from the project if he finds a contractor to do the work.

In the meantime, "I am progressing on getting the rest of the information together," Sawchuk said. "My value [in this project] is getting the red tape done, getting finances in order for the least cost to everyone involved, and ensuring that someone's going to do the maintenance of it."

A member of the Lightkeepers Corporation could not be reached for comment before deadline. Look for updates in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation

The nonprofit Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation was established in 1991 to renovate a former two-family light-keepers residence (no longer used as such because of automation of Minot Light some years before), and convert it into a function room for community use. The building is leased from the town, but is maintained and operated by the Lightkeepers Corporation.

The generosity of Cohasset residents and others provided the funds for renovation. Operating and maintenance expenses, and reserves for capital replacements or improvements, are recovered from rental of two apartments on the second floor, and from fees charged for use of the function room facilities.

AROUND TOWN

BC High award-winners

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Greetings!

Hello Cohasset. I hope that the past week has been a good one for the most part for all of you even with the rather damp weather we have been having. It seems like the week went by really fast on my end, maybe because of the holiday at the beginning of the week!

Be sure to share your good news and happenings with Around Town!

Rochester

Congratulations to David Patrick Toomey, a junior majoring in molecular genetics at the University of Rochester, who has been named to the dean's list for academic achievement for the 2012 spring semester. David, a resident of Cohasset, is the son of Mark D. and Sheila Toomey, and a graduate of Cohasset Middle High School.

BC High awards

William J. Kemeza, president of Boston College High School, announced the following students from Cohasset recently received special awards at an assembly to honor BC High undergraduates:

• Michael Fegreus, Class of 2013, won an Animation Club Award and a Stephen J. Collins Modern Language Award in French.

• Andrew Fontaine, Class of 2013, won an Excellence Award for Ethics/Social Justice and Latin IV Ovid.

• Robert Hillman, Class of 2013, won an Excellence Award in Ethics/Social Justice.

• Blair McGowan, Class of 2013, won Excellence awards in Ethics/Social Justice, Pre-Calculus and Spanish IV.

• Trevor S. Schramn, Class of 2013, won the Exelauno Latin III Award and one of the school's most prestigious awards, The Richard D. Reardon Award. The award is given each year in memory of Richard D. Reardon to a junior who through his life and activities has demonstrated a commitment to service and a concern for the well being of all people.

• Zachary Strecker, Class of 2013, won an Excellence Award in English III and the John J. Begley, S.J. Scholar Award. The John J. Begley, S. J. Scholar Award recognizes students who exemplify the values that define the life and career of Father John J. Begley, S.J., and who serve as models of the Graduate at Graduation that the school stresses to all its graduates. During his years as a teacher and scholastic at Boston College High School, Father Begley fostered among his students a sense of intellectual and cultural curiosity, encouraged leadership and responsibility, and cultivated a broad view of the world and humanity.

• William Gildea, Class of 2015, won Excellence awards in French II Honors and Geometry Honors. He was also a Gold Medal Laureat National Winner, finishing in the top 10th percentile in the National French Grand Concours Examination.

Congratulations all!

Tufts University

More than 3,000 students graduated from Tufts University on May 20, 2012, during the university-wide commencement ceremony. Graduates from the School of Arts and Sciences and the School of Engineering included Kelsey Bell of Cohasset, with a bachelor's degree in American studies.

Savannah

Cohasset residents recently graduated from the Savannah College of Art and Design. John Harrington earned a bachelor of fine arts degree in sound design. Caroline McElhinny earned a bachelor of fine arts degree in photography.

Play structure

The Carriage House Nursery School in the First Parish House on North Main Street has started the school year with a brand, new play structure for the students to use while in class throughout the year. A hard-working crew of volunteers from the retail division of Reebok assembled this structure in June. This crew donated their time in assisting the Carriage House after the school raised enough money at their "Come Play" Casino Night Fundraiser held in March. The Summer Program Preschool children had the pleasure of using the new structure throughout the summer and now, the staff would love for anyone to feel free to come and check it out, it really is a beauty! Also, the Carriage House has limited openings in some of the 2012/2013 classes, so try to stop in for more information.

Timely topic

The Cohasset Elder Affairs would like to invite the seniors in town to attend one and/or both of the following two September programs. On Sept. 12th, at 11 am, speakers both for and against the Nov 6th ballot question proposing legalization of doctor-prescribed suicide will be stating their case. Although Cohasset Elder Affairs nor, the town of Cohasset endorse neither side of this topic, it is important that seniors receive accurate and timely information in regard to this critical issue. To that end, CEA will host an information session featuring Patricia Stewart, Attorney with the Massachusetts Alliance against Doctor Prescribed Suicide and Jim Gross from The Death with Dignity Group. Each speaker will be allowed 20 minutes to present their points of view, followed by a 20 minute question and answer period. The Massachusetts "Death with Dignity" Initiative, also known as Question 2 will appear on the Nov. 6 general election ballot in Massachusetts.

This program will be presented at Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 N. Main St., followed by lunch at the center. Please call 781-383-9112 for reservations and/or transportation.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

SSC Community Voices has grown so much that this year we added an assistant conductor to help out with all of the duties involved in managing a successful choral ensemble. COURTESY PHOTO

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Music: The Great Equalizer

EVE MONTAGUE

SSC Community Voices is a non-auditioned chorus and no previous chorus experience is required. Commitment to a weekly rehearsal is requested, with rehearsals running one hour per week.

SSC Community Voices has just celebrated three years of ensemble singing, sharing favorite tunes such as "Here Comes The Sun," "Jump, Jive, and Wail" and "How Can I Keep From Singing?" with audiences throughout the South Shore. This chorus of adults and young adults started as a group of nine and has grown to almost 30 participants this past year. Our growth is due to word of mouth and our ever-increasing presence and performances in the community. In the past two months alone we presented our spring concert at South Shore Conservatory's Ellison Center for the Arts in Duxbury, sang at an art show in Plymouth, the North River Arts Festival in Marshfield, and at the Derby Street Shoppes in Hingham. In 2010, at the invitation of Representative Tom Calter and co-host Representative Jim Cantwell, we sang to a standing-room-only audience at the State House. We received such a warm welcome and were treated like music royalty with a private tour and lunch!

SSC Community Voices has grown so much that this year we added an assistant conductor to help out with all of the duties involved in managing a successful choral ensemble. Given our increasing numbers and interest from communities north of Hingham, we are starting a second SSC Community Voices this fall. On Sept. 19, SSC Community Voices, Too! will start rehearsing for their first concert on Dec. 5, 2012. I am deeply honored to be part of this exciting group. The most joyful part of my work has been seeing and hearing the ensemble come together and watching these singers create and establish friendships that go far beyond the one-hour rehearsals. Members look out for each other, check in when someone has been absent, and celebrate life events together. Together they have created a strong choral ensemble that is caring, committed, fun, and musical. By the way, SSC Community Voices is a group of singers, age 16 and older, with developmental delays. We welcome all singers of all abilities.

Music is truly the great equalizer. It is available to everyone without regard to age or ability. SSC Community Voices is a non-auditioned chorus and no previous chorus experience is required. Commitment to a weekly rehearsal is requested, with rehearsals running one hour per week. We rehearse 10 to 12 weeks in the fall and 14 to 16 weeks in the winter/spring, with 2 on-site concerts and other concerts as requested. The common bond of our singers is a love of music and a desire to share music in a community setting. Music, rehearsal CDs, and lots of good singing and fun are provided for all members. Having directed other creative arts programs prior to coming to South Shore Conservatory, I knew that very few opportunities existed for this population to participate in a performance-based ensemble after the age of 22. I personally knew a number of individuals who wanted to sing and share their music with others. It was a priority for me to develop this type of group for the folks that I just knew were out there waiting for this opportunity.

Eve Montague is director of creative arts therapies at South Shore Conservatory and founder and Director of SSC Community Voices. Rehearsals at our Duxbury Campus begin on Wednesday September 12, 7:00 pm. Our new group begins rehearsal on at 7 p.m. Wednesday Sept. 19. Call or email Eve Montague for more information, including full schedule and fee information: e.montague@sscmusic.org or 781-934-2731 x20.

CASP CORNER

Mark your calendar for Sept. 16

CASP (Cohasset Appalachia Service Project) Corner is a new feature column. CASP offers a special thanks to Mary Ford and her staff for giving us this opportunity. Below is a teen entry from one of our 2012 Journals:

"When I first signed up for ASP this year, I thought my schedule was going to be this: work for three hours, have a five-minute lunch break, work for three more hours and then go back to the center. But, although the schedule was like that in some ways, it was also very different. While fixing up their house I got to know the family really well. The grandmother was one of the wisest people I have ever met. She was like a human encyclopedia. She was also the personification of a sweet grandmother because, on our last day at her house, she got us all souvenir t-shirts and gave me a tiny teddy bear that said, "somebody in Logan, WV loves you." I almost burst into tears at how sweet the gesture was. The other person my crew really made a connection with was her 9-year-old grandson. He was just a ball of energy, with a big mouth and a good heart. Most of the funny and good memories we had were with him. It was so adorable seeing the bond he formed with the three boys in our crew. He even gave them nicknames like Smooth and Beaver Boy. He enjoyed seeing us so much that he was the first one to greet us in the morning and would help us as much as he could."

The CASP 2013 Trip is June 29 through July 7. An information meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 16, at the Second Congregational Church. The registration deadline for choice of companions is Oct. 1.

The first fundraiser will be at the Pumpkin Patch on North Main Street, opening Saturday, Oct. 6.

Art exhibit by Jan McElhinny

Jan McElhinny is an oil painter who resides with her husband in Cohasset. She is having a solo show at the Paul Pratt library titled "Pentimenti."

The show predominantly features her current work in abstraction. An artist reception will take place on Sept. 14, from 5 to 7 p.m. The show will be on view from Sept. 5 through Oct. 31.

A glimpse at Cohasset's seafaring history

Cocktail party celebrates opening

By Liz Fuller
correspondent

Much of this seafaring history will be on display at the Cohasset Historical Society during the month of September. Opening night of the exhibit will take place on Saturday, Sept. 8 at 6 p.m., with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres to remember Cohasset's Maritime History.

An exhibit at the Cohasset Historical Society will officially open on Sept. 8 chronicling the maritime history of Cohasset. The On the Rocks exhibit will highlight, according to the Historical Society, the "bustling activity during the Age of Sail (1780-1885) when over 160 ships were built, launched, and sailed from Cohasset's shores. There were four shipyards and 14 wharves and in 1845, Cohasset was the fourth largest fishing port in Massachusetts".

"The research for this exhibit was fascinating," said Lynne DeGiacomo of the Historical Society. "We will focus on the many shipwrecks in the waters off the coast of Cohasset." DeGiacomo said that her research took her from the maritime museum, located in Cohasset Village at Cohasset Village at 4 Elm Street4 Elm St., to further research online.

"We got a lot of information from the maritime museum from articles and archives. The most interesting part was learning the stories behind these voyages and shipwrecks, about the captains and their families, and their roots in Cohasset."

DeGiacomo said that the Historical Society was able to obtain newspaper accounts, letters, and journals from the museum about the captains and their families, illustrating what life was like at sea.

The documentation of the several hundred shipwrecks is presented on a blown up map of Cohasset's coast, each shipwreck represented with a different colored push-pin for each decade. The shipwrecks were comprised of, not only local vessels, but many foreign ships as well.

Because of the large number of shipwrecks, Captain Joseph Smith asked Congress in 1840 for a lighthouse to be built off the coast of Cohasset to help ships recognize their location and prevent them from hitting the rocks around the seaside town. But Congress refused to give Cohasset a lighthouse, saying it would be confusing to sailors as Scituate Light was already confusing, as it made sailors believe they were in Boston.

One especially interesting aspect of the exhibit is the diary of Drusilla Snow Percival, the wife of Captain John Peter Turner Percival, who embarked on a trade voyage on the vessel Vesta in October of 1857, along with the couple's two young daughters; a transatlantic trip that took the Percivals and the ship's crew to Gibraltar and Malta, where they abruptly sold the ship and found an alternative way back to Boston in July, 1858. Mrs. Percival's accounts of the voyage ranged from the weather and sea conditions, to bouts with illness, and how the children were faring throughout the trip.

Another interesting part of the exhibit deals with a family of sailors, the Collier family, from Scituate and Cohasset. The patriarch of the family, James Collier, captained several vessels. Collier had four sons, none of which he wanted to pursue a sailor's life. He taught each son a trade, but all four sons abandoned their jobs and followed in their father's footsteps and a calling to the sea. Son James, Jr. was considered one of the most distinguished sea captains.

Much of this seafaring history will be on display at the Cohasset Historical Society during the month of September. Opening night of the exhibit will take place on Saturday, Sept. 8 at 6 p.m., with cocktails and hors d'oeuvres to remember Cohasset's Maritime History.

For further information, call 781-383-1434 or visit CohassetHistoricalSociety.org or email Cohassethistory@yahoo.com.

The figurehead of the Henrietta Frances is made in the likeness of Mrs. Henrietta Frances Stoddard and is from the last mackerel schooner built in Cohasset, ca. 1883.

This temple vase was brought back from Japan in 1857 during Capt. Cabot's journey to Japan when it was starting to open up to the West during the Tokugawa Shogunate. It was used as ballast for the trip home.

SEPAC UPDATE

Great speakers lined up for school year

The Cohasset Special Education Parents Advisory Council has been hard at work this summer to support all parents and students. The board has attended voluntary Professional Development with Cohasset school staff and administrators. They have put together the 2012-13 speaker series and implemented a new monthly morning discussion coffees. In addition, SEPAC welcomes a new Student Service Director to Cohasset and says goodbye to a board member.

The entire board attended the Massachusetts Tiered System of Support. This was a two-day training session that detailed the new system of general education academic support for all Cohasset students. Also, the board attended an iPad training session. They were shown detailed applications for iPad uses in the Cohasset school setting that could also be used to further learning at home.

Cohasset SEPAC is also excited about the upcoming school year's speaker series. They have coordinated speakers for the first Tuesday of each month, who will inform families on the latest research concerning learning and parenting for typically developing children, as well as children with special needs. The speakers will help promote learning, understanding, acceptance and inclusion for all children in the schools and community. All presentations will take place at 7 p.m. at Paul Pratt Library.

First presentation

The first presentation will take place Tuesday, Sept. 11. Topic will be Massachusetts Tiered System of Support, the universal screening for every Cohasset student. This presentation will show how children are evaluated in Core Curriculum; and how staff will then use the indicators, policies and practices to ensure every student thoroughly understands the curriculum, through tiers of intervention. Cohasset's Director of Curriculum Louise Demas will be presenting. The presentation is free and open to all parents in Cohasset and neighboring communities.

The board has heard from Cohasset parents that they want a parent-to-parent time without staff/faculty to discuss special education needs, support each other with raising children and learn from one another. "We heard you," said SEPAC president Diane Herth. Starting in October, on the second Wednesday of each month, the board will host a coffee from 11 a.m. to noon at rotating homes. Check the online schedule www.cohassetsepac.org for location. Babies welcome. The first coffee will take place Oct. 10 at board member Kim Carvette's home at 20 Old Pasture Road.

Welcome aboard

The board welcomes new Student Service Director Lori Villani. Villani comes from the Arlington School district, where she was the assistant director. SEPAC looks forward to working with her and collaboratively supporting students and families. Sadly, the board says goodbye to longtime SEPAC member Claudia Russell. Russell was a board member and vice president/treasurer of SEPAC for two years. She was a valuable member of the team and will be missed.

For more information or to find speakers all over the South Shore, visit www.cohassetsepac.org

OUR VIEW

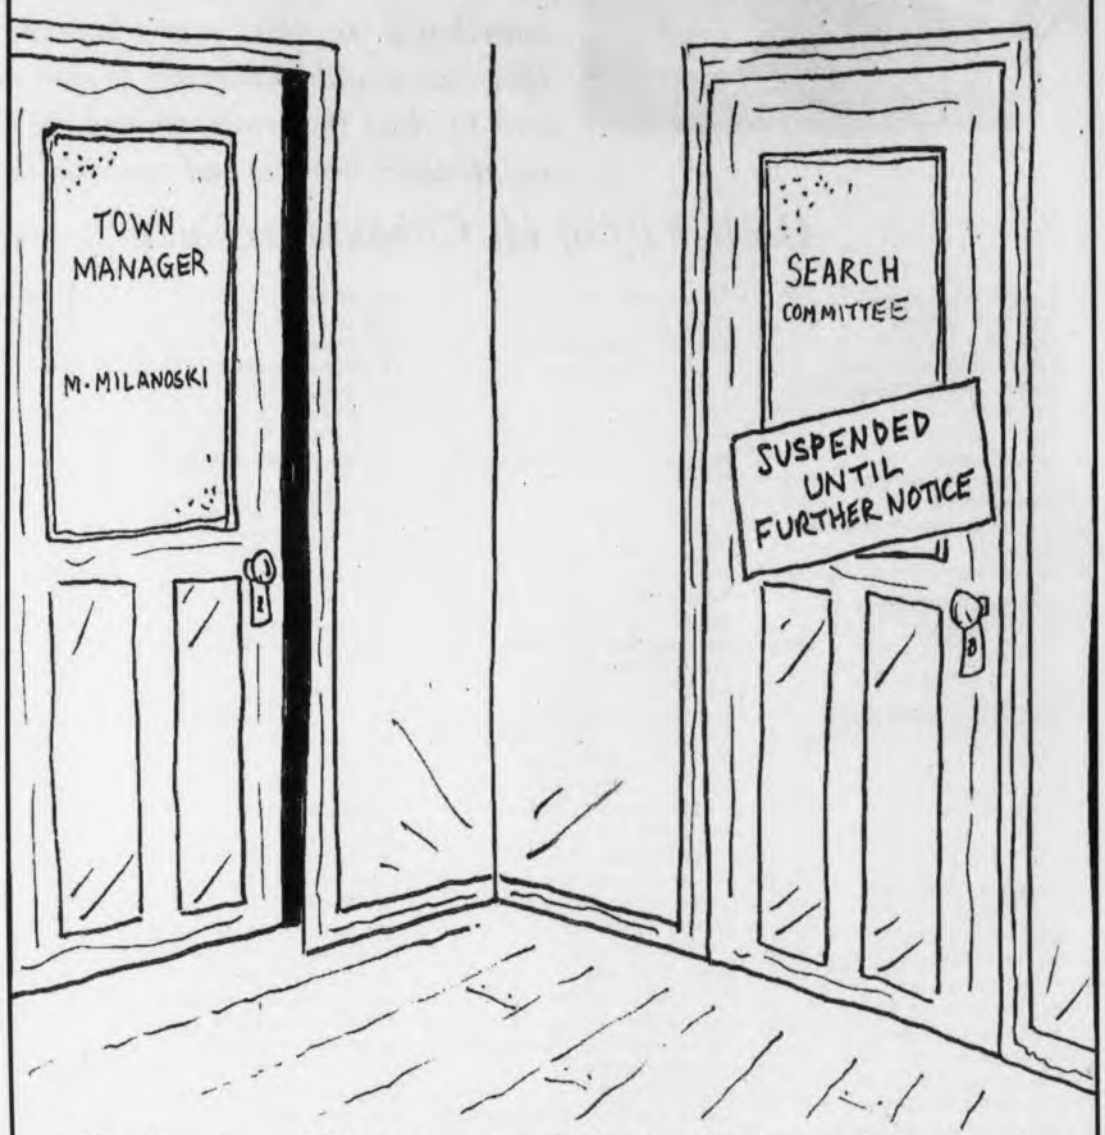
Supporting veterans

The anniversary of 9/11 is about to turn 11. We are proud to say that Cohasset continues its annual 9/11 observances at the flagpole on the Town Common. The ceremony is not long but serves as a solemn reminder of that tragic day that triggered two of America's lengthiest wars.

No matter what one's political views are, Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom, have dragged on and involved thousands of American servicemen and women both on the front lines, some for multiple deployments, and those making it possible to send our warriors overseas.

On a personal note, one of my sons was deployed to Iraq after the initial invasion in 2003. As a mother, I was searching for support. I had heard of support groups in Pembroke and Marshfield that were organized and sending care packages to the troops. I first called the Veterans Agent in my town Scituate who referred me to the Scituate VFW, which told me they would send my son a card. Needless to say I was disappointed. By the time our other son deployed four years later, my husband had led the effort to reconstitute the American Legion Post in Scituate, which has since been involved in helping to ensure that Scituate veterans – young and old and their families – are not overlooked and get the support they need.

Cohasset has a strong American Legion Post, Sons of American Legion Chapter and Women's Auxiliary, and a strong VFW Post. There is also a Cohasset Military Support Group. Cohasset's observances including 9/11, Veterans Day and Memorial Day show how much Cohasset cares about its veterans and their service to our country.



However, having a permanent Veterans Services Officer is still of paramount importance. It has been 15 months since Joe McElroy stepped down. Police Sgt. Garrett Hunt was supposed to serve as interim until June 30 when a new VSO was to be hired. We thank both men for their service and for serving Cohasset as VSO.

Many local men and women will be separating from the service in the months and years ahead. Both they and their families need to have access to services and information as to what is available for veterans. Aggressive outreach is also required. A VSO needs extensive knowledge of veterans' benefits and programs. Our veterans and their families should never feel as though their needs are invisible.

While we realize the Town Hall is in transition with multiple hires, we believe hiring a permanent VSO should have been at the top of the list. We are looking forward to — what, in our view, should be a major agenda item on Sept. 18 — when Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski has promised to provide Selectmen an update on the VSO plans.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Police praised for action on fireworks

I have followed the recent news coverage of Cohasset police seizing illegal consumer fireworks intended to be set off as part of a wedding celebration and wanted to both commend the police department for averting a potential disaster and reinforce a message that we try to convey each year around the Fourth of July. Consumer fireworks are inherently dangerous and the thousands of injuries that occur every year can be avoided if people would limit their enjoyment of fireworks to public displays put on by trained professionals.

There are so many incidents each year that illustrate the dangers of consumer fireworks. But one of the most poignant cases in memory happened this year in the Town of Pelham, New Hampshire, right over the border from Massachusetts. A family celebration turned into a nightmare when a child holding a sparkler set off boxes of fireworks in the house. Neighbors said it sounded like a bomb had gone off. The resulting fire injured 13 people ranging in age from eight months to 58 years, including a two-year-old boy who suffered severe burns. I am sure no one intended for that to happen. After all, the family had been putting on a fireworks display for years without incident.

Consumer fireworks are illegal in the Commonwealth. The state Fire Marshal and leaders in the fire service in Massachusetts have been strong in their opposition to making them legal. While the busiest days for the fire service are all around the July holiday and hospital emergency rooms must deal with the onslaught of fireworks injuries, we still fare better than states that allow the sale and use of consumer fireworks.

The 300 or so pounds of explosives seized in Cohasset might have been a very loud ending to the wedding or a tragic turn to an otherwise happy occasion. Thanks to appropriate police action, they were neither.

IMPORTANT UPDATE

Senior Center study: public survey

The town-wide survey on the proposed Senior Center project has been delayed. The online survey was going to be available on Sept. 15, but the date has been changed to Sept. 20. The town hired consultants from UMass Boston to create an electronic survey using the Survey Monkey format.

All Cohasset residents aged 18 and over will receive a postcard in the mail with log-in information and instructions to access the survey.

Internet access is available at the town library and at the Council on Aging office. Student volunteers will offer assistance to those who need help accessing the internet.

The survey's results are confidential and survey takers are not required to enter an email address or other personal information.

POLITICALLY SPEAKING

Holding Gov. Romney accountable for flip-flops

MATT GREGORY

...a facet of the presidential race that has been far less deliberated has been Romney's legacy as Governor of Massachusetts

When Mitt Romney was elected Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in 2002, I was 8-years-old, at the time caring more about second grade at the Joseph Osgood School than state politics; as a result, I personally do not remember much of Mr. Romney's tenure as our 70th governor. Apparently, neither does he. Over the past several months, the GOP Presidential candidate has either contradicted or outright denied many of the policies and ideologies put forth under his administration from 2002 to 2006, including stances taken concerning same-sex marriage advocacy and green energy investment. Such extreme flip-flopping, or "etch-a-sketch" behavior further clarifies Romney's image as a manipulative executive with little care about significant moral issues and even less about the state which served as his springboard to potential political eminence: Massachusetts.

Mitt Romney is currently unconditionally opposed to same-sex marriage; furthermore, he has stated that his stance has been unwavering throughout his political career: "I have the same view [on same-sex marriage] that I've had since running for office [his loss to Ted Kennedy in the 1994 Massachusetts Senatorial Election]." However, Massachusetts citizens may remember a different Romney. In a 1994 interview with the Bay Window newspaper, Romney responded to the question of whether or not he would support gay equality by stating: "...our society should allow people to make their own choices and live by their own beliefs. People of integrity don't force their beliefs on others, they make sure that others can live by different beliefs they may have." Romney concluded the interview by stating that he would be "better than Ted [Kennedy] for gay rights." However, towards the end of his governorship, Romney's policy shifted direction; he proposed the Protecting Religious Freedom bill to the Massachusetts legislature, which allowed Catholic orphanages to refuse to allow same-sex couples to adopt children, and after leaving office pledged support for the Defense of Marriage Act restricting marriage to one man and one woman. In 2012, Romney erased any doubts of his transformation by stating that "marriage itself is a relationship between a man and a woman." Says lobbyist Arlene Isaacson: "Once he became governor and had his eye on the White House, he totally flipped."

Moreover, green energy development, a focal point of Romney's gubernatorial agenda, has also fallen victim to his "etch-a-sketch"-esque ideological transformation. In 2003, Romney expressed his desire to "refocus [the Massachusetts energy trust fund's] assets...by focusing on job creation in the renewable energy sector." Furthermore, Romney established the $160 million Green Energy Fund to finance local businesses for the creation of clean energy projects; much of this funding was provided to corporations such as Konarka, which failed several years after receiving the money. Romney in 2007 also expressed his support for solar power, as reported by the North Andover Eagle-Tribune: "Romney...was pleased to find out the cost [for solar power] is dropping and affordable solar energy could be available..." The Eagle-Tribune also quoted Romney as stating, "incentives will foster technological breakthroughs that can speed up [clean energy development]." However, on his campaign website, Romney states: "'green' technologies are typically far too expensive to compete in the marketplace...The failure of windmills and solar plants to become economically viable...is a prime example." To read Mr. Romney's statement, "Obama has focused on an imaginary world where government-subsidized windmills and solar panels could power the economy," only five years after he told solar panel production workers, "You're helping to change the world," only further illustrates the unprecedented ideological shift that has occurred in the mind of a man who could be the next United States President.

Mitt Romney's lack of stability with regard to priorities and ideologies has been a topic of discussion throughout the Republican primaries and the summer leading up to the general election; however, a facet of the presidential race that has been far less deliberated has been Romney's legacy as Governor of Massachusetts. What does it say about a man's character that his crowning gubernatorial achievement, the establishment of universal healthcare coverage, has been his largest criticism of President Obama? Or that his promises to Massachusetts voters in 1994 and 2002 concerning support for same-sex marriage and a desire to develop green energy have been turned on their heads? Perhaps Romney altered his stances when he realized his potential for political opportunity at a higher level. Current Governor Deval Patrick wrote of Romney's time in the State House: "The impression he left with people here was he was more interested in having the job [of governor] than doing the job." Is that a quality we desire in our next president?

THOSE FARAWAY PLACES

Barcelona, Catalonia, Spain

MARY KENNEDY

Gaudi created the carving of the donkey on the main portal from life. Though he could have chosen one among the finest donkeys in Barcelona, he rejected them in favor of an old, broken-down animal owned by a woman who sold sand. COURTESY PHOTO

La Sagrada Familia is made by the people and is mirrored in them. It is a work that is in the hands of God and the will of the people. (Architect Antoni Gaudi)

Before there was even a Spain, there was a Catalonia, a sentiment very dear to the heart of every proud native resident in Barcelona, the Queen of the Costa Brava.

One story about Barcelona's beginning features Hamilcar Barca, leader of Carthage and father of the famed Hannibal (who walked his elephants over the Alps), founding the city some 300 years before the birth of Christ. The Carthaginians later named it Barcino in his honor. During the seven centuries when the Moors occupied Spain, Catalonians enjoyed a thriving maritime empire, achieving a distinct identity with their own lilting language (related to Provencal, the language of Southern France); and traditions and customs, which they continue to protect as fiercely today as they did then.

Proud of their independence, even after Spain became a nation in the 16th century, Catalonians often revolted against the central authority of Madrid. During Franco's dictatorship (1939-1975) Catalan identity and language were viciously suppressed. Streets were renamed, books burned and even their regional dance, Sardana, was outlawed. When the news of Franco's death was announced, people poured onto the streets, many celebrating liberation by linking their arms in the stately dance. Today, Catalan is proudly spoken, required learning in all schools, used in newspapers, and on radio and TV.

Barcelona is also home to one of the most brilliant architects of the 20th century, Antoni Gaudi, and to Europe's most controversial church, La Sagrada Familia (Cathedral of the Holy Family).

Barcelona is also home to one of the most brilliant architects of the 20th century, Antoni Gaudi, and to Europe's most controversial church, La Sagrada Familia (Cathedral of the Holy Family). Crammed with symbolism inspired by nature, combining both Gothic and Art Nouveau forms, the church, now a UNESCO World Heritage site, tells the life of Jesus and the history of the Roman Catholic faith. From the beginning, donations continue to pour in from the pockets of the people and not from the coffers of the Roman Catholic Church. This "wild and wonderful sandcastle has inspired both shrieks of horror and sighs of rapture" wrote one visitor.

Gaudi worked with few written plans, died suddenly by accident in 1926, and architects since then have continued the construction by guessing at his intentions. Some criticize the structure as "inauthentic kitsch," others view it as a sacred mission. One group of architects complains that "the construction has little to do with the spirit of Gaudi. It has more to do with building a tourist attraction." The response from another group: "Almost every cathedral has been the work of many people and over many centuries." Would Gaudi agree? (See above quote).

FOR THE RECORD

Random thoughts while running

GREGORY MATHIS

We're not out there to be shouted at, beeped at, and certainly not a target for whatever you can find from the car console to chuck at us.

My outdoor running routine began with a commitment this spring to leave the iPod at home and use the time pounding the pavement to quiet the mind and silence the noise coming through the earplugs.

While there wasn't loud music causing any distractions, the mind never really got quiet. Most runs were spent reflecting on the day's work, maybe an upcoming column, or calculating what bills needed to be paid when and what the balance would be. But there were certainly some random thoughts worth sharing with which you might identify.

There's a lot of trash on the side of the road. I don't know if this is true in your neighborhood, but my running routes are littered with trash. People who eat fast food seem to be the biggest offenders. A generalization for sure, but there's little doubt the bulk of trash I see originates from Wendy's, Dunkin' Donuts, McDonald's, Taco Bell and other fast food chains. Beer drinkers seem to be the next worse offender, which doesn't make sense. If I had 5 cents for every beer can or bottle I saw along the way... Other non-deposit beverage drinkers don't seem to hesitate to throw their empties out the window, but they really don't have the incentive of losing the 5 cents they already paid.

Sidewalks and streetlights are underrated. First and foremost, there's a lack of sidewalks for pedestrians (and yes, runners) to get from here to there. And the areas where you can find sidewalks you can usually find some kind of obstacle blocking it, like a car. I'm not quite sure when sidewalks became parking spaces, but apparently they have. Streetlights are fading as well. As towns continue to cut and cut, streets are getting darker and darker.

People can be mean. They should be nicer to runners. We're not out there to be shouted at, beeped at, and certainly not a target for whatever you can find from the car console to chuck at us. I've been hit with coins, bottles and other unidentified flying objects, all while I mind my own business.

It's a jungle out there. Coyotes have been known to roam the areas I run. I'm not sure if they're more apt to be on the move at dusk when I'm on the move, but I certainly try to be aware of my surroundings. While I might be aware, I'm quite sure I couldn't outrun a coyote. Then there are mosquitoes. I'm quite aware of the irony of risking mosquito-borne diseases in order to stay fit and healthy.

While there are many other random thoughts, there's always some point during the run when I ask myself why I'm doing this. The runs are difficult during those hot, hazy, humid days. Soon, the brisk air will be burning my lungs as I run on a cold, winter day. And it most definitely gets harder as you get older. I can say I'm not entirely sure why I lace up the sneakers and put my body through all that, but I do. At the very least, it gives me some quiet time to think.

Mariner election policy detailed

Between now and the Nov. 6 general election – on a space available basis — the Cohasset Mariner will publish a weekly Candidates' Corner and Politics column based on submissions from the candidates themselves or their campaign staff.

Candidates' Corner is available for announcements such as dates for coffees and meet-and-greets, as well as fundraisers. Announcements for Candidates' Corner will be limited to no more than 150 words per week from candidates. Submissions are subject to editing and will run on a space available basis. There is no guarantee of when and where the Candidates' Corner column runs.

Politics allows candidates to submit position statements on issues of relevance in the race. Statements should focus on the candidate's position and not addressing the opponent's position. Word limit for the Politics column is 250. Submissions are subject to editing and will run on a space available basis. There is no guarantee of when and where the Politics column runs. Submissions for the Politics column will not be accepted the week before the election.

Candidates may send submissions via email to editor, Mary Ford at: mford@wickedlocal.com; or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham. Deadline for submissions is noon Wednesday for that week's publication.

For questions about campaign advertising, call Claudia Oliver at 781-837-4519.

BRIEFLY

Paint collection days scheduled

Paint collection days will take place at the Recycling Transfer Facility on the last Saturday of the month through October, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Residents are encouraged to dry out latex paint using cat litter, sand or paint hardener, which can then be thrown out with regular trash. Empty cans may then be thrown into the tin can container.

Food Pantry needs donations

Cohasset Food Pantry is a 501 (c) (3) nonprofit, volunteer organization, located in the rear of Saint Anthony's Rectory at 129 South Main St. The pantry operates on charitable donations from Cohasset churches, private citizens, business and community organizations.

The Food Pantry may be reached by calling 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Leave a message and calls will be returned. The mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. It is open every Tuesday morning. Clients may come from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Donations may be left at the pantry before 9 a.m., on Tuesdays, or by contacting the Food Pantry. Donations may also be left at any Cohasset church on Sunday mornings. There are several Cohasset donation boxes located throughout the town, including St. Anthony Parish Hall, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Cohasset Police Station, Shaw's and Stop & Shop Supermarkets.

UPDATE

Open seats to be filled; applicants sought

Both the Housing Authority and Board of Health have vacant seats and are seeking applicants to fill them until the next Town Election. The Board of Selectmen will hold a joint meeting with the respective boards, which will take place on Sept. 18, to make the appointments. Those appointed would fill the seat until the annual Town Election when they could run to fill the remainder of the terms.

Those interested in applying to either boards should send a letter of interest to the Board of Selectmen's office: 41 Highland Ave., or email Tracey Connors-Kelly at: tconnorskelly@townofcohasset.org

Applications are due by Thursday, Sept. 13.

Volume 38 - Report No. 35 August 31, 2012

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate during the week of August 27-31.

Beacon Hill Roll Call reports local representatives' roll call attendance records for the 2012 session through August 31.

The House has held 194 roll call votes. Beacon Hill Roll Call tabulates the number of roll calls for which each representative was present and voting and then calculates that number as a percentage of the total roll call votes held. That percentage is the roll call attendance record.

Thirteen quorum roll calls, used to gather a majority of members onto the House floor to conduct business, are also included in the 194 roll calls. On quorum roll calls, members simply vote "present" in order to indicate their presence in the chamber. When a representative does not indicate his or her presence on a quorum roll call, we count that as a roll call absence just like any other roll call absence.

Only 35 percent or 56 of the 159 House members have perfect 100 percent roll call attendance records.

The worst roll call attendance record belongs to Rep. Harold Naughton (D-Clinton), who missed 98 roll calls (48.9 percent roll call attendance record). Naughton missed the roll calls while on active duty in Afghanistan as a Captain with the United States Army Reserve. The second and third worst records belong to Reps. Charles Murphy (D-Burlington), who missed 81 roll calls (58.2 percent roll call attendance record) and Harriett Stanley (D-West Newbury), who missed 60 roll calls (69.0 percent roll call attendance record). Stanley's absences were because of an illness. Murphy did not return our repeated phone calls and e-mails asking the reason he missed so many votes. missed so many votes.

Rounding out the top ten worst records are Reps. Robert Koczera (D-Springfield), who missed 28 roll calls (85.5 percent attendance); Geraldine Creedon (D-Brockton), who missed 24 roll calls (87.6 percent attendance); John Binienda (D-Worcester), who missed 23 roll calls (88.1 percent attendance); Marc Lombardo (R-Billerica), who missed 22 roll calls (88.6 percent attendance); Jay Kaufman (D-Lexington), who missed 21 roll calls (89.1 percent attendance); Carlos Henriquez (D-Boston), who missed 20 roll calls (89.6 percent attendance); and Byron Rushing (D-Boston) and John Fernandez (D-Milford), who both missed 16 roll calls (92.2 percent attendance).

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES' 2012 ROLL CALL ATTENDANCE RECORDS

The percentage listed next to the representative's name is the percentage of roll call votes for which he or she was present and voting. The number in parentheses represents the number of roll calls that the representative missed.

SELLING A CHILD (H 1308) - The House gave initial approval to a bill that would impose up to a five-year prison sentence on anyone who trades, purchases or sells a minor child. The measure also increases from up to one year in prison to up to 2.5 years in prison the penalty for concealing the death of a child. The measure also strikes a section of the current law that applies the concealment penalty only to a child "born out of wedlock."

MALE BREAST CANCER (H 4019) - The House and Senate approved a measure designating the third week in October of each year as Male Breast Cancer Awareness Week to raise awareness of the occurrence of breast cancer in men and to encourage regular screenings. Only final approval is needed in each branch prior to the measure going to Gov. Deval Patrick.

FLAGS AT HALF MAST (H 1749) - With September 11 just around the corner, awaiting further House action is a bill that would require the state flag to be flown at half mast annually on that date in memory of the thousands who perished. The measure was given initial approval by the House in December. The same bill in 2010 was given initial approval by the House but it remained in a committee and eventually died.

Students reflect on Boys State program

By Jenny Magruder
Correspondent

Drew Nahill found the program beneficial because he could express his opinions. COURTESY PHOTOS

Matt Gregory hopes to continue studying politics in college, and is also interested in pursuing it as a career.

The American Legion Boys State program was started in 1935 in Illinois to help students understand how state and local governments work. Today, Boys State is represented in every state except Hawaii. High school juniors are selected to participate each year.

This year, the Massachusetts Boys and Girls State programs were held at Stonehill College. Cohasset High School chose two representatives to attend Boys State: Matt Gregory and Drew Nahill. Both are now seniors whose academic standing last year made them perfect candidates for the program. The George H. Mealy Post 118 of the American Legion and Sons of the American Legion Squadron 118 sponsor the program locally.

On June 16, Gregory and Nahill headed to Stonehill for the six-day event. The program was scheduled with activities that would not only help the high school students to learn about politics at the state level, but also improve their public speaking skills and instill the core values of citizenship. These activities included municipal meetings, party conventions, a question-and-answer session with Governor Deval Patrick, and classes. The boys also had time for fun, as they participated in different recreational activities such as basketball and football, and had a dance at the end of the week with Girls State.

Boys State was truly a memorable learning experience for both Gregory and Nahill. During the program, Gregory ran for public office at the local and state level, and he was elected as town Selectman and State Senate Minority Leader. He lists some of the important lessons that he learned from these elections, "I ran for a high office, US Senator, and promptly lost the election, so I was able to learn the skill of abruptly changing direction, maintain flexibility, and adapting to succeed in a different place than expected," he recalled.

Nahill believed that the program was incredibly beneficial for allowing him to express his own political opinions. He states, "Boys State gave me a political voice that I have never had before (not yet turned 18), and to experience voting and voicing my political opinion allowed me to better understand the ideas that our nation is founded upon."

Although Nahill hopes to study economics in college rather than political science, he still found the Boys State program to be educational and rewarding. His most memorable experience on the trip came during the question-and-answer session with Governor Patrick. "When a member of Girls State asked the governor a question, he made the point that he has little to no control over the issue that the girl addressed," Nahill said. "For the first time, I realized how much pressure our nation puts on government heads to instill change when in reality, they don't have as much power as we think."

Gregory does hope to continue studying politics in college, and is also interested in pursuing it as a career. He states, "I have seen and participated in government decision making, and reflecting on my experience, I realize that I have gleaned a true understanding of the nature of politics at any level, and I have discovered that while its mission is often obstructed by various diversions, the purpose of government it to serve the public good, and it is an institution in which I hope to participate as I grow older."

Thomas Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, has helped head up the effort to send Cohasset students to Boys State for many years. He said the program is very worthwhile for those who attend, and the Legion groups are proud sponsors.

Wigmore said principals are contacted in the late winter or early spring for candidates and only students with a genuine interest in government and politics are considered.

Wigmore said it has been several years since Cohasset sent a girl to Girls State; he hopes that will change next year.

PUSHING THE EDGE

What I did over the summer

GLENN MANGURIAN

It's back to school time. Remember when your first assignment in the fall was to write a paper describing what you did over the summer. I can imagine a number of interesting essays from familiar people as an assignment for Miss Manning's fourth grade class. Here is a sample.

Dear Miss Manning,
I maxed out my credit card this summer. Luckily, I met a nice foreign kid who lent me some money at a good rate.
Your audacious student, Barack Obama

Dear Miss Manning,
I hosted a tea party for some new friends but no one showed up. Do you think it was those "flip-flops" that I wear?
Respectfully, Willard "the Mittster" Romney

Dear Miss Manning,
I wasn't able to travel this summer. I spent most of the time in Plymouth. But, I got lots of stories for "show and tell." Also, I got a brand new orange suit to wear. Hope you like it.
Your "partner in crime," Jimmy Bulger

Dear Miss Manning,
I did a lot of shopping with my mom. By the way, my mom signed me up for a modeling course. It seems a little boring just walking around.
Gisele Bündchen

Dear Miss Manning,
I looked in the mirror and liked what I saw. My mom wanted me to get a new haircut, but I think I've got the greatest hair in the world.
Donny Trump
PS. I can make you a great deal on a tree house.

Dear Miss Manning,
I went to visit some of my Native American relatives. Unfortunately, we could not locate them. Will you endorse me for student council this fall?
Lizzy Warren

Dear Miss Manning,
I learned how to repair an old truck. It might be helpful when I get older.
"Downtown" Scotty Brown

Dear Miss Manning,
At your suggestion I took a course on public speaking. I know you think it might help me later in life. I'm not so sure.
Tommy Menino

Dear Miss Manning,
I had a "bummer" summer. My dad caught me telling a lie about my Little League team. It wasn't a big lie. I was just sort of stretching the truth.
Roger Clemens

Dear Miss Manning,
I tried swimming to Bumpkin Island. About three quarters of the way there I got tired and didn't think I could make it. I decided to swim back to shore. Maybe next summer.
Michael Phelps

What did you do over the summer?

Coakley updates open meeting law regulations

Selectmen and School Committee members might have a harder time claiming they didn't know better after running afoul of the Open Meeting Law as new finalized regulations laid out by Attorney General Martha Coakley state that "deliberate ignorance" is akin to deliberately setting out to violate the law.

The state's top law enforcement officer finalized two Open Meeting Law regulations on Tuesday seeking to add greater clarity and guidance to the rules that govern how municipal and executive office boards and commissions can hold meetings. The law specifically exempts the Legislature from the Open Meeting Law.

Coakley's finalized regulations clarifies that an "intentional violation" of the law comprises acts intended to violate the law, carried out with "deliberate ignorance," or done after being informed by a court or the attorney general that the action violates the Open Meeting Law.

Coakley also updated the regulations for how members of public bodies can participate in meetings remotely, making clear that local boards of selectman can set consistent restrictions for remote participation in public meetings.

OCT. 15 DEADLINE

Cultural Council seeks funding proposals

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth.

Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to council spokesperson Sarah Wood Torrey, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset – including exhibits, festivals, field trips, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures.

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state Legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

This year, Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $3,870 in grants. Previously funded projects included South Shore Art Center's annual Festival on the Common, Cohasset Recreation Department's summer concert series and Cohasset Dramatic Club's musical theater productions.

For specific guidelines and complete information on the Cohasset Cultural Council, call Sarah Wood Torrey at 781-383-3493 or email CohassetCulture@gmail.com. Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available online at www.mass-culture.org/Cohasset. Application forms are also available at the Cohasset Town Hall and Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Ultimate lawn party for a great cause

Think the game of croquet died with Queen Victoria? Think again. It is alive and well and hilariously competitive at the annual Croquet Classic in Cohasset on Saturday, Sept. 22. It is the most fun you can legally have on someone's front lawn and it is all to support pediatric programs at South Shore Hospital.

The Friends of South Shore Hospital LINKS group invites you to join them for the ultimate lawn party at a private, waterfront home in Cohasset. Croquet is the main attraction, but a raffle with great prizes like Patriots tickets, a wonderful spread of gourmet food and adult beverages, and a relaxed and entertaining atmosphere also highlight the event. The point is—you don't have to know how to play croquet or even step on the croquet court to have a great time!

The LINKS members are young professionals with families of their own who live and work on the South Shore. They hold multiple events each year to raise funds in support of pediatric programs at South Shore Hospital. To register for the Croquet Classic and obtain additional details, please log onto southshorehospital.org/events or call 781-624-4170.

Ready for some football

Regular season opener a source of excitement

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Football players all over the high school landscape are ready and raring to put on the pads and helmets this weekend and finally get to play some games that count.

It is a sentiment shared by the Cohasset football team as much as any other.

"We're excited on a number of different levels," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "The seniors are kicking off their last season. We've had a long pre-season. We've had a couple of scrimmages, but when you start hitting people for real it's a good feeling. The kids are really excited. It's nice to open at home."

Cohasset hosts Quincy tonight at 7 p.m.

Last year, the Skippers opened their season with a 33-16 win at Quincy on the way to a 6-4 campaign that closed with a three straight wins, including Abington and Hull.

The Skippers also beat Rockland on the road.

The slate this season includes road trips to Scituate, Abington, Sandwich and defending South Shore League champion Mashpee.

The Skippers also host Hingham in Week Two, Sept. 14 at 7:30 p.m.

As for the preseason, Afanasiw said it went well.

"We had three game scrimmages," he said. "We opened with Duxbury. It was a good experience. If they were the A Team, I'd say we were the B. We took away some good things to work with."

Next up was South Shore Vocational.

"That went nicely," Afanasiw said. "Then we had Whitman-Hanson. It was a good challenge physicality-wise. In a way it was a good way to end the pre-season. The kids know they have to work harder, match the physicality. We've had good practices this week. There's been

Not resting on laurels

New season means new challenges

By Tom Hinkley
The Patriot Ledger

Field hockey teams typically have to wait until late November to gain tournament experience, but Scituate and Cohasset already have some under their belts.

Nikki Begnal and Zoe Ryan each scored twice Monday as Scituate defeated Cohasset, 4-1, to capture its own season-kickoff tournament for the third consecutive year.

While Cohasset may have wound up on the losing end of the tournament final, coach Laura Giuliano believes her team will also reap the benefits of quality competition this early in the season.

"This is a great opportunity to play a really strong team and see where we are," said Giuliano, who has to replace two graduated All-Scholastic midfielders – Kayla Orner (7 goals, 8 assists, 15 points) and Sage Stebbins (2-15–17). "We held our own. Our girls played awesome, so I'm really excited about the season having played this game."

Cohasset spent most of the afternoon trying to clear the ball out of its own end, and goalie Caroline Evans turned away 15 of 19 shots. The only goal for Cohasset (1-1) was scored by Christina Tedeschi, who managed to poke one home out of a crowd in front of the cage.

Cohasset's offense had been in full swing in Sunday's 4-0 first-round win over Marshfield.

Rosie Cipolla scored twice in the win, while Katy Gilman and Kelsey McCunney also scored for Cohasset.

"It's only our second game of the season and we have a lot of new pieces," Giuliano said. "We have a lot of talented freshman and sophomores that are playing a lot, and there's a learning curve there."

Cohasset hopes to follow up last year's run to the Div. 2 South Sectional final (a 17-2-3 campaign that ended with a loss to Canton) with another successful season. Giuliano is pleased with what she's seen so far.

"Every season is a little dif-

Skippers net wet win

Opening day good for Cohasset

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

A year ago, the Cohasset boys soccer team found itself forced to come from behind to salvage a 2-2 tie on a wet day in Abington for the team's season opener.

The Skippers' 2012 campaign opened in a similar fashion to the 2011 opener in a couple of ways, but had one big difference.

The similarities came from the opponent and the weather, as it was another very wet afternoon.

From there it went uphill as Cohasset got a pair of goals from Nick Tangherlini in a 5-1 win on Tuesday.

Anthony Nahill, Ryan McKeon and John Mills also scored and Alex Kent notched an impressive assist in the win.

"It was a good win for us," Cohasset coach Jim Willis said. "They tied us twice last year and only graduated two kids. It's a good start."

Tangherlini, the team's top scoring returner provided the spark with his two goals, while Cohasset's defense played well, allowing just the one goal late in the game.

"We let up one goal when it was 5-0," Willis said. "The defense played well. They made a mistake late and let Pat (goalie Pat Federle) hang on the late goal, but played well. Pat did a great job in net."

Willis praised his team, which played without captain Nick Brown, who was out with an injury.

"Junior, Brendan O'Connell was phenomenal on defense," Willis said. "He was possessing well. Alex Kent had a great assist on the John Mills goal. It was a good test for us. The rain doesn't bother you as much when you're winning."

Cohasset played Carver yesterday and will face Norwell on Monday.

Willis is expecting a battle every game.

"Carver has had the same two strong players in the middle who have been there since they were freshmen," he said Wednesday night. "They always play us tough. Everyone does. This is a competitive league. Anyone can be very tough any day."

INSIDE THE 6 SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

The 2012 preseason poll

With insight from a World Cup champion and world class trainer

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

Welcome back to the third year of the Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings. Each week, I'll rank the top six boys and six girls teams in the region. With a number of players moving on to the college level, there's a lot of parity on the South Shore this fall. But before we get into the preseason rankings, I wanted some insight as to what it takes to become a better player and have a successful season.

There's only so much training a player can do to prepare for their high school season, or is there? Teams got back on the field nearly two weeks ago to prepare for the fall, and only time will tell if these players trained hard throughout the year to help guide their team to a state title. We caught up with David Copeland-Smith, the director of Beast Mode Soccer USA, Elite 1 on 1 Technique Training. Copeland-Smith, who is also a European UEFA 'A' Licensed coach, has trained some of the best in the game, including Aston Villa and Ireland midfielder Stephen Ireland, Olympic gold medalist Abby Wambach, and New Zealand defender and two-time WPS champion Ali Riley.

"The best offseason training is specific to the individual player. However, I always tell my players to stay 80 percent fit in the offseason. This way it's so much easier to get back to 100 percent rather than if you've been doing nothing for two months," he said. "For soccer players, I like them to do ball-related interval training. This way you're killing two birds with one stone. Some will always use the excuse of 'I didn't have time' but these days that is no excuse. With Tabata (high-intensity interval training), you can get a great soccer related workout in only four minutes, yes, four minutes."

What's the most important drill or tactic to work on during the offseason, and even during the season?

"Speak to your coaches. Ask them to be brutally honest. Find out what you need to work on and do it," Copeland-Smith said. "Dedicate an hour a day to working on your weakness. After 60 days, that's 60 hours. It's impossible to not improve."

Nikki Washington, who won two NCAA National Championships at the University of North Carolina, was part of the U.S. team that won the 2008 FIFA U-20 Women's World Cup, and played professionally with the Boston Breakers and Chicago Red Stars, also weighed in with her thoughts about preparing for the high school season.

"During the season, my main focus was the team and maintaining health and fitness. There were limited opportunities to consistently work on specific aspects of my game that I wanted to improve," she said. "The things I worked on during the offseason were always directly related to the past season. If my crossing wasn't great during the season, in the offseason I was working on my crosses. I evaluated myself with the help of my coaches and worked on the things we decided needed to get better. The best part of working on things on my own meant I could add my own twist to make it more enjoyable. I love music, so I would always bring speakers out to the fields with me. And do something that makes you uncomfortable, like not using your dominant foot for a whole training session, then you know you are improving."

With all the advice and insight from two of the best in the game, we now turn our attention to the preseason rankings. And in just a few days, we'll see which players and teams put in the training in the offseason to prepare for 2012. Here are the rankings:

Boys

1. Weymouth – No doubt about it. The Wildcats are the team to beat this season. They're loaded despite losing their starting keeper. They will command the Bay State Carey this season, and then try to shake off last year's early postseason exit.

2. Marshfield – With the return of a lethal combination up top and a solid midfield and keeper, the Rams are the early favorites to contend with Sandwich in the Atlantic Coast League.

3. Hingham – The defending Patriot League champs are tough to gauge this year. The Harbormen have speed and depth, two key components to a successful season, but can they remain consistent. That's the big question mark.

4. Norwell – Powered by a top defender and experience in goal and in the middle, the Clippers need to remain consistent in the final third to continue to stay in the top six this year. That shouldn't be an issue.

5. Duxbury – It's too early to tell just what the Dragons will bring to the table. With a new head coaching staff, it may take time for the Dragons to form cohesiveness on the field. But as we've seen in past seasons in Duxbury, the Dragons are never to be overlooked.

6. Silver Lake – Big question at the Lake: can this year's team, one that went unbeaten in 14 straight to open last season before conceding Patriot League title to Hingham, rebound from the loss of 14 seniors.

On the bubble: Hanover, Braintree, Scituate, Rockland

Girls

1. Marshfield – The defending Atlantic Coast League champions bring back a deep, heavily recruited senior class from a team that went to the D.1 semis a year ago, only losing twice during the regular season.

2. Duxbury – A year after reaching the D.1 South Sectional finals, the Dragons are back and looking sharp yet again. The veterans on this team have plenty of varsity and tournament experience. Expect the Dragons to go deep again.

3. Plymouth North – Just missing out on the ACL title last fall, the Eagles return with a new look, now under the direction of Head Coach Dennis Azevedo. The former Blue Eagles girls' coach prior to Eric Foley, Azevedo's leadership is enough to bring this team to the top of the ACL. Add the experience and star power on the field, and the Eagles are poised for a successful season.

4. Pembroke – Having the Titans at the No. 4 slot after they missed out on the tournament a year ago may be a head scratcher to some, but this year's group of seniors have played consistently since freshman year and have legitimate talent.

5. Weymouth – Despite losing key all-star starters, the Wildcats have the ability to reload, and they seemed to have filled in the gaps.

6. Norwell – The departure of a pair of Division 1 college players will hurt the Clippers, but with keeper Bridget Conway, who committed to Boston University, and a rock-solid defense, it'll only take a goal or two to win games this season.

On the bubble: Hingham, Braintree, Abington, Plymouth South

2011 Final Rankings:
Boys: 1. Silver Lake, 2. Hingham, 3. Weymouth, 4. Marshfield, 5. Norwell, 6. Duxbury
Girls: 1. Marshfield, 2. Duxbury, 3. Norwell, 4. Weymouth, 5. Plymouth North, 6. Scituate

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

SOCCER

Local squad heads to championships

For the second consecutive year the U14 Massachusetts Premier Soccer (MPS) Lady Crusaders, featuring players from Scituate and Cohasset have earned an invitation to the Super-Y North American Championship tournament.

The USL Super Y-League Championships is the premier event of the summer for the Super Y-League. After competing during the regular season from April to August, the top teams from across North America convene at the IMG Soccer Academy in Bradenton Florida in December to battle for the championship.

The Lady Crusaders, comprised of a select group of girls from the Massachusetts and Rhode Island, along with their sister team the 2012 Massachusetts State Champion MPS Renegades, and the 2012 New Hampshire State Champion Seacoast United Soccer club will all represent New England in the tournament.

After months of hard work and extremely competitive league matches across New England and Canada, the Lady Crusaders season came down to the final week where, in the 90+ degree August heat, they achieved close victories over determined teams from Vermont and Maine to edge out out Ottawa, Ontario Canada in the standings and advance to the national tournament.

Coach Gavin MacPhee added, "I am very proud to be taking the U14 Lady Crusaders to Super-Y Nationals for the second year running. The girls success is entirely down to hard work and effort and they deserve the opportunity to compete against some of the top teams in the USA and Canada."

The Lady Crusaders team members are:

- Kelly Blanchard, Amelia Burke, Nicole Geraghty, and Grace Thomas of Bridgewater, Noelle Henderson, Kaitlin Brown, Alyssa Rosen, Julia Sandquist, and Alex Stockman of Walpole, Emily Damrell and Kaitlin Forsyth of Scituate, Madeline Smith of Rhode Island, Abby Osmanski of Cohasset, and Sarah Crofts of Medfield.

BLACK JACKS LACROSSE

Tryouts are next three weekends

Tryouts for the 2013 Black Jacks Club Lacrosse Teams will be held the next three weekends.

When: Sun: 9/9, Sun: 9/16, & Sun: 9/23

Where: Ryan Flannery Field, 72 Ann Vinal Road, Scituate (at the Hatherly Elementary School).

Time: 4:00 - 5:30 pm 7/8 Grade ~ 5:30-7:00 pm High School

Cost: $75 includes numbered jersey

Register:
21LACROSSE.COM

2013 Teams are

Jr. Black Jacks (7th/8th grade)

9th Grade White Team

10th Grade Red Team

11th Grade Black Team

All prospective players must attend at least two of the three tryout dates.

The Black Jacks are not like most of the other clubs in Eastern Massachusetts, as they are are a small boutique program and plan to keep it that way because it is what's best for our players. We take pride in knowing every one of our players and in most cases, their parents.

We work hard to develop each Black Jack into a more complete player by improving his "Lacrosse IQ". We expose our players to real-game situations during practice so they will better understand the game and are able to react to any situation they may encounter. We take the time during these practices to stop and correct players, making it a teachable moment for all.

We have 10 summer practices and up to 6-8 fall practices (weather and schedule permitting) of in depth 'team' practices.

Who are we looking for? We are looking for players who not only have a great skill set, but also want to improve their game and understand there is always room for improvement. If we had to pick between two players; one a great player with a poor attitude, and one less skilled player with a great attitude, we will take the great attitude every time.

Registration questions please call Andrea Kinnealey at 617/828-8200 or register now. Visit www.21lacrosse.com a lot of heart and gumption."

With a young squad, Cohasset will be tested and its fortunes could be defined by a group of players who have the opportunity to step up.

"We have three or four established players," Afanasiw said. "Shane Haggerty and Chris Haggerty are a couple of kids who are expected to play big roles. Then there are kids like Rocco Laugelle who has good speed and vision. He's a receiver, a defensive back and a backup quarterback. He's a little of everything. We'll see how he steps up.

"We've got the Gillis brothers, Timmy (TB) and Ryan (FB) getting reps. Timmy is getting his first varsity experience. Ryan has some. We'll rely on both of them. We'll see if they have it. It really is an X-Factor."

Another player who could contribute is Christian Davis.

"Christian has great feet and great hands," Afanasiw said. "He could be the guy to return a kickoff or a punt for a touchdown any time. We'll see how he'll do. There's a lot to be petered out the next several months. The kids have good attitudes. They've been coming together as a team. I'm excited."

ferent, and each season is unique and you can't sit back on your laurels," she said. "We have plenty of new players and plenty of returning players. Our kids are really talented and they get it. We just have to jell as a team and come together.

"I'm never happy about losing, but I liked how we played."

In their most recent action, Cohasset beat Carver 8-1 on Wednesday.

Gilman scored four goals, while Cipolla added a pair and Allie Leahy scored.

"They're moving the ball in the circle," Guiliano said. "Even in the Scituate game they did."

A few players who have been playing well in the early going have been Mackenzie Axelson at center-midfield and Kathryn Dunn in the central defense.

"They've been standouts," Guiliano said. "We're building on that. Hopefully we don't have too far to go. I'm optimistic for the season. Every season is unique. We know we can't rest on our laurels. We have to be constantly moving forward."

John B. Millard

John B. Millard

COHASSET – John Bidwell Millard, 80, of Cohasset MA died Aug. 28, 2012.

He was born in Newton, Jan. 6, 1932, the son of Violetta Bidwell and Norman R. Millard; and the brother of Norman R. Millard Jr., all of whom predeceased him.

He grew up in Newton, attended Hebron Academy in Maine and graduated from Harvard College in 1954, having majored in Physical Sciences. An NCAA champion and one of the five fastest freestyle swimmers in the world, he was invited to participate in the Olympic Trials in California in 1952, but declined because he had to work to earn tuition. After serving in the U.S. Army in New Jersey, he immediately joined Polaroid Corporation in Cambridge, MA where he worked with great pleasure for 40 years in Engineering Quality Control and Reliability. As George Bernard Shaw said, "Happy is the man who makes a living by his hobby," and John did just that, as photography was his lifelong interest from the age of 12. He was granted three patents, including one that moderated the exposure of bright snow and beach scenes to prevent overexposure. Polaroid leased this patent to major SLR camera companies around the world. John studied with Josef Karsh and Ansel Adams at Yosemite and won many photographic prizes including three Best of Show awards at the Quincy Art Festival. Upon retiring, he established Custom Imaging, a small company through which he restored photographs. He was the United States representative to the International Standards Organization (ISO) Committee on Exposure, a member of the Society of Photographic Scientists and Engineers, an avid member of the Cohasset Golf Club and president of the Old Goats.

He was the extraordinary and loving husband of Elizabeth (Betsy) (Jockers) Millard; and the father of a son, Stuart M. Millard of Scituate and his wife Edith, and a daughter, Janice Millard Nykyforchyn of Waterford, CT and her husband John. He is also survived by two step-daughters, Lauren Alemian Saleski of Hingham and her husband Stephen, and Jennifer Alemian Kinscherf of Cohasset and her husband Robert. Eight surviving grandchildren include Christine, Michael and Danielle Nykyforchyn; Katherine, Michael and Kristin Saleski; and Carly and Richard Kinscherf.

He had a deep and abiding love for, and tremendous pride in, each member of his extended family and was truly beloved in return. All who knew John will recall his quiet modesty, his keen intellect, his love of laughter and his generous and kindly, non-judgemental spirit. He always made time to help others, whether to fix a computer glitch or find a pair of errant eyeglasses.

A memorial service was held Tuesday, Sept. 4 at 4 p.m. at the First Parish in Cohasset Unitarian Univeralist Meeting House on Cohasset Common, to be followed by a celebratory reception across the street, 25 North Main St., at the Parish House.

Donations in John's memory may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, whose loving team made John's last weeks so comfortable, 30 Resevoir Park Dr., Rockland, MA 02370.

Ruth Gilbert

Ruth Gilbert

LYNNWOOD, WA. – Ruth Paula (Capone, Moon) Gilbert, age 75, went to be with our Lord on Monday, August 27, 2012 in Lynnwood, WA. She was born on January 7, 1937 in Boston, MA and raised in Cohasset, MA. After graduating from Cohasset High School in 1956, she became a member of the retail clerks union as a cashier at the local A & P and continued as a retail clerk throughout her adult life. Ruth married Dennis E. Moon (deceased) in 1964 living in Seattle until 1972. The family moved to Blaine, WA where Ruth and her family settled there for many years, raising four children. She married Gene Gilbert (deceased) in 1993. Ruth and Gene enjoyed splitting their time between living in Bellingham, WA and their place in Yuma, AZ. Ruth was an avid collector of antiques and colorful glassware. She was a wonderful, supportive and involved mother, loving grandmother and great grandmother.

She is survived by her daughter Ava Goodman and her husband Glenn of Anchorage, AK, son Jay Moon of Blaine Washington, and ex daughter-in-law Debi Moon of Spokane, Jill Moon and her fiancé Jesse Navarro of Lynnwood, WA, granddaughters Tazia Moon and Danei Moon of Spokane, WA, grandson Grant Goodman of Anchorage, AK and Northfield, VT, and great grandson Carter Moon of Spokane, WA. Ruth was preceded in death by her son Dean Moon and her brother Timothy Capone.

No services will be held at the request of the deceased, and her ashes will be spread in Birch Bay, WA at a time when her entire family can come together at a later date.

Memorial contributions may be made in the deceased's name to either of the following charities: Alzheimer's Association of Western and Central Washington State: North Tower, 100 W Harrison Street, N200, Seattle, WA 98119, or Puget Sound Affiliate of Susan G. Komen for the Cure®: 112 Fifth Avenue North, Seattle, WA 98109.

Best in show tomatoes

Cohasset's Farmers Market held its annual Tomato Contest on Thursday, August 23. The event fell during the statewide Farmers Market week, and Cohasset joined other communities in celebrating local produce.

Gardeners, farmers, and just plain tomato fans were all invited to showcase their biggest, smallest, funniest, even ugliest tomatoes. Prizes were awarded in each category.

Tomatoes were also enjoyed in the form of salsa samples from village restaurants 5 South Main, Mr. Dooley's, and the Red Lion Inn.

The Cohasset Farmers Market takes place from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. every Thursday on the town common from June 21 to October 18.

Too late to enter the contest, Wayne Sawchuk of Cohasset displays what might have been the tiniest tomato.

For the second year in a row, Claire Tinory of Cohasset won "best all-around tomato." Her grandson Denham Lunt has the proof in hand.

GIMME SHELTER

Mindy is looking for a forever home

Mindy has an amazing story of survival. COURTESY PHOTO

Our Mindy is a young female cat who has made it through some difficult times and she has worked very hard to become a featured cat here at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

Last winter, this beautiful black feline delivered and was raising a litter of kittens outside in the cold, and she and her little family were helped by some wonderful people at a Linden Ponds in Hingham. Every day, Mindy went to a patio with her babies and they were fed by fellow cat lovers there. The kittens actually jumped right into a caregiver's apartment and got the feel of a home. But of course, Mindy stayed back and watched them carefully.

This watchful mom and her litter were rescued by Hull Seaside's caring staff and volunteers. Luckily, they came out of the cold and into the shelter. It was not easy, but it was life changing for them. The kittens learned to love people in the shelter and were adopted quite quickly. Lucky kittens!

It has been harder for Mindy. Living outside, without human contact, protecting her young, it has taken a while for her to realize that life with loving people is the best way to go. You may notice that little nick on her right ear? It doesn't change her beauty; it just shows her will to survive. For months, socializers and volunteers have talked to her, comforted her, and little by little, broken through Mindy's feral spirit. She is amazing and we are thrilled.

From hiding in a corner, then staying on the highest possible shelf, only coming down when no one was in the room, to now...sitting in the window catching sun, and letting people pet her and rub her cheeks and neck, Mindy is learning how good life can be. She is even enjoying a little belly rub as she suns herself. Mindy didn't know what she was missing, but it was the only way for her. Slow and steady. All those soft treats, reassuring voices and a lot of patience finally brought her out. Mindy has come so far, and now is her time. Time for an understanding and loving person with a welcoming forever home.

While she may still feel a little weird about all this change, it would be wonderful if she could bond with gentle, loving people who can take the time to know her, work a little more with her and show her the wonder of a real home. Just like her babies, Gloria, Cooper and Anderson have found their happiness, Mindy deserves her chance.

It would probably be best for Mindy to be in a quiet home where she can continue to develop more trust, and show more love. A number of people have made soul commitments to Mindy and have believed in her all along, working toward one goal, that she will go to a loving home. All of us want to see her happy and content with that special person.

Please come in and spend some time with Mindy and maybe her life book will have a happy new chapter. Open hours are Mondays 6:30-7:30p.m. and Saturdays 2-3p.m., or you can schedule an appointment with Judy at 781-534-4902. You can also leave us a message at the HSAR office at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Shelter is a non-profit, no-kill shelter. We invest time and love caring for our kittens and cats who deserve a chance to live in safe and loving homes. As always, we thank all who send donations, bring needed supplies and drop off bottles and cans that add up in helping to pay some of our bills. We are always looking for people who can spare a few hours each week helping to care for our cats. If you can give some time, call Nancy@ 781-925-3638. We will be at Endless Summer, on September 15. See you there!

FALL ARTS PREVIEW

While summer is great fun and all, fall is the season New England really shines. Now that we're all back from our summer vacations, the kids are back in school and we're all getting settled into our busy routines, don't forget to make time for your soul. Break out that calendar and make a few appointments to take in the bounty of music, theater, arts, family events and more that our area arts organizations roll out in autumn. Plan ahead and take in a show, visit a museum, see your favorite rocker in concert or symphony. The choices are endless, so we've provided a few ideas on these pages to spark your imagination.

"Mary Poppins" is at the Hanover in Worcester Sept. 25-30. Left, Mummenschanz, Dec. 5-9, hosted by Celebrity Series.

On Oct. 8, the Fenway Alliance presents music, theater, dance performances and art activities, indoors and out.

Jack White blasts the Agganis Arena on Sept. 28. Right, Glen Hansard at Berklee Performance Center, Sept. 18

CLASSICAL/OPERA | KEITH POWERS

A dynamic, diverse season of magical music

The Celebrity Series hosts Midori Nov. 4.

The classical music fall season looks back at some old friends, but welcomes some new stars in equal measure. All in all, it's a busy season with extraordinary diversity, and despite the demise last winter of Opera Boston, there's plenty of singing onstage as well.

The traditional concert season opener, Longy SeptemberFest, welcomes audiences back with five programs, beginning Sept. 14. Concerts are free, and dabble in new music (Virgil Thomson, Lukas Foss) and old (Schumann, Beethoven). The Gardner Museum also kicks off its season in September, performing in its glittering new home on the Fenway. The Sunday afternoon programs include A Far Cry (Sept. 9), Claremont Trio (Sept. 30), and pianist Cecile Licad (Nov. 25). Other chamber highlights feature a continuation of the Emmanuel Music Beethoven series (Sept. 30, Oct. 14), major presentations by the Muir (at BU, Oct. 9) and Chiara (Harvard, Sept. 28) string quartets, a dance collaboration between Gramercy Trio and choreographer Oliver Beeson (Boston Conservatory, Nov. 30), and the always engaging Chameleon Arts Ensemble (at Goethe Institute, Oct. 6, Nov. 4). Boston Chamber Music Society opens its season Oct. 14, and the Radius Ensemble starts its 14th season Oct. 6. Artistic director Michael Lewin's underappreciated Piano Masters series continues on the first Tuesday of each month at Boston Conservatory, with a return of Jorge Luis Prats (Oct. 2), Choong-Mo Kang playing Bach's "Goldberg Variations" Nov. 6, and BoCo's own piano chair Jonathan Bass on Dec. 4.

The Claremont Trio is at The Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum Sept. 30 in the museum's new concert space.

Boston Lyric Opera has only one production in the fall, but it's a classic: Puccini's exotic "Madame Butterfly," opening Nov. 2 at the Shubert. Boston Conservatory stages Conrad Susa's "Transformations" (based on Ann Sexton's writings) Nov. 15-18. Baroque operas get their due, with Boston Early Music Festival's production of Monteverdi's "Orfeo" (Nov. 24, 25), Boston Baroque's look at Handel's comic "Partenope" (Oct. 19, 20), and Helios Early Opera bringing Telemann's "Pimpinone" to the Good Life Bar Oct. 6.

In addition to Baroque opera, early music gets explored by the estimable Handel & Haydn Society and its dynamic conductor Harry Christophers, staging Bach's "Magnificat" Oct. 12 and 14, and then presenting a fascinating concert, including Mozart's "Jupiter" symphony (Bernard Labadie at the helm), Nov. 9 and 11.

That's old - here's the new. Contemporary composers get their due, with New Gallery premiering a work by Curtis Hughes Nov. 15 at the Community Music Center, Juventas (Sept. 22) and Ludovico Ensemble (Oct. 10) continuing their adventures at Boston Conservatory, and the outstanding Boston Musica Viva, now in its 43rd season, giving performances Sept. 28 and Nov. 16 (another premiere by Curtis Hughes). John Cage gets remembered on his centenary with a number of concerts: Ensemble 451 at the Somerville Armory Sept. 9; pianist Rodney Lister and friends at BU Sept. 14; Callithumpian at the Gardner Nov. 1 and Dec. 20; and A Far Cry, also at the Gardner, Dec. 6.

One-off events of note include the Terezin Music Foundation Gala at Symphony Hall Nov. 12, with Simone Dinnerstein, Dawn Upshaw and Gilbert Kalish performing; a remembrance of violinist and pedagogue Roman Totenberg at BU Oct. 13; and a rare stage appearance by pianist Veronica Jochum (BC, Sept. 23).

The revitalized Celebrity Series brings its pastiche of international stars to Boston, including Midori, Emerson String Quartet, Lar Lubovitch Dance, and Mummenschanz. Opening night (Oct. 5) promises to be a particularly tasteful experience with pianist Daniil Trifonov performing all the Chopin preludes in Pickman Hall at Longy.

Not to be overlooked, that band that plays on Mass. Ave. You might have heard of them. The Boston Symphony Orchestra opens its 131st season on Sept. 22 with Itzhak Perlman not only picking up his violin, but the conductor's baton as well, in an all-Beethoven program. Highlighted fall presentations include "Porgy and Bess" (Sept. 27-29), appearances by violinists Joshua Bell (Oct. 4-6), Arabella Steinbacher (Oct. 11-13) and Gil Shaham (Nov. 1-6); pianists Daniil Trifonov (Nov. 8-10), Kirill Gerstein (Nov. 15-17) and Christian Zacharias (Nov. 23-27); and a major program of French music conducted by Charles Dutoit (Oct. 25-27), including Ravel's "L'Enfant et les sortilèges" and Stravinsky's "Nightingale."

Other orchestral stagings include the Boston Philharmonic, with two bright young soloists: Stefan Jackiw (Oct. 25-28) and pianist George Li (Nov. 15-18), and the Discovery Ensemble, with its concertmaster, Joshua Weilerstein, soloing Oct. 21. And Pro Arte Chamber Orchestra returns Sept. 9 and Oct. 14 with two fall concerts.

Theaters plan a stunning season

A few things catch your eye when you take a look at the bounty of plays being offered this season by Boston-area theaters. First, Broadway in Boston presents one of its most exciting seasons in recent memory. Second, the New Repertory Theatre in Watertown lands a new artistic director in Jim Petosa. And finally, smaller theater companies continue to stage the kind of provocative and ambitious plays that are vital to any first-rate theater city.

So, on with the shows...

SEPTEMBER

When a sharp-tongued, down-on-her-luck single mom from South Boston loses yet another job, she phones an old boyfriend in hopes of getting her life back on track. In "Good People," Boston playwright (and Pulitzer winner) David Lindsay-Abaire examines the way our lives are determined by twists of fate. The Huntington Theatre Company presents the play Sept. 14 to Oct. 14 at the B.U. Theatre in Boston.

The New Repertory Theatre in Watertown kicks off its new season with an adaptation of "The Kite Runner." Based on the 2003 bestselling novel, it tells the story of a man who confronts a troubled past when he returns to his native Afghanistan after 30 years. The complicated tale unfolds Sept. 9 to 30 at the Arsenal Center for the Arts in Watertown.

The Lyric Stage Company of Boston kicks off its season with one of Gilbert & Sullivan's most-loved musicals, "The Mikado" (Sept. 7 to Oct. 13). Yum-Yum is engaged to be married to Ko-Ko. One problem: She loves Nanki-Poo.

SpeakEasy Stage Company continues to show a knack for snapping up some hot properties from New York. "The Mother!&*$# With the Hat" was one of the high-profile shows in Manhattan when it was nominated for a Tony Award last year. OK, the SpeakEasy production won't feature Chris Rock, but it remains a dark and wild comedy about an ex-con who's ready to turn his life around until he finds a man's hat in his girlfriend's apartment. It plays Sept. 14 to Oct. 13 at the Boston Center for the Arts.

Theater that's timely and relevant? What a concept. Company One opens its 13th season with "No Room For Wishing," writer-performer Danny Bryck's personal and political look at the Occupy movement. Incorporating the exact words of inhabitants at Dewey Square, the play is a coproduction with Central Square Theater. It runs Sept. 13 to 22 at the Boston Center for the Arts, and Sept. 30 to Oct. 9 at the Central Square Theater in Cambridge.

Maybe it's a grittier "Les Miserables." ArtsEmerson: The World On Stage presents "Paris Comune," the story of the French revolution told in a new musical that uses found texts and original songs from the period as it tells the story of Europe's first socialist revolution. It plays Sept. 20 to 23 at the Paramount Center Mainstage in Boston.

The challenges of being a woman in the field of science are explored in "The How and the Why," running Sept. 27 to Oct. 21 at the Central Square Theater, in Cambridge. It follows an acclaimed evolutionary biologist and the ambitious young graduate student who comes to visit her on the eve of a national conference.

The American Repertory Theater's production of "Marie Antoinette" continues through Sept. 29 at the Loeb Drama Center in Cambridge. See how the other half (or the other 1 percent) lives in this barbed tragicomedy, which seems like a suitable preface to the 2012 presidential election.

"Car Talk: The Musical!" continues its run through Sept. 16 at the Central Square Theater in Cambridge. The zany story is inspired by the iconic National Public Radio show, but don't expect to see the life stories of Tom & Ray.

"Good People," presented by the Huntington Theatre Company at the B.U. Theatre, Sept. 14-Oct. 14.

OCTOBER

The Actors' Shakespeare Project promises a production that delves into the psychological underpinnings of "Macbeth," Shakespeare's classic tale of blind ambition. It plays Oct. 3 to Nov. 4 at the Chevalier Theatre in Medford.

Broadway in Boston kicks off its inspired season with "War Horse," Oct. 10-21 at the Boston Opera House. Even if you've seen the Steven Spielberg film version of this story, you may still want to catch the eye-catching play that inspired it.

"Humorous" and "boisterous" aren't words that you usually hear to describe "Hamlet." But Shakespeare's Globe Theatre has staged a production that emphasizes the youthfulness of the primary characters in a trimmed-down production that runs just 150 minutes. ArtsEmerson brings the production to the Paramount Center Mainstage, in Boston, Oct. 9-21.

The New Rep in Watertown snagged one of the more talked-about recent imports from Broadway: David Mamet's "Race," playing Oct. 14 to Nov. 4 at the Arsenal Center for the Arts in Watertown. The dark comedy follows two attorneys who are defending a white man who's accused of raping an African-American woman. Sounds like classic Mamet fare.

As our 2012 presidential election trudges to the finish line, the Huntington Theatre offers "Now or Later," a drama about a presidential candidate whose campaign may get derailed in the final moments of the election, when potentially damaging photos of his son suddenly emerge. It plays Oct. 12 to Nov. 10 at the Boston Center for the Arts.

Wheelock Family Theatre in Boston tackles "Anne of Green Gables," a musical based on the popular novel for all ages by Lucy Maud Montgomery, Oct. 19 to Nov. 18. A high-spirited orphan named Anne (that's Anne with an "e") is brought to Prince Edward Island where her good will and great imagination help her thrive.

It may sound kind of crazy to tell the story of Andrew Jackson's life in a musical... with an emo-rock score, no less. But "Bloody Bloody Andrew Jackson" used that formula to capture plenty of attention in New York. Now the SpeakEasy Stage Company offers their version of this wild show about the kickass seventh president of the United States. It runs Oct. 19 to Nov. 17 at the Boston Center for the Arts.

Company One explores war-torn Baghdad in "Bengal Tiger at the Baghdad Zoo," the story of the ghost of a tiger seeking redemption among the ruins. It plays Oct. 19 to Nov. 17 at the Boston Center for the Arts.

"Lily's Revenge" sounds like it's admirably trying to push the boundaries of theater. The American Repertory Theater describes it as a show about "love without boundaries," as it uses dance, theater, film and music to create a unique theatrical event. It plays Oct. 12 to 28 at Oberon in Cambridge.

The Lyric Stage Company of Boston must have enjoyed a nice success with "My Name is Asher Lev" last season, because they've following it up with another work by the team of Aaron Posner and Chaim Potok. "The Chosen" (Oct. 19 to Nov. 17) is an emotional coming-of-age story featuring two boys from different backgrounds in 1940s Brooklyn.

NOVEMBER

Expect a unique combination of movement and poetry when Whistler in the Dark and ArtsEmerson present "Ted Hughes' Tales from Ovid" hits the Black Box Theatre at the Paramount Center in Boston, Nov. 8 to 18. The show takes a new look at the old myths in a way that's designed to resonate with modern audiences.

Harold Pinter has written many great plays; "Betrayal" may be his best and most accessible. With spare beauty, he unravels a seven-year affair and its consequences. The Huntington Theatre presents the taut drama Nov. 9 to Dec. 9 at the B.U. Theatre in Boston.

POP/ROCK/JAZZ | ED SYMKUS

Cranking up the volume to 11

Alanis Morissette at the House Of Blues, Oct. 17.

With the warm weather winding down, plans are in place for pop music shows to move inside. But there are still a couple of plein air gigs on tap for those who like to groove to the sounds in the great outdoors.

SEPTEMBER

The Bank of America Pavilion hosts the North Carolinian country-pop wonders The Avett Brothers on Sept. 16, and closes off the season with Dropkick Murphys on Sept. 21. The two-day Life Is Good Festival returns for a third time to the Prowse Farm in Canton on Sept. 22-23, featuring, among many others, Dave Matthews and Tim Reynolds, Soulive, The Ryan Montbleau Band, Muck and the Mires, Trombone Shorty & Orleans Avenue, Katie Herzig, and Orange Television. The year's final wallless blast is the annual daylong Berklee Beantown Jazz Festival on Sept. 29, with multiple jazz bands and artists, most with Berklee connections, playing on stages along Columbus Ave., between Burke St., and Mass. Ave. in Boston's South End. The sets are free.

Highlights of the season's indoor shows begin with a two-night stand by Scottish alt-rockers The Jesus and Mary Chain at the Paradise on Sept. 11-12, followed, on the same stage, by a blast of psychedelic funk from Boston's Addison Groove Project on Sept. 15. Irish singer-songwriter Glen Hansard, pushing his new album "Rhythm and Repose," visits the Berklee Performance Center on Sept. 18. Opposite ends of the musical spectrum are up for grabs on Sept. 20 when power trio Seether plays House of Blues, and golden-throated crooner Art Garfunkel is at the Wilbur Theater. Pop-rock heartthrobs Boys Like Girls and The All-American Rejects split a bill at House of Blues on Sept. 22. That's the same night the catchy melodies and vocal prowess of Grizzly Bear will be at the Orpheum.

The very busy end of the month has a little something for everyone. David Byrne & St. Vincent are together at the Orpheum on Sept. 23. Peter Gabriel brings his "Back to Front" tour to the TD Garden Sept. 24. Former Doors Robby Krieger and Ray Manzarek are at the Wilbur Theater on Sept. 26, while across town that night The Afghan Whigs play at House of Blues. Jack White blasts the Agganis Arena on Sept. 28. The Wallflowers premier selections from their new album "Glad All Over" at the Paradise on Sept. 29.

OCTOBER

Singer-songwriter-player-of-many-instruments Ben Harper does an acoustic show at the Boston Opera House on Oct. 5. The Danish band The Raveonettes matches up some hard rock with soft ballads via terrific male-female harmonies at the Paradise on Oct. 7. Heart, as always, fronted by Ann and Nancy Wilson, headlines at the Orpheum on Oct. 9. You should dust off your funky shoes for the double bill of Scotland's Average White Band and California's Tower of Power at the Wilbur on Oct. 12. The freshly reunited popster trio Ben Folds Five, pushing their new album, "The Sound of the Life of the Mind," plays House of Blues on Oct. 13.

Tough decisions will have to be made when four very different acts all play on Oct. 17: Alanis Morissette at House of Blues, The Wombats at the Paradise, Mike Watt & the Missingmen at the Brighton Music Hall, and Glen Campbell at the Wilbur. It'll be easier to make choices over the next few nights. The reunited Asia is at the Wilbur on Oct. 18. Primus plays the Orpheum on Oct. 20, as does Melissa Etheridge on Oct. 21. Rush will have its army of followers bowing down to them at the TD Garden on Oct. 24. Keb Mo will offer up a mix of blues, jazz and R&B at the Wilbur on Oct. 26. The Trey Anastasio Band will celebrate the new album "Traveler" at the Orpheum on Oct. 27. A happy Halloween is guaranteed for all with Walter Sickert & the Army of Broken Toys at the Brighton Music Hall on Oct. 31.

NOVEMBER

A big, fat slice of instrumental rock, along with a taste of jazz and funk and electronica, will be served up by STS9 at House of Blues on Nov. 1. Stephen Kellogg & the Sixers hit the blend button on some laidback folk and country at the Paradise on Nov. 2. Another night of having to decide, this time between old school punk and new school pop, happens on Nov. 10 when Justin Bieber plays the TD Garden, and Human Sexual Response (featuring four, count' em, four, singers) get back together at the Paradise. Speaking of sexual response, Amanda Palmer and the Grand Theft Orchestra do three nights at the Paradise, from Nov. 15-17 (Check out their amazing "Want It Back" video, but not at work!). Some will call them dinosaurs, others refer to them as classic, but there's no doubt that they're two of the biggest and best. The TD Garden hosts The Who on Nov. 16, and Neil Young & Crazy Horse on Nov. 26.

VISUAL ARTS | CHRIS BERGERON

Art that will dazzle, intrigue and provoke

By November, you'll be sick of politics. The Red Sox will have been out of the World Series race since Labor Day and a Kadashian sister will be on every channel.

So relax and marvel at Mrs. Gardner's treasures or Gauguin's erotic Tahitian scenes. Discover a new artist at the Danforth or see how Native Americans lived at Fruitlands. Here's some possibilities.

The Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston has brought cosmic grandeur and gritty street smarts to Boston with two spectacular exhibits. Through Oct. 14, "Josiah McElheny: Some Pictures of the Infinite" fuses glass art and astrophysics into spectacular installations that bring multiple cosmoses into the ICA. Finding common ground between the streets of Rio and Bean Town, the Brazilian brothers called "Os Gemeos," or "The Twins," have created monumental public art in the Rose Kennedy Greenway and are showing their own distinctive graffiti cartoons in the museum.

Solidifying its reputation as a regional resource for Boston Expressionism, the Danforth Museum and School of Art continues to deliver a satisfying mix of distinctive local artists, top notch children's illustrators and community events.

On Sept. 9 in the Children's Gallery, the Framingham museum will kick off "Picture This!" its second annual juried exhibit showcasing original work by 21 artists devoted to the craft of picture book illustration. Opening the same day, the multi-media exhibit "Fragile Navigation" will feature work by Ilana Manolson, Thaddeus Beal, Adrienne Der Marderosian and Rhonda Smith that examines humans' need to find a place to call their own. On Saturday, Nov. 3 from 7 to 10 p.m., the Danforth will offer fine art and fine wine in "A Matter of Taste," a benefit that'll offer live music, more than 100 kinds of wine and a small auction.

"Hats: An Anthology by Stephen Jones," at the Peabody Essex Museum, through Feb. 3.

The deCordova Sculpture Park and Museum in Lincoln will open on Sept. 2 three exhibits that feature its signature mix of provocative multimedia art to dazzle the eye and tease the brain. In their three-part project, "Jean Shin and Brian Ripel: Retreat," the two artists explore how other locals, including Henry David Thoreau, sought an idealized escape in nature and art. In her first major museum survey, Julianne Swartz will exhibit installations, photos, sculptures and sound pieces that explore "love, power and fragility." Just in time for the 2012 presidential election, Dan Peterman's "Love Podium," to be located in front of the Lincoln museum's entrance, will encourage the expression of opposing points of view in an age of polarization.

Under the leadership of new Executive Director Wyona Lynch-McWhite, Fruitlands Museum will mix traditional regional crafts and edgy work from three Worcester artists. Running through Oct. 28, "Visceral Murmurs" features art conceived around the theme of the night by photographer Scott Erb and painters Brian Burris and Cynthia Woehrle. On Saturday, Sept. 8, the Harvard museum will offer Basket Weekend, including talks, tours and activities that utilize its Shaker and Native American collections to explore the historical role of baskets in New England. And on Saturday, Sept. 29, Fruitlands will partner with Worcester Center for Crafts to host a Crafts Festival, starting at 10 a.m.

Addressing a wide range of interests, the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston will be offer new shows on ancient Mediterranean jewelry and photos of glamorous people and royal portraits and European masterpieces. On Sept. 24, the MFA will open the inaugural exhibit of the first major gallery in a U.S. museum dedicated to coins with the emphasis on ancient coins as art. Maintaining a classical focus, the museum's second and newest gem and jewelry gallery will open the same day with more than 200 objects in "Gems and Jewelry from the Ancient Mediterranean." On Oct. 21, celebrated fashion photographer Mario Testino will open two shows, "In Your Face," which will feature three decades of formal photos, portraits, nudes and snapshots of the rich and famous, and "British Royal Portraits," which ranges from Queen Elizabeth and Princess Diana to Prince William and Kate Middleton.

Following several strong photography shows, the Peabody Essex Museum in Salem will open two exhibits this fall on seemingly unrelated subjects, chic hats and 15th century Gothic tapestries. England's milliner-to-the stars, Stephen Jones, has put together 250 bonnets, turbans, caps and crowns that display style, wit and whimsy. "Hats: An Anthology by Stephen Jones" will run Sept. 8 to Feb. 3. Sticking a feather in its own cap, the PEM will offer a weekend festival of "Caps, Capes and Characters" on Oct. 13 and 14. On Oct. 27, the four monumental Pastrana Tapestries, commissioned in the mid-1400s by King Alfonso V of Portugal, go on display in "The Invention of Glory." Considered the finest examples of their kind in existence, the 36-foot-long tapestries will be shown together for the first time in the U.S. following extensive restoration.

Appointed last October, Worcester Art Museum's new Executive Director Matthias Waschek said the world-class treasures within the museum's permanent collection was one of the attractions on the job. Dipping into that chest, on Sept. 29, the museum opens a photography exhibit, "Kennedy to Kent State: Images of a Generation," with images all from the museum's permanent collection. Mostly from the 1960s, the photographs were all collected by Howard G. Davis III, and include images of JFK's presidency, the Civil Rights Movement, the Vietman War and antiwar movement, the space program, the counterculture and more.

"Julianne Swartz: How Deep Is Your," at the deCordova.

By design, the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, doesn't change much, but recently the museum has been welcoming temporary exhibits created by its artists-in-residence in its new Special Exhibit Gallery. Opening Sept. 20 and running through Jan. 7, "The Great Bare Mat & Constellation" is a silent looped-digital projection of photographs and film stills taken by the New Delhi artist trio the Raqs Meda Collective, Jeebesh Bagchi, Monica Narula and Shuddhabrata Sengupta, while they were in residence at the Gardner in 2010. The name of their project refers to a carpet displayed at the foot of "The Vinegar Tasters," a two-part 17th century Japanese screen in the museum's collection.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 17, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your ideas earn you the respect of your colleagues. But you'll have to present some hard facts and figures if you hope to persuade those who make the big decisions to support you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Keep those bright Bull's eyes focused on the project at hand. Avoid distractions. There'll be lots of time for fun and games later. Expect to get welcome news this weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You soon might have to decide about moving a relationship from its current status to another level. Don't let anyone influence your decision. It must be yours and yours alone.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You finally can get off that emotional roller coaster and get back to focusing on your goals without interruptions through the rest of the week. A nice change is due by the weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Trying to make an impression on some people runs into a bit of a snag at first, but it all works out. An old and almost forgotten personal matter once again needs attention.

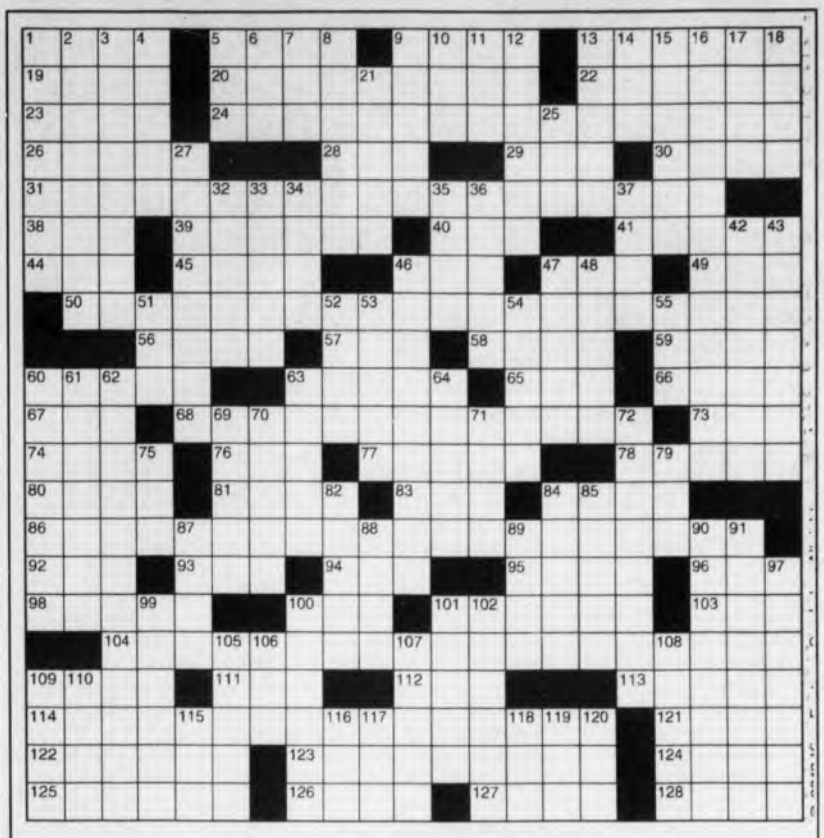
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A rise in your energy level helps you finish an especially demanding task. Take some time now to spend with family and friends before starting a new project.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This is a good time to re-establish contact with trusted former associates who might be able to offer good advice regarding that career change you've been contemplating.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your resourcefulness combined with a calm, cool approach help you work your way out of a knotty situation and avoid a potentially serious misunderstanding.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A calm, quiet period allows you to recharge your energies. But you'll soon be ready to saddle up and gallop off in pursuit of your goals.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Family matters need your attention. Check things out carefully. There still might be unresolved tensions that could hinder your efforts to repair damaged relationships.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It's a good time to take a stand and show as much passion on your own behalf as you do when arguing for the rights of others. You might be happily surprised by the reaction.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You bring sense and sensitivity to a confusing situation. Things soon settle down, leaving you free to enjoy a weekend of fun and relaxation with friends and family.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

MDA Party: $14,000 is raised for the cause

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

There was a large turnout of supporters for the Labor Day weekend 24-hour Tolman M.D.A. Telethon Party.

2012 marked the 36th anniversary of the popular event, which raises money for Muscular Dystrophy Association research and the patient services it provides.

"We're all a bit weary around they edges, but the beautiful weather brought a lot of warm hearts and a very generous spirit out for our event," said founder Jay Tolman, who grew up in Hingham and now lives in Cohasset. "With money still coming in and counting and recounting, we will be presenting the M.D.A. with more than $14,000 for the continued fight to help end muscular dystrophy." More than $500,000 has been raised throughout the event's history.

The money will be donated in memory of Richard Berberian, Jr., John Fasci, Jr., Mary Cronin, and Matti Stepanik.

The party, which coincides with the national M.D.A. Telethon, "MDA Show of Strength," featured live music, raffles, a Zumbathon, refreshments, a good time with old and new friends, and refreshments, as well as a cookout, DJ, clowns, face painting, and pony rides.

"Without the hard work of my wife, Jodi, and my fantastic kids Chloe and Jack, my father John [who makes the trip from Florida every year], and the countless hours of work from our 'telethon team' of volunteers, this event would not happen," Tolman said. "I'm a very lucky man to be surrounded by the perfect family, and friends who do whatever it takes to help make this event for MDA so successful!"

Special thanks goes to Stacy Smith, owner of "Pick a Party Place" for "all her hard work and generous support" and also to Christine Ricci and her team of instructors for the newest feature, a Zumbathon, Tolman said. "The band 'Closer than we Appear' was amazing, and I could go on and on."

He also offered a special thanks to Congregation Sha'aray Shalom "for their support and great venue — the perfect spot for any event!"

Those who were unable to attend but would like to make a donation can do so at tolmantelethon.com.

A DAY TO REMEMBER

Cohasset Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Thomas Wigmore, who is commander of the Sons of the American Legion in Cohasset, salute the wreath after they placed it at the foot of the flagpole at the Common in honor of those who lost their lives on 9/11. The solemn ceremony was held Tuesday on the 11th anniversary of the terrorist attacks. For more photos, see pages 24 & 25 or visit: www.wickedlocalcohasset.com STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Angels among us

St. Stephen's blessed by zealous homeless man

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Richard, a 61-year-old man from Scituate, came to church in Cohasset on the last Sunday of August, brightly introducing himself to St. Stephen's parishioners and speaking passionately about his faith.

He also told people, in an equally upbeat manner, that he was homeless. He did not ask for any help, only told folks "God bless you" and went on his way.

No one at the church heard from Richard until the following night, when the Reverend Margot Critchfield got a call from Cohasset police Sergeant Jeff Treanor alerting her that a homeless man was "setting up camp" in the church's backyard.

"I got this call and I didn't know what to say," said Rev. Critchfield. "I asked God for guidance on what to do."

The Mariner first learned of this story through the police log on Monday, August 27, after concerned neighbors called the police when they saw a homeless man preparing to spend the night outside of St. Stephen's.

But why? Who was this man, why did he choose St. Stephen's, and why would the minister allow this unusual situation to take place? It was unusual — in a town like Cohasset. But in more urban towns and cities, having the homeless right next door is much more commonplace.

Critchfield has an urban background in her ministry, having worked in Washington D.C., and is a little more used to dealing with situations like these. But she admitted that during her time in Cohasset, this was a first.

Wanting to help someone in need while still protecting neighbors and parishioners, the reverend had a tough choice to make. But Critchfield decided that the man should be allowed to stay for one night.

The reverend knew she was helping someone who needed it, doing what's in her job description. She figured that she and her assistant minister, the Rev.

Con Com approves stormwater permit

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"Can you hear me now?"

Soon, cell phone users in Cohasset may be asking that question less.

The plan for AT&T to place a cell antenna on the Bear Hill water tank is underway again. The Conservation Commission approved a stormwater permit for the project during their Thursday, September 6 meeting.

Background

The project was set into motion in the late winter of 2011 but evidently hit a few speed bumps. AT&T took a step back from the project after its acquisition of cellular provider T-Mobile. That company also installed a cell antenna in the steeple of First Parish Church on the town common last year.

Last summer, the Water Commission was negotiating with Verizon, which also bid to provide cellular service on the site and planned to take the lead on the project, with AT&T agreeing to pay for the access road off Reservoir Road, which would be used during construction of the antenna and for monthly routine maintenance. AT&T wound up taking the

DID YOU KNOW

What is protective custody?

ONLY IN PRINT

What: Massachusetts state law provides for protective custody of persons incapacitated from alcohol. When police take an individual into protective custody – it is not an arrest. A person taken into protective custody is not considered to have been arrested or charged with a crime.

Numbers: Recent Cohasset statistics add up this way:
• In 2011, there were 20 "PCs"
• In 2012 (through Sept. 1) police have taken 11 people into protective custody.

Background: Historically arrests for drunkenness have constituted a high proportion of police activity in every community. In the past – except for traffic violations – more arrests were made for drunkenness than for all other offenses combined.

In an attempt to resolve the long-standing problem, state law provides that public intoxication is not a crime.

When: A person may be placed into protective custody when an officer determines they are incapacitated due to alcohol and are: unconscious, in need of medical attention, likely to suffer or cause physical harm or damage or being disorderly.

Where: Once in PC, police may assist the person, with or without their consent to one of three places: their residence (if a person at home will take custody of them); a treatment facility or the police station.

More: Police are allowed to handcuff and to pat down the intoxicated person for objects or weapons. At the station, the person can make a phone call or request a breath test to determine if they are intoxicated. They can be held up to 12 hours at the police station.

In some cases: An incident that began, as a PC can become an arrest situation. If the person becomes completely disorderly in public, assaults an officer while being taken into custody or damages a cruiser en route to the police station, or maliciously damages the cell or station in the booking area.

Drunken driving: Nothing in the state law concerning PC (Chapter 111B, which became law in 1973) affects drunken driving laws or similar offenses involving the operation of machinery.

Quote: "The protective custody statute is a great tool for law enforcement that permits police officers to protect people from themselves without saddling a citizen with a criminal record," Cohasset Deputy Police Chief William Quigley

New Senior Center has an address

...recently the Cohasset Assessor's office officially assigned the street address for the new center as 91 Sohier St.

A milestone was marked recently for the proposed Cohasset Senior Center. The Social Service League of Cohasset is building the Center for Cohasset Elder Affairs.

Many people have seen the project announcement sign located on Sohier Street diagonally across from the Paul Pratt Library and recently the Cohasset Assessor's office officially assigned the street address for the new center as 91 Sohier St.

The Social Service League's architects Bargmann Hendrie + Archetype, Inc. have been developing plans for the new Center and are working towards applying for permits in the fall. The Social Service League Building Committee plans to have local permits by the end of 2012 with an anticipated groundbreaking in Spring 2013.

Fall Town Meeting: Dec. 10

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski and the Board of Selectmen have selected Monday, December 10 as the date for Special Town Meeting.

Return of the Dog Parade!

It's been a while, but the popular Dog Parade returns to the Cohasset Farmers Market at 4 p.m. Thursday. Sept. 20. To participate, simply dress up your dog in the costume of your choice and be a part of the most festive parades you've ever seen.

Judging the event will be Terry Haskins of The Dog Butler and a certified professional trainer specializing in in-home customized dog training. Prizes will be awarded. So start thinking about a creative canine costume, the "wilder" the better, and get ready for some friendly competition. Don't forget to do a little shopping at the market before or after the Dog Parade. The Cohasset Farmers Market is held from 2 to 6 p.m. Thursdays through Oct. 18.

Watch for the newest furniture store on the South Shore opening Thursday September 13th.

We are inviting you to come visit our vision of "Furniture with Attitude" at Vintage Home Warehouse.

Traffic diverted following accident

During the a.m. commute on Monday morning (Sept. 10), a 2001 Honda Accord was rear-ended by a 1991 Chevrolet Pick-up truck that was towing a landscaping trailer. The accident occurred on King Street in front of Avalon Apartments. The driver of the 2001 Honda, a 51-year-old Cohasset woman received head, back, and neck injuries as a result of the crash.

The driver of the pick-up, who admitted that he was distracted, was issued a citation for following too closely and defective equipment (bald tires). He is 26-years-old and from Whitman. Both vehicles had to be towed. Traffic on that section of King Street was diverted for 30 minutes.

Three-car crash 3A & Beechwood

On Monday, Sept. 10, at 10:30am, officers responded to a three-car crash at the intersection of Route 3A and Beechwood Street. A 2012 Mercedes, operated by a 48-year-old Weymouth man, collided with a 2006 Honda CRV, operated by a from 65-year-old Hanover woman.

Due to the impact, the Mercedes was forced into a third vehicle, a 2011 Chevrolet Silverado, operated by a 45-year-old Cohasset man. The operator of the Honda was transported with minor injuries.

The operator of the Mercedes was cited for marked lane and red light violations.

OUI arrest, lost adult, PC and missing paddleboard

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

OUI charge

A 50-year-old Cohasset man was arrested and charged with drunken driving (second offense) following an accident on S. Main Street at 10:20 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 8). Police said the man was driving a 1998 Jeep Wrangler that rear-ended a Toyota Highlander. When police arrived, the occupants were outside their vehicles and were checked out by paramedics.

The operator of the Jeep displayed the signs and symptoms of intoxication and was placed under arrest.

He was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol (second offense) and negligent operation. He was convicted of drunken driving in 1989, police said.

Koi pond

Police told the owner of a golden retriever to keep their dog under control last week in response to a complaint from a Linden Drive neighbor who reported the dog kept swimming in the koi pond scaring the fish.

Firearms

A 36-year-old Cohasset woman, who lives on Jerusalem Road, had a friend turn over five firearms to Cohasset police on Saturday after having a falling out with her 33-year-old boyfriend. Police said she did not want the guns around. The firearms included one rifle.

Protective custody

A 29-year-old Weymouth man was taken into protective custody on Saturday at about 12:22 a.m. outside the Red Lion Inn where he had been attending a wedding reception.

Police said a detail officer hired for the event got involved when two men started arguing in the back parking lot, one of whom was extremely intoxicated and would not listen to reason about not driving.

AC stolen

At 2:52 p.m. on Saturday (Sept. 8), a 49-year-old Jerusalem Road resident reported a past breaking and entering in the rented guesthouse on the property. Police said the 47-year-old tenant arrived home to find the air conditioning unit missing and the medical box pried open. Police said there was no forced entry. There had been workers at the house who are going to be interviewed, police said.

Suspicious noise

Police responded to a call from a Jerusalem Road resident at 10:27 a.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 4) about a suspicious noise inside. A sergeant went to the home and walked through with the resident. Nothing was going on, police said.

Lost adult

Police responded to a concerned call at 12:33 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 4) from the wife of an 81-year-old Hull man who, she thought, was lost. Police said the wife dropped him off at the medical building off Route 3A and went to park. When she went to look for her husband, she could not locate him. Police notified Hull police who sent a cruiser to check the couple's home for the husband. Police also searched the medical building and located him waiting in the wrong doctor's office.

Dogs hit

Two dogs were hit by cars last week in Cohasset. Police responded to a call at 3:46 p.m. on Tuesday (Sept. 4) on Pleasant Street from the dog owner about her dog being struck. Police said the dog apparently darted out in front of a 2003 Suzuki XL7, operated by at 17-year-old Cohasset boy. The dog was taken to Crazy Paws but did expire, police said.

At 8:38 a.m. on (Wednesday, Sept. 5), police received a call about a dog being struck on Forest Avenue and whose rear leg may have been broken. That dog was also taken to Crazy Paws in Cohasset. No further details were available.

Watch missing

A 55-year-old Cohasset resident who lives in the Avalon complex reported to police last week that her 2009 special edition Movado gold and diamond watch, valued at $2,000, was missing. She reported that only two other people have keys to her apartment, a neighbor and a housekeeper, neither of whom she suspects as having taken the watch, police said.

Paddleboard

A 40-year-old Cohasset woman, who lives on Beach Street, reported that her 11-foot, Bic Jungle paddleboard, valued at $1,000 was missing last week. Police said the board was apparently taken from the dock at the rear of the residence sometime between Aug. 27 and Sept. 6 when the residents were away.

MVA

Police responded to a two-car accident at S. Main and Spring streets on Saturday evening (Sept. 8) at around 6:23 p.m. Police said a 1972 Chevrolet, operated by a 47-year-old Cohasset man, was traveling south on South Main Street (toward Scituate) when he collided with a 2012 Mercedes sedan, operated by a 50-year-old Cohasset man. Police said the 47-year-old was cited for failure to yield.

lead on the project in the end.

But the water commission and town were served a 10-taxpayer lawsuit from a group of residents living on Reservoir Road or Pleasant Street. The suit alleged wrongful expenditure of town funds; but in December 2010, a Norfolk Superior Court denied a motion to dismiss the legal action, and the town responded with a request to dismiss the legal action with prejudice. The lawsuit was eventually dismissed with prejudice, meaning the residents lost their right to appeal.

Water Commission chair Peter DeCaprio said last year that the suit had cost the town more than $20,000 in legal fees.

In March this year, DeCaprio told the Mariner that AT&T agreed to fund the antenna site on the tower, the project had gotten stormwater approval, and would begin in earnest. This week, he said that the abutters challenged the stormwater application.

Con Com

Last year, a stormwater permit and notice of intent (NOI) were both approved for the project, but the stormwater permit was subsequently withdrawn. The conservation commission closed the hearing for the NOI and issued an order of conditions.

AT&T revised the project plan and applied for a new stormwater permit. Dewberry Engineering, which will construct the project, came before the Con Com on behalf of AT&T last week to present their plans for the site and seek a stormwater permit.

During the tower installation, Dewberry will have a 12 by 20-foot equipment shelter and a 25 by 40 gravel compound. An engineer from the company told commissioners that it's "not a large installation" and won't cause much disturbance.

Workers will access the water tank through the existing dirt driveway, which will be "improved if necessary."

Adding gravel will make the roadway more impervious and mitigate run-off, according to the engineer. An infiltration trench and catch basins will also capture run-off and dissipate it into groundwater. Dewberry is trying to be mindful of the existing wetlands.

Conservation agent Paul Shea said he had no issues with the stormwater application, noting that Dewberry plans to put in native plantings to increase the habitat for the buffer zone.

As for plowing in the winter, the Dewberry engineer said that workers can simply walk over to the tower, which "doesn't have to be accessed that often."

Other concerns included supervision during construction, ensuring that trucks going down Reservoir Road can stop efficiently. The water commission paid for a safety study that suggested putting an apron at the end of the road.

An abutter at the meeting asked how much clear cutting of nearby tree branches would need to be done for construction; Dewberry will only clear as much is needed to get to the roadway, said the engineer.

As for the duration of construction, Dewberry estimates a maximum of six months. DeCaprio said they estimated 90 days, weather permitting.

Con Com members also wanted to know where the equipment garage would be located, and whether it would be fenced off. DeCaprio said that there's a fence around the tank now, which the water department has a key to; it was suggested that the equipment shed be placed within the existing gated area.

The Con Com had one last question, asked by agent Shea: "Why is it called Bear Hill?"

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, who was in the audience, quipped, "From the legal money spent defending it."

The commission voted unanimously to approve the stormwater application with the stipulation that native plantings are added.

However, one of the neighbors involved in the 10-taxpayer lawsuit told the Con Com chair this week that not all of the abutters to Bear Hill had been notified of the hearing. Creighton said that, apparently, AT&T used an outdated list of residents, the same notification list they used to contact folks last year.

The Con Com chair said that if the notification was in fact done improperly, the commission will have to vote the stormwater permit all over again. Otherwise, Creighton said that AT&T's application was done properly.

"We have looked at the actual merits and the conservation commission clearly felt the stormwater permit on the merits was rightly issued, but if there's a question of proper notification, then AT&T has to do it over again," said Creighton.

Embarrassing email string gets statewide attention

Officials to discuss Code of Civility

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Karen Quigley, former selectmen and an abutter to Bear Hill, sent an email to Water Commission chair Peter DeCaprio on Tuesday, Sept. 4 when she learned that AT&T was coming before the Conservation Commission to seek stormwater approval to begin their cellular tower installation. Quigley suggested the application was premature, as she wasn't aware of any contract being signed with AT&T. She also felt the issue raised questions on where the revenue from the cell phone tower should go: to the town's general fund or water department's enterprise fund.

DeCaprio responded that the lease had been signed, and the revenue belongs to the water company. Quigley then asked for a copy of the lease, and DeCaprio directed her to Town Counsel or Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski. Quigley, a former selectmen, then sarcastically thanked the water board chairman for his willingness to comply with the Public Records Law.

The email exchange down spiraled from there, with DeCaprio telling Quigley that she deserved "no consideration whatsoever by anyone in town, especially me, regarding any issue." After reminding Quigley that town counsel and the town manager had dominion over contracts, he suggested she channel her energies by volunteering to drive the meals-on-wheels van.

Former town manager Michael Coughlin, who was removed in March, then jumped into the fray with an email titled "Behavior of Peter DeCaprio."

Coughlin said that DeCaprio in his response has mistreated a Cohasset citizen, and said that the water chair, as an elected public official, has a duty to uphold the town's code of conduct/civil discourse policy.

Quigley copied her email exchange to Milanoski, prefaced by an email stating that "this is not the first time Mr. DeCaprio has sent me such comments."

The former selectman wrote that given the board's civil discourse policy for town government, "I can't help but wonder how you continue to tolerate such behavior from an elected official."

Milanoski responded with an invite to visit him during his office hours to discuss her various concerns. He also said that the civil discourse and email exchange issues would be addressed at the next scheduled selectmen's meeting.

Quigley said that she would not be summoned before the board, but did make an appointment to meet with Milanoski. She further wrote that the town refusing to provide her a copy of the AT&T contract was a violation of the Public Records Law.

Milanoski wrote back cautioning her to withdraw that statement.

"As you know, I have not been in violation of MA public records laws for a request you made earlier this week, we have ten days to pull such records and respond accordingly," Milanoski wrote. "Part of the town's Code of Civility stresses truthfulness."

In a later email, Milanoski forwarded information to Quigley from town counsel regarding the AT&T lease. Town counsel explained that an amended and restated lease had been signed but not executed, pending stormwater approval from the Con Com.

The contentious email exchange between the water commission chair and former selectman made the Boston Globe this week.

Milanoski confirmed that the matter would be discussed during Tuesday's selectmen meeting.

Quigley said in a phone call Thursday that she will not be attending.

"I feel it's kind of an overreaction to the situation. It would be more appropriate and professional to address the issue by talking to Peter and I and coming to a decision, like saying to tone it down," said Quigley, "but to hold a public hearing, the only reason in doing it after the fact is trying to embarrass me. No, I'm not going to go."

Quigley called DeCaprio's comments to her "totally unnecessary."

"Peter's a very intelligent man, trying to do a good job at the water commission, but somehow has this need to... embarrass me publicly. What have I done other than pose questions? That was my duty as a public official, and it was my right as a citizen."

DeCaprio, meanwhile, stated in an email that he would be more than willing to discuss the code of civility and his email exchange with Quigley, saying that he had plenty of emails saved to prove that Quigley has been equally nasty to him.

"You complain about incivility the loudest, yet you practice it daily with gusto," DeCaprio wrote. "Anyone that has ever read your nasty blast emails would laugh as you now whine about incivility... I will happily read into the record all of your indecorous, unprofessional emails. The comments I have received from other public officials victimized by your disgusting duplicity over the years would also make for good reading, just so you don't think I stand alone in my views."

DeCaprio confirmed in an email on Thursday that he plans to attend Tuesday's meeting.

New sponsors, new roster for 'Sunday AuthorTalks'

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Between these two weighty bookmarks, visits from writers in a wide range of genres — memoir, fiction, journalism, history, essay, and science — will offer some engaging, often controversial fare.

Paul Pratt Memorial Library's "Sunday AuthorTalks" resumes on Sunday, Oct. 7, and will continue on the first Sunday of each month at 4 p.m. through May 2013. Ten distinguished authors, all internationally recognized in their fields, will speak about their most recent works.

Following each talk, a wine and cheese reception will provide opportunity for book signing and further conversation with the writer. Nationally recognized investment advisor/author John Spooner will kick off the series in October and Dennis Lehane, the focus of Cohasset Reads Together, will close the talks in May. Between these two weighty bookmarks, visits from writers in a wide range of genres — memoir, fiction, journalism, history, essay, and science — will offer some engaging, often controversial fare.

The trustees of the library are grateful to Tom and Nancy Hamilton of Dean and Hamilton Realtors, who, along with the Cook Estate, are sponsors of "Sunday AuthorTalks" this year. The Hamiltons are long time supporters of the Cohasset Library and care very much about making a difference in the arts throughout the Boston area. They contribute generously to the Huntington Theatre Company where Tom also serves on the board of trustees, and Dean and Hamilton and the Cook Estate have co-sponsored the art festival for the past several years. In speaking about the library, Tom said, "Civic pride got it built, which tells you a lot about what people care about in Cohasset. Architecturally, it's a gem. Both the South Shore Art Center and the library are keystones to the town of Cohasset."

Bruce Sinclair, owner of A Taste for Wine and Spirits, is another generous donor to "Sunday AuthorTalks." Sinclair contributed all the wines for last year's post-talk receptions and once again has agreed to donate wines for each event this year. Library trustees gratefully acknowledge Sinclair's thoughtful contributions, without which the receptions could not take place. Linda Fechter, program publicity coordinator, said, "Without question, Bruce's unwavering support of the library is something for which we are all extremely grateful. He is an integral part of this program's success."

Admission is free to all events but seating is limited and on a first-come, first-served basis. Many of these authors will draw large audiences, so to ensure a seat, reserve a seat. Phone the library at 781-383-1348, email the library at cohassetlibrary.org, or pick up a ticket at the library's circulation desk.

To learn more about the authors and find links to book reviews, author bios, and other works, visit cohassetlibrary.org.

Question raised on Milanoski contract

Tinytown Gazette blogger and publisher Tanna Kasperowicz wrote a letter to the Board of Selectmen on Wednesday, Sept. 12 stating that she believes Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski's contract with the town is illegal.

The selectmen recently voted to extend Milanoski's current contract, signed April 3, 2012, with the town through June of 2015; he took the helm as acting town manager in March when former town manager Michael Coughlin was removed without cause.

Kasperowicz raises concerns in her letter, asking under what laws the selectmen are writing a multi-year contract with the acting town manager.

She further pointed out that the contract itself seems "confused," as it alternately refers to both a town manager and "acting" town manager and said that Milanoski, on his letterhead and business card, refers to himself as "town manager."

Kasperowicz urged the board to advertise for an experienced town manager.

On Sept. 7, Selectmen chair Paul Carlson responded to a previous letter from Kasperowicz questioning the selectmen's legal authority for signing a contract with Milanoski. Carlson said the contract falls under the selectmen's purview through Cohasset's Town Manager Act.

"The Board of Selectmen has carefully reviewed Mr. Milanoski's educational and professional background and his performance over the past six months," Carlson wrote. "The Board has determined that it is in the best interests of the Town of Cohasset to enter into a new contract with him so that he can continue serving the town through June 30, 2015 as Acting Town Manager."

HAPPENING

Happy birthday, Mr. Dooley's

Mr. Dooley's Olde Irish Village Pub is not 'old' to Cohasset at all, but is turning one this week. In honor of the pub's first anniversary in the Cohasset Village, Mr. Dooley's is holding a special event tomorrow, Saturday, Sept. 15.

Kids under age 10 eat free from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.; there will also be a selection of entrée specials and $3 Guinness.

Starting at 2 p.m., customers will have the chance to win prizes.

Patrons can enjoy live music beginning at 1 p.m. and lasting through the night. The schedule is as follows:

- 1– 4 p.m.: The Armstrong Brothers (Joe and Jim)
- 5– 8 p.m.: Mark Purcel
- 9 p.m. – 12 a.m.: Matt Chase

Though it's only been in town for the past year, Mr. Dooley's has quickly become part of the village landscape. In Ireland, the pub is more than just a watering hole but the center of the town's social scene; in Cohasset, it's no different, with Mr. Dooley's becoming the go-to place for celebrations, parties, and old-fashioned family meals.

Serving lunch and dinner daily, Mr. Dooley's offers a wide range of Irish comfort food, a fine selection of seafood dishes, craft beers and a substantial wine list.

Mr. Dooley's is located at 9 Depot Court, Cohasset and is open Monday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 1 a.m. and on Sunday from 10 a.m. to 12 a.m.

AROUND TOWN

Stanley Cup coming to town Monday!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Perspective

Hi Cohasset...what a week it has been with memories on Tuesday, September 11th of so many who lost their lives on that tragic day 11 years ago. They are remembered all throughout the year, but on the actual day, the impact of the moments of that day just hits home. Puts all our little issues into perspective once again.

I have a number of events to share this week so here we go...

Stanley Cup

Something pretty exciting is happening for all hockey fans in town, young and old alike. This Monday, Sept 17th, from 5-6 pm on the Cohasset Common (inside the Town Hall if it rains) Cohasset resident and Director of Pro Development for the Los Angeles Kings, Mike O'Connell, will have the authentic Stanley Cup for fans to come down and view. Grab your family, friends and favorite hockey garb, along with your cameras for your photo opportunities with the Stanley Cup! Thank you Mike for this awesome event!

UMASS Amherst

Approximately 5,000 students in 85 majors received undergraduate degrees from the University of Massachusetts Amherst this spring. Commencement ceremonies were held May 11, 2012 at the Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium. The following Cohasset students earned bachelor's degrees: Michael Comerford, Matthew Cody Burgess and Aaron V. Berard.

Dean of Students Enku Gelaye has announced the names of students who qualified for dean's list for the 2012 spring semester at the University of Massachusetts Amherst. In order to qualify, an undergraduate student must receive a 3.5 grade-point average or better on a four-point scale.

The following Cohasset students were named to the University of Massachusetts Amherst dean's list: Carley Elizabeth Zappolo, Jeremy R. Simms, Kelsey Nicole Erler and Schuyler Wakefield.

Congratulations, all!

Providence

Moira Donohue, a resident of Cohasset, was among 150 students in Providence College's Class of 2016 to spend the first days of college participating in the College's 22nd annual Urban Action program. The freshmen, along with 25 upperclassmen leaders, volunteered in Providence, Kent, and Newport counties in Rhode Island on Aug. 26 and Aug. 27.

In Providence at Neutaconkanut Hill Park, students painted rails, built a kiosk, prepped a meadow for an upcoming Philharmonic concert, and spread wood chips on multiple trails. In Middletown, they cleaned up walking trails and coastal areas at Sachuest Point National Wildlife Refuge. In East Greenwich, at Pat's Pastured Farm, students cleared brush on trails, removed fences, and cleaned a local cemetery.

Curry College

Curry College's Chief Academic Officer David Potash announces that Jenny Murphy and Noah Pescatore of Cohasset attained membership to the Curry College dean's list for the spring 2012 term:

"Curry students who achieve the dean's list demonstrate deep commitment to learning and academic success," said Dean Potash. "We are proud of them and their accomplishments."

To qualify for the dean's list, students must earn a 3.30 G.P.A., have no incompletes, and have no grade lower than a "C" for the semester. Full-time students must carry 12 or more graded credits for the semester; part-time students must be matriculated, carrying 6-11.5 graded credits for the semester, and must have earned a cumulative total of 15 graded credits in consecutive semesters.

CASP meeting

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project (ASP) Summer 2013 work camp trip will be June 29-July 7. There will be an informational meeting held this Sunday, Sept 16 at 8 pm at the 2nd Congregational Church. The registration deadline for choice of companions to be in your center will be Oct 1. The first fundraiser will be the annual and much-anticipated Pumpkin Patch on North Main Street opening on Oct 6th. ASP is open to all current 9th-12th grade students.

Author talk

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library will host their monthly Sunday author talk series beginning on Oct 7 at 4 pm. John D. Spooner, author of "No One Ever Told Us That: Money and Life...Letters to my Grandchildren." will talk about the book at this free event. A wine and cheese reception and a book signing will follow the event. This is a free event however, seating is limited so call 781-383-1348 to reserve your seat.

DTC meets

The 5th Annual Democratic Unity Party, hosted by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be held at Atlantica on Thursday, Oct. 11 from 6-8:30 pm. This is a chance to meet Democrats and Independents from the South Shore, hear from the candidates and elected officials and enjoy drinks, hors d'oeuvres and live music. A suggested donation of $50 per person is suggested. You can find the "Cohasset Democratic Town Committee" on Facebook or email Sally Sisson at salsisson@comcast.net or Kevin McCarthy at kevin@cohassetdemocrats.org to RSVP.

Cohasset Cafe

The Friends of Elder Affairs sponsors Cohasset Cafe for the town's seniors every Monday morning from 9-11 am at the Lighthouse Keepers at Cohasset Harbor. Homemade breakfast treats, coffee/tea and friendships too, all with the beautiful views of the harbor is a wonderful way to start the week. Come join the fun and make sure to bring a friend.

Newcomers

The Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club registration form for 2012/2013 is now available on the website, www.scnewcomers.com. They have many exciting events planned for the year including book clubs, Men's and Ladies' Nights Out, Children's events/playgroups, Dining Out Clubs, Cocktail Clubs and volunteer projects. The many projects and events allow you to enjoy friends from both communities both old friends and new. If you want to participate in the playgroups, submit your forms as soon as possible, the groups begin at the beginning of October. If you have questions, contact Meaghan Barry at president@scnewcomers.com or Landin Goffat at vicepresident@scnewcomers.com

Walking group

The Cohasset Elder Affairs announces the formation of a weekly senior walking group. Led by Beth Ahearn, a retired physical education teacher and coach for Weymouth, Cohasset, Hull and Plymouth, walks will start at 1 mile and may increase in length, depending on interest. The group will meet at the Town Hall parking lot Monday mornings at 9 am, starting this Monday, Sept 17th. Strap on those sneakers and come for the walk with friends, exercise and conversation.

Bird talk

Next Wednesday, Sept 19th, at 11 am, Cohasset Elder Affairs will host John Galluzzo as he presents "Thirty Miles a Day Across the South Shore." John is the adult education and citizen science coordinator for Mass Audubon's South Shore Sanctuaries, headquartered in Marshfield, a co-complier of the first ever State if the Birds of Massachusetts report, and is currently co-authoring the Massachusetts Vreeding Bird Atlas 2. Trained as an historian, John has written more than 35 books on the history and nature of southeastern Massachusetts. For this project, he sought 30 minutes on nature trails in every community during one calendar year, from the top of Mt. Greylock to Cape Cods ocean edges, with the goal of proving a nature experience us never far away for any resident in Massachusetts. This program will be held at Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main Street and will be followed by a luncheon at the center. Call 781-383-9112 for reservations and/or transportation.

Roundabout

Cohasset Maritime Institute ("CMI") will host the Minot's Light Roundabout rowing race this Sunday, September 16 in the waters off Cohasset between Sandy Beach and Minots Lighthouse. This 4.25 mile race will start and finish off Sandy Beach, making viewing the race great for shoreside spectators. The course runs out past The Grampus Rocks, to marks off Minots Lighthouse and back to a finish line off Sandy Beach. The Roundabout is open to a variety of sea-worthy rowing craft, including the sturdy 4-oared CMI shells and smaller craft rowed by 1 or 2 people.

Racing will run from 11-noon, with boats going off in staggered starts, followed by awards and music by the Rusty Skippers Band. Registration is open at 9:00 on the day of the race, but preregistration is recommended.

If you have questions about the Roundabout, please contact CMI Board member and Roundabout Chair Doug McLellan (douglasmclellan@verizon.net). For further information about CMI and its rowing programs, please check out the CMI web site ROWCMI.COM or email ROW.CMI@comcast.net.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

GIMME SHELTER

Mocha waiting for 'purrfect' home

PAULA FATERSIK

One of Hull Seaside's sweetest and gentlest young, male kitties is this week's special star. His name is Mocha, and at two-years-old, he has lost his home and has been waiting patiently to be chosen by a new family.

Mocha is such a sweet guy and he deserves the happiness that comes with a loving home. COURTESY PHOTO

Mocha came to us when his owner could no longer keep him. Like so many animals, it was hard for him to leave a home, and come to live in a group setting. Being so friendly, he did try to be buddies with other cats in his room right away, and as happens sometimes, Mocha was not accepted immediately. This was difficult for him; so he had to sit back on his own and just watch the other cats in order to keep himself safe for a while.

Well, there is great news as things have gotten much better for Mocha and now he is getting along very well with his roommates. It is wonderful to see him feeling more comfortable. But really, we want him to be more than comfy. Mocha is such a sweet guy and he deserves the happiness that comes with a loving home.

Walking into his room is always a delight as this cute boy meets and greets us to play. He also enjoys a session of gentle, loving petting. Mocha loves chasing a laser pointer, and teams up with one of his roommates, Sugah, for the game. He is a gentleman though and let's her take control. This is just one part of his soft nature.

Perhaps that is why Mocha is still with us. His gentle, quiet ways don't get him noticed right away. It is not his style to be a show off, though he is so handsome he certainly could be! With his soulful eyes, he will watch everything that is going on and then enter the group and get involved. Calm, cool and collected is a good description of him. No attitude, just a peaceful young boy who knows that there is a better life out there for him. Mocha is a fairly small cat, and very laid back, so if those traits are important to you, he may be a wonderful match.

We think that he is just perfect and are hoping that the right person, who wants a great companion and gentle pet, will come in and get to know him better. Mocha really needs a forever home, where he can have the opportunity to cuddle up, feel safe and content, and be your best friend. Mocha is so deserving and maybe yours is the perfect home for him. Please come in to meet Mocha. He may just steal your heart.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is located at 50 L St. and we have Open Hours every Monday from 6:30-7:30 and Saturdays from 2-3p.m. Our office number is 781-925-3121. You can also contact Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

Also, we have some great news! Our 2013 Kittendale's Calendars are coming out soon. Kittendale's is one of our best fundraisers and if you are getting a start on holiday gifts, this is a perfect one! Hunky guys and cute kittens make it a popular seller so please don't wait too long to order. Stop by our booth at "Endless Summer" on Nantasket Ave. on Saturday, September 15 from noon on to order yours!

To all of our supporters, we extend heartfelt thanks. HSAR is a non-profit organization run on donations. Every week there are generous people who take the time to bring items on our wish list, send tax-deductible gifts or drop off bottles and cans. Also, a big thank you to a fabulous group of dedicated volunteers, who keep our shelter clients happy and healthy.

Community Garden Club receives two awards

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is the proud recipient of two awards given by the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts for its work at the Deer Hill School.

The first award is for the Club's Junior Gardeners' Program involving 25 students in conservation, recycling, botany and design projects throughout the school year. The Club thoroughly enjoys working with the children and gives many thanks to them all for their inspiring and enthusiastic participation.

The second is the Virginia Thurston Landscape Design Award for transforming the school's courtyard into a Four Seasons Classroom. The Club is very grateful to Chris Kennedy of Kennedy's Country Gardens for his design help and donation of plant material, without which this award could not have been won.

LOCAL DAR CHAPTER REPORTS

Celebrating Constitution Week

DAR has served America for 121 years as its foremost cheerleader. In 1928, the Daughters began work on a building as a memorial to the Constitution.

The Col. Thomas Lothrop/Old Colony Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution announces the national celebration of Constitution Week, starting Sept. 17. The week-long commemoration of America's most important document is one of our country's least known official observances. Our Constitution stands as a testament to the tenacity of Americans throughout history to maintain their liberties and freedom, and to ensure those inalienable rights to every American.

The tradition of celebrating the Constitution was started many years ago by the Daughters of the American Revolution. In 1955, the Daughters petitioned Congress to set aside Sept. 17-23 annually to be dedicated for the observance of Constitution Week. The resolution was later adopted by the U.S. Congress and signed into Public Law #915 on Aug. 2, 1956, by President Dwight D. Eisenhower. The aims of the celebration are to (1) emphasize citizens' responsibilities for protecting and defending the Constitution, preserving it for posterity; (2) inform the people that the Constitution is the basis for America's great heritage and the foundation for our way of life; and (3) encourage the study of the historical events which led to the framing of the Constitution in September 1787.

The United States of America functions as a Republic under the Constitution, which is the oldest document still in active use that outlines the self-government of a people. This landmark idea that men had the inalienable right as individuals to be free and live their lives under their own governance was the impetus of the American Revolution. Today, the Constitution stands as an icon of freedom for people around the world.

"We must remember and teach that those who wrote the Constitution believed that no government can create freedom, but that government must guard freedom rather than encroach upon the freedoms of its people," said Merry Ann T. Wright, President General of the DAR. "The Constitution by itself cannot guarantee liberty. A nation's people can remain free only by being responsible citizens who are willing to learn about the rights of each arm of government and require that each is accountable for its own function. Therefore, Constitution Week is the perfect opportunity to read and study this great document which is the safeguard of our American liberties. We encourage all citizens across the country to take time this week to guard that which is committed to us by our forefathers – our freedom."

DAR has served America for 121 years as its foremost cheerleader. In 1928, the Daughters began work on a building as a memorial to the Constitution. John Russell Pope, architect of the Jefferson Memorial, was commissioned to design the performing arts center, known as DAR Constitution Hall. Today, DAR Constitution Hall is the only structure erected in tribute to the Constitution of the United States of America.

Known as the largest women's patriotic organization in the world, DAR has nearly 170,000 members with approximately 3,000 chapters in all 50 states and 13 foreign countries. The DAR has long promoted patriotism through commemorative celebrations, memorials, scholarships and activities for children, and programs for new immigrants.

DEEP TIES TO COMMUNITY

Yoga mats await members of the class.

Cohasset Yoga changing hands but not direction

In 1995, Mary Norton was a yoga teacher in Cohasset at a time when yoga studios were relatively scarce on the South Shore and everywhere — so, wherever she went her "traveling" studio was sure to go. Her car was filled with mats, music, incense, candles...always ready to be lugged in and out of any available room or space, including South Shore Community Center where she taught for eight years.

"There were very few teachers back then and one of them had just opened the Yoga Center," recalls Norton. "We both knew of, and had been curious about each other other. One day the owner, Lynn Ray, approached me and said owning a studio just wasn't for her — she asked me if I was interested in taking it over," says Norton. "I was so excited. It meant no more temporary spaces. I had found a yoga "home and could finally unpack."

That was 16 years ago.

Mary set her sights on classroom teaching. Being successful meant having enough students to pay the rent, she figured out that meant four full classes. She met that first goal and it has grown from there. Many of those first students have been with her all this time.

In a letter that Norton sent to all CYC students this month she said, "A very simple aspiration that I had when I first began here was to introduce more people to yoga and to create a safe and peaceful environment for this transforming art to be practiced. This aspiration has been fulfilled together with the reception of so many gifts that I never imagined."

Just a little less than two weeks ago Norton transferred the reigns, and ownership, to Laura Cashel. A difficult decision made easier by the fact that Cashel is a CYC student who shares the same love of the practice that Norton does. Cashel lives in Hingham and has been practicing with Mary and other CYC teachers for four years.

"I walked in here for the first time and felt immediately welcomed and safe. My practice has grown from this studio. When the opportunity came up to take it over, I knew it was right," says Cashel. "The yoga students here are so diverse...so grounded. That's what I found really appealing," says Cashel, who owned her own Wellness Studio in New York before settling on the South Shore with her husband and five children. "It's yoga in its purist form and the transfer of the business has been seamless."

Cohasset Yoga Center is more than just yoga, they also offer programs for the greater community via Friday Night Talks once a month that feature topics in health and wellness, weekend yoga workshops and weekly meditation sessions.

Cohasset Yoga Center is more than just yoga, they also offer programs for the greater community via Friday Night Talks once a month that feature topics in health and wellness, weekend yoga workshops and weekly meditation sessions.

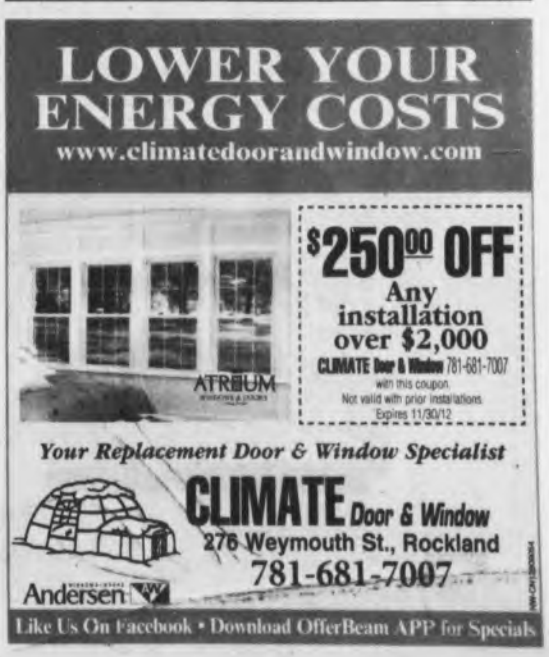
Throughout those years, CYC has cultivated deep ties and relationships with the community at large through Norton's desire to give back. Her support includes the North and South River Watershed Association (NSRWA) and Rotary organizations in Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham and Hull. She also does what she can to help places like Cohasset Recreation Department and the Library.

Cohasset Yoga is not Norton's only business. She also has had a private practice for over 20 years in Scituate where she offers lifestyle counseling and massage therapy. She says yoga is just one aspect of her life but it has been the "grounding" aspect.

The transition from Norton to Cashel has been a "lovely" one says Cashel. And they both agree that it has also been a lot of fun. It was a difficult decision for Norton but she stresses that after so many years it is the right time, the right person and definitely the right decision.

Over the next year Cohasset Yoga center will be expanding their class schedule and also the space, with a goal of keeping the integrity of what Mary Norton started 16 years ago.

Both Norton and Cashel celebrated "big" birthdays this year and both were at a crossroads in their lives. Each ready to move in different and new directions.



"It is so nice to know that someone is taking it over who has the same intention and enthusiasm that I do about this very special place," says Norton.

Namaste.

Cohasset Yoga Center is located on 3A in Jonathan Livingston Square on Route 3A. Visit cohassetyogacenter.com for class schedules.

• Thursday: Today was the picnic (with our families) and the first time I was able to have a real conversation with our homeowner. Although she doesn't say much, she clearly appreciates our work! She'll bring us food that she gets from the food pantry and she'll sometimes help with the OSB (siding) while we're cutting it in an attempt to help out. I think this is her little way of showing her gratitude. I wish we could feel closer to her but we have helped her a lot and that's what really matters.

Sunday: We're on the bus ride home now and I'm already looking forward to next year! It was an exhausting and confusing week, but I think it was a great chance for me to become generally more accepting. I realized that for the first time I was really just angry that I couldn't do more for the people down here. But I know we did provide them with a tremendous amount of hope, which is truly the most important thing! I loved my crew so much and we had such great times together and I know I'll miss them! FARMERS' MARKET

Cute and crafty

Young Cohassets showcase their wares

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Every Thursday, Cohasset's Farmers' Market on the town common offers the opportunity to shop fresh, local produce, listen to live music, and enjoy some sweet treats from local bakers. But it's also become a bit of a hotspot for artisans and crafters, and some of Cohasset's youngest residents are selling cool homemade goods.

Button bookmarks

Natalie Devin, 10, has gotten into the bookmark business, calling her brand Nilly LaLa. The team behind the enterprise, Natalie and mom Renate, work together to create button bookmarks with whimsical themes.

The bookmarks are made by covering buttons with the fabric and then affixing them to large paperclips. The result is an adorable and innovative way to save one's place on a page.

Natalie said that she and her mom got the idea from seeing similar bookmarks at a store in Colorado.

"We thought it was a cool idea," she said.

Renate said that she and Natalie order fabrics from Japan through popular arts and crafts website Etsy.com.

"Japan has all these cool fabrics," Renate explained. "They have themes like 'Red Riding Hood.'"

She added that the bookmarks make "perfect" gifts for any book lover.

"Now everybody is going to Nook and Kindle, but for people still reading books, it's kind of fun," said Renate.

Rope bracelets

The Nilly LaLa table is right next to that of another young Cohasset crafter and entrepreneur: Elena Marcelli. Elena, 10, is selling rope bracelets that she and her mom, Erin, dye fun, summery colors.

If the line at her table is any indication, the rope bracelet is the quintessential nautical accessory for kids in a seaside town.

Renate called Elena's bracelets "the hit of all the farmers' market."

Elena demurred, but said that she's been making them since February. This is the first and only farmers' market where she has sold the bracelets.

Elena's mom, Erin, said that she and Elena order the bracelets in white and dye them in their basement.

"We leave them in dye for two hours," said Elena, adding that they're "fun to make."

Erin said that rope bracelets were in fashion when she was Elena's age.

The rope bracelets catch the eye of Victoria Dalzell, 8, and her sister Paula, 5, whose parents recently moved them to Cohasset from Austria. The girls took in the market with their grandmother Dottie, who was visiting from North Carolina. PHOTO/ERIN DALE

"Being in a sailing community, we all used to wear them as kids," Erin recalled. The bracelets she and her friends wore started out white, and they wore them "until they turned black."

One customer chimed in, "I had these as a kid; I'm glad they're back."

The Cohasset farmers' market takes place every Thursday, from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m., on the town common.

Return of the Dog Parade!

It's been a while, but the popular Dog Parade returns to the Cohasset Farmers Market at 4 p.m. Thursday. Sept. 20. To participate, simply dress up your dog in the costume of your choice and be a part of the most festive parades you've ever seen.

Judging the event will be Terry Haskins of The Dog Butler and a certified professional trainer specializing in in-home customized dog training. Prizes will be awarded. So start thinking about a creative canine costume, the "wilder" the better, and get ready for some friendly competition. Don't forget to do a little shopping at the market before or after the Dog Parade. The Cohasset Farmers Market is held from 2 to 6 p.m. Thursdays through Oct. 18.

NEIGHBORHOOD DISPUTE

Con Com to reopen contentious house project hearing

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Conservation Commission voted last Thursday to reopen a hearing for a building project at 559 Jerusalem Road. The project has been a matter of neighborhood dispute and came before the Con Com in five hearings this year. The commission originally voted to deny the applicants a stormwater application, but that decision was appealed to the Norfolk Superior Court and the state's Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). Now, the commissioners have been served with court summons.

After listening to the applicant, Chris Ford, and his attorney Charles Humphreys once more, the Con Com voted 5-0 to reopen the hearing.

Ford said he is trying to build a family home at 559 Jerusalem Road, on behalf of his brother Ted, but was denied a Stormwater Management Permit from the Conservation Commission this past spring after several hearings on the matter.

The Ford brothers, represented by Humphreys, filed an appeal to the Norfolk Superior Court in July asking the court to annul the Con Com's decision to deny the permit and enter a judgment ordering the commission to issue one.

They then served the Con Com with court summons, questioning whether or not the board's vote was proper, as not all of the members who voted against the project attended all of the project's hearings. The commission held five hearings on the property beginning in January and ending in May.

Con Com chair Jack Creighton said that the board voted to deny Ford a permit after "numerous spirited discussions." Ford and Humphreys approached Creighton last month to see if the Con Com would be "amenable to reopening" the hearing, as the two felt the commission lacked "sufficient information" relative to the aspects of the project the board was concerned about.

Humphreys said the appeal would allow his clients to answer questions that had not been answered previously to the Con Com's satisfaction, which should then enable the commission to issue the permit. The attorney added that issuing a stormwater permit should not be a problem because his clients are following DEP standards to ensure local wetlands are not negatively impacted. The building project overlooks Straits Pond.

Commissioner Ed Graham said that he is a member of the Straits Pond Watershed Association and is concerned as to how the builders would get equipment in and out during the project.

"We need to be assured we protect the rights of the Straits Pond Association and the waterway around it." Graham did not think the construction could take place without an infraction of the 50-foot buffer zone.

"We still want to protect Straits Pond and the resources we've got," said Humphreys. "We will present definitively what the board's looking for so the board will be comfortable to grant it."

Creighton said during Thursday's meeting that Ford and his attorney said they wanted the hearing to be limited to only the issues that led to the Con Com's denial, but the chairman explained that if the hearing is reopened, all of the issues will be back on the table.

"We are a regulatory body, we can't omit anything," Creighton said. "Things may come up."

The project overlooks what the chair called a "critical environmental area" whose protection falls under the commission's purview. Creighton explained that he is "uncomfortable with anything that restricts our ability to protect Straits Pond."

Con Com members were served court summons by Ford, though at least one said that he was served improperly. Graham said that his summons was left in his door when he wasn't home: "I thought it had to be hand delivered to me?" Graham wondered if the town has a "relaxed" policy on serving court summons.

"We need to be assured we protect the rights of the Straits Pond Association and the waterway around it."
Ed Graham, Conservation Commission

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, who was in the audience, assured that the town does not have a relaxed policy on these matters, but that he would defer to the lawyers.

Attorney Patrick Kennedy, an associate member of the Con Com, asked Humphreys why the Con Com should reopen the hearing and reconsider the actual vote: if they did, would Ford drop the suit?

"You need to make a decision as to whether to reopen with pending litigation," said Milanoski.

Peter DeCaprio, an abutter to the property, said that he thinks the Con Com caved under the pressure of a lawsuit. He challenged that anyone at any time could threaten to sue the Con Com and get them to reopen hearings that have been closed.

DeCaprio said in a previous meeting, which he attended with his lawyer, Jay Talerman, that he could provide an affidavit proving that the Fords plan to sell the property as a lot and will not develop a house there. Chris Ford, a real estate developer who owns buildings in downtown Cohasset, said at the same meeting that he only planned to build a home.

Talerman cautioned the Con Com at the time against making a decision with litigation being held over their heads. He also told the board that if the matter went before the Superior Court, the Con Com would prevail.

Tanna Kasperowicz of South Main Street was in the audience Thursday night and asked the commission, "How does that hurt the Con Com if they don't withdraw their lawsuit? What does it matter?"

"That's a good question for us to consider," said Creighton. He explained that he had spoken to Ford and Humphreys and was now informing the rest of the commission about the Fords' request. "It's important as a public body that when members of the public asked to be reconsidered, the commission should listen."

But DeCaprio asked, "Is it sensible to listen under threat of a lawsuit?"

Humphreys said that his client had met all the permitting requirements, and that they wouldn't have asked to be reconsidered if they weren't trying to resolve the Con Com's questions. "We wouldn't have a standing to ask to be reconsidered," he said. "The matter would be closed."

Humphreys also said that in conversations with the DEP, he was told they would hold the appeal "to see whether we could work out a solution."

Creighton said that he spoke with Greg DeCesare of the DEP, who explained that it's possible for the Con Com to reopen the hearing and address conservation issues in more detail, and that "he would hold off on issuing a decision if we could work it out."

DeCaprio said that DEP was likely to rule in the applicant's favor in the end rather than the Con Com, "as a matter of course" so they could "move on and deal with the next issue."

Conservation agent Paul Shea weighed in based on his experience working in other towns. Reopening the hearing, he said, "allows the applicant to move forward; otherwise it's in court, and it's out there for a long time."

But Shea said he agreed with DeCaprio that DEP was most likely to side with the applicant on this one just to make the matter go away.

"DEP is most likely going to issue a superseding order of conditions," Shea explained. "They don't pay attention to the 50 foot buffer zone — towns do."

But the Con Com exists to uphold the local wetlands bylaw, Creighton explained. "Peter is right, and attorney Humphreys would probably agree that state standards substantially differ from town standards and the town of Cohasset bylaws."

Other members of the commission gave their thoughts on the matter.

Jim Marten said that he was concerned the Con Com would set a precedent by reopening the hearing, but at the same time, "I think we need to have as much daylight on this issue as possible."

Assistant chair David Farrag said the commission could consider reopening the hearing just to clear the air. "We want to uphold the board's vote," he said.

DeCaprio suggested letting the Superior Court rule on whether or not the commission upheld their duties. "You ruled and you ruled effectively," he said. "Let [Ford] fight it out in superior court."

Farrag said the issue was not so much whether the Con Com did their part to uphold the town bylaw, but "the validity of the vote" they took to deny the Fords their permit. "All the board members have to be at all the hearings; if not, they have to file an affidavit," Farrag, an attorney, explained.

Kennedy said that the commission also wanted to avoid legal expenses, but Creighton said that he had some "informal, nonbinding discussions" that the town would defend the Con Com's position in court.

The chair told his fellow board members to make their decision not based on getting served or worrying about whether the board would win in Superior Court. "I believe we will," he said. "The town has our back."

Humphreys reiterated that the purpose of reopening the hearing is to "address questions members raised regarding this application." And if those questions are then answered, Ford's attorney said that he expects the Con Com's decision to be reversed.

"The fact is we could always duke it out to end and spend a fortune," said Humphreys. "We're trying to avoid that."

Creighton asked if Humphrey's client would take care of the necessary public notifications required for a hearing so that reopening wouldn't cost the town anything.

"That's our obligation," Humphreys said.

Creighton said in a phone call that no matter what the neighborhood issues are with the building project, the conservation commission is only trying to uphold their duties to protect local wetlands. This is why Ford's application was initially denied.

"The conservation commission did not feel they were given sufficient information on the environmental impact on the project, especially considering it is next to Straits Pond, a critical environmental area, so we voted against them," said Creighton. "We have given them the opportunity to come back before us if they're willing to address the environmental impact on Straits Pond. The applicant originally took the position that they would like to restrict what we could consider; our answer to that was that we will consider everything in our purview, we will not be restricted, and that was made very clear to them.

"The conservation commission will protect Straits Pond; that is our job and that is what we will do," Creighton added. "We're going to do our job and we're going to do it properly."

FISH volunteers

Cohasset F.I.S.H. is currently in need of a few more volunteer drivers. This organization provides rides to medical appointments for those in Cohasset without other options. Each volunteer is scheduled to drive (if needed) one weekday per month using their own vehicle. Our corps of drivers has declined over the summer months as a result of relocations, disabilities, or simple aging issues — thus the need for more volunteers.

If you are available and might be interested in serving Cohasset residents in this easy manner, please contact Dick Avery at 383-6043 or leave a message with the F.I.S.H. answering service (781) 545-7073.

OUR VIEW

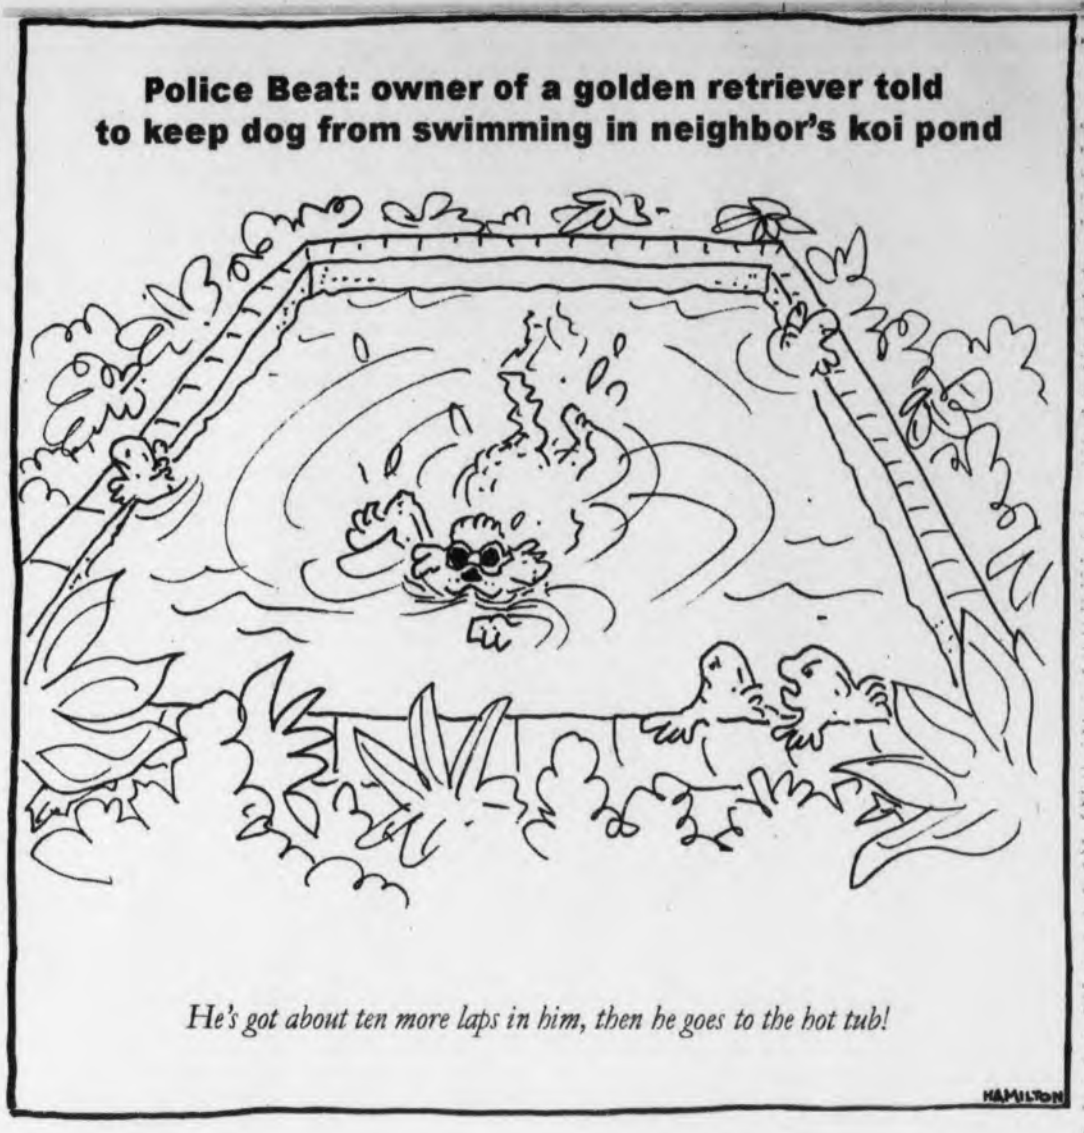
Protective Custody

A state law passed in the early 1970s decriminalized drunkenness. That means that being drunk, in and of itself, is not a crime. A person incapacitated from drugs alone, however, does not fall under the provisions of this law.

The law was passed because historically, arrests for drunkenness had constituted a high proportion of police activity in every community. More arrests were made for drunkenness than all other offenses combined with the exception of traffic offenses.

What police can do when an individual is drunk is take him or her into protective custody. We raise the issue following an interesting back 'n' forth discussion we had on Facebook with a Facebook friend recently about what constitutes a "PC" and why police just don't take the individual home to sleep it off. We often cover "PCs" in our weekly Police Beat and in the police log we publish however, the individual's name is not printed because being taken into protective custody is not an arrest.

Police stress that medical issues and welfare of the person involved is paramount when dealing with protective custody matters at the scene. No part of a PC becomes a criminal matter or appears in any arrest history. However, police can handcuff and pat down a drunken subject similar to when they make an arrest.



We want to make it perfectly clear that the law, dubbed Chapter 111B, does not affect drunken driving which is a crime.

Once in PC, police can assist the person, with or without their consent, to: their residence (if someone will take responsibility for them); a treatment facility (this option is not always feasible due to restrictions at detox facilities) or the police station where they can be held for up to 12 hours.

Often a phone call to a family member or friend will result in that person coming to the station to pick the individual up. Sometimes, the family does not want the person brought home until he or she is sobered up.

In some cases what starts as a PC ends up, as an arrest if a crime is committed due to the individual's actions or behavior.

Alcoholism is a disease often causing crimes including breach of the public peace, damage to property, assault and battery, and domestic violence. PC is a tool that police can use to handle a drunken individual before that person hurts himself or herself or someone else.

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Whose lack of political will is it?

In last week's article in the Mariner regarding a sewer hookup for the Lightkeeper's cottage, Karen Quigley was quoted via email saying that the reason the sewer connection was still stalled was due to a "lack of political will." As is all too common with many of Ms. Quigley's self-serving comments, dutifully reported by the Mariner at every opportunity, laying the blame elsewhere is the point she was trying to make – that she, of course, would do better. Really? Why didn't she? Wasn't she, a former member of the Harbor Health Committee, also the chair of the Board of Selectman at a point in the period in question? A member of the Board for three of those years? Why didn't she get anything done when she had the chance? Why isn't the "lack of political will" hers?

Those familiar with Ms. Quigey's management M.O. — that it is always best to seek honor and glory at someone else's expense - will recognize the pattern. Distracting the rest of us from the true culprits is her real goal. We are, after all, coming up on another election cycle.

Let the games begin.

Remembering Polly Litchfield

Thank you to all those who came from near and far to attend the Sept. 1st Memorial Mass and luncheon in honor of Polly Laugelle Litchfield.

Polly was born and raised in Cohasset, the youngest with her twin Peter of 12 children. She was well and widely loved for her generous and caring spirit as witnessed by the large gathering of friends and extended family. A special thanks to Father Mulvehill and to all who organized and served the luncheon at St. Anthony's Parish Hall.

Unjust criticism of Deputy Chief

The criticism of Deputy Police Chief Quigley is unjust (Aug. 31 fireworks letter "Roys singled out, treated unfairly"). His action should be recognized as a public safety decision, not a "perplexed" issue of comparisons.

Chief Quigley's action displayed a concern for all the citizens of Cohasset, in a Town with a history of questionable public safety ethics.

IMPORTANT UPDATE

Senior Center study: public survey

The town-wide survey on the proposed Senior Center project has been delayed. The online survey was going to be available on Sept. 15, but the date has been changed to Sept. 20. The town hired consultants from UMass Boston to create an electronic survey using the Survey Monkey format.

All Cohasset residents aged 18 and over will receive a postcard in the mail with log-in information and instructions to access the survey.

Internet access is available at the town library and at the Council on Aging office. Student volunteers will offer assistance to those who need help accessing the internet.

The survey's results are confidential and survey takers are not required to enter an email address or other personal information.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Spending time at the farm stand

JON BELBER

The barn was crowded with other fresh food enthusiasts that seemed to gently ignore the recent study claiming that conventional produce holds just as many nutrients as organically grown produce.

It may seem odd for a farm teacher to spend time at the farm stand. After all, wouldn't you think he could grow his own? Well, there are some things I grow and I am able to walk out to my (albeit quite weedy) side yard and pick some kale, herbs and sun gold tomatoes from the waning plants. But, I made a point to go to the Saturday morning farm stand at Holly Hill for a bit more than vegetables.

On a Saturday morning in September, as with the height of summer in anticipation of tomatoes, there is often a line on the steps and into the driveway of folks waiting – first and foremost – to pounce on the 10 or so egg cartons, each one full of brown and green eggs gathered during the week from the hard working hens. These farm fresh eggs, with their orangey yokes make store bought eggs seem pale by comparison. And often grocery store eggs are paler for having traveled for many months to arrive at the dairy section. Beyond the eggs, at this time of year, there are tomatoes, salad greens, beets, carrots, herbs, potatoes, onions, arugula, individually designed flower bouquets, turnips, bread, syrup, watermelon, sunflowers, and early winter squash, such as sleek, green racing stripe delicata squash.

I may have missed a vegetable or two as it was crowded in the Main Barn, which dates back to 1785, and there were many a scurrying farmer stocking the baskets, bins, and tables. They all awoke early to get a jump on the harvest, even though there was the calming 8 a.m. yoga-on-the-farm weekly practice going on at the same time.

The barn was crowded with other fresh food enthusiasts that seemed to gently ignore the recent study claiming that conventional produce holds just as many nutrients as organically grown produce. And it seemed there was a lot of buzz about what might be prepared for dinner. These customers may also still prefer produce grown without the use of chemicals and synthetic fertilizers, and thus have made sure to include Holly Hill as a stop on their Saturday morning chores.

Still there was a bit more going on as people were loading their baskets.

Though people do see a neighbor or someone they know in the produce or frozen food aisle at the grocery store, there is something unique about looking out the back doors, open to let in the daylight, of the barn to see some of those very same egg laying hens, who also arose before dawn and jumped out of their nesting boxes to reveal a farm fresh egg for collection. A glance into one of the stalls in the barn finds the hard working owner carefully selecting cut flowers that stand at attention in buckets of water. These cuts were picked and snipped the evening before, so they could make their way into arrangements that will find their way onto mantles, tables and sunlit windows to add beauty to any one of those settings.

The checkout assistant at the counter, who happened to bring the bread and will spend some of her afternoon in the fields, does not have a black conveyer belt to slowly slide the veggies and works without the aid of a calculator. Rather, she adds in her head, marvels at the selections, offers a satchel if needed and presents a total.

I was fortunate to know a few customers and was excited to greet them, chat about the busy fall season of programs at the farm, discuss a new school farm garden plan and just to marvel at the variety.

Even if you do not know anyone and just want a head of lettuce, a carrot and parsley, then you could go about your business and hopefully leave with what you need. It is a fact that a visit on a morning in September to the farm stand with its bountiful choices might help keep the farmers farming and working the land to generate such food. Anyone who grows food, flowers or sews his or her own clothes and takes time to create something, likes to know it is appreciated and even worth lining up for.

And with summer still on the calendar until late September, may there be more weekend days at the ol' farm stand, with crowded tables, deliberating customers and smiling farmers.

FOR THE RECORD

Weighing in on school lunches

GREGORY MATHIS

We've come to expect our school system to do far more than teach our children about reading, writing and arithmetic.

Summer ended with a splash at our favorite water park in northeast Pennsylvania Labor Day weekend as we squeezed in one last trip before the start of the new school year.

While the rides are most definitely the main attraction, there is also a fair amount of people watching what goes on at this popular park that draws visitors from near and far. And one of the most striking observations during our many visits over the years is child obesity is most definitely a problem.

That's certainly not breaking news or some sort of break-through observation. Obesity and child obesity in particular have been studied, reported on, and debated for many years.

With students back in school, the issue is often a discussion point when it comes to school lunches. The federal government and Massachusetts agencies have weighed in with stricter guidelines intended to put healthier food on students' trays. In fact, Massachusetts has adopted school nutrition standards that are among the strictest in the country, which some school districts have begun to implement and others will soon be following suit.

It's good to see Massachusetts once again leading the charge. Eliminating bad foods, limiting the amounts of fat and salt in foods, and banning sugared drinks will go a long way to reducing calories consumed during the school day.

It's a start, but it's not going to solve the problem.

School lunch is still about personal choice. If schools are providing healthier choices that students don't like, they're going to skip eating or bring in their own lunch from home.

Some school districts are already starting to see the financial ramifications of serving healthier food, especially with older students, who are buying lunch far less often. Younger students are bringing lunch from home with foods they like, which oftentimes don't reflect healthy choices.

The declining number of lunches being purchased can put a strain on budgets, as most school food service programs are set up to be self-sustaining. Some schools have considered reducing food service staff and limiting the menu selection even more just to break even.

At least one local school district is trying to build excitement for school lunches by engaging elementary students with a nutrition awareness program called Build-A-Tray. The idea is to get students to make healthy choices from a variety of food groups as they go through the lunch line. The program also includes posters hung throughout cafeterias and literature to help drive home the importance of healthy eating habits and choices.

We've come to expect our school system to do far more than teach our children about reading, writing and arithmetic. As a parent, I applaud the efforts of the federal and state government and the school systems in recognizing the need for standards and guidelines when it comes to our children's health and well-being. But I also know that parents and students need to practice good eating habits outside of school if we're ever going to tip the scales in favor of healthy children.

'From Other to Brother'

A Sermon preached by the Rev. Margot D. Critchfield
St. Stephen's Church, Cohasset
September 9, 2012
James 2: 1-17; Mark 7: 24-37

(Editor's note: The Mariner asked for a copy of the Rev. Critchfield's sermon for publication).

The email from The Cohasset Mariner last Wednesday was straight forward enough. "Margot," it read, "is the homeless man still camping out at St. Stephen's? Items in the police log indicate he had your permission to set up camp."

"Really?!?" I thought to myself, "Like I would let a homeless man set up camp on the church's property? Are you serious?"

But then, in light of this week's readings, I've wondered a lot about my reaction to that email, and why the very idea seemed so preposterous and so totally outrageous.

Because as we just heard, both James' letter and Mark's gospel address the issue of our openness (or lack thereof) to those we perceive as the "other"— whether that "other" is one James describes as "a poor person in dirty clothes" who appears in the otherwise well-dressed assembly, or one Mark describes as "a Gentile woman of Syrophoenician origin", who encroaches totally inappropriately on Jesus' mission to his own people, God's chosen ones.

In my case, the "other" came in the form of the homeless man The Mariner was asking about — a very shabbily dressed and decidedly strange sort of fellow, who looked a lot like you might imagine Jesus to have looked if he'd lived to be 60. A friendly sort, this homeless man showed up at church two weeks ago, bounding with energy and introducing himself with an easy smile as "Richard." Now, I would be lying to you if I said that as I greeted Richard that morning and welcomed him to St. Stephen's, I felt entirely comfortable. I didn't. Because you see, Richard —to me — was already "the other." Without even being conscious of it, I had done exactly what James tells us not to do: I had made a judgment about Richard...made a distinction between him and everyone else — a distinction between him and me...a distinction every bit as clear as between Jew and Gentile. And that distinction distanced me from him.

Admittedly, you didn't have to talk to Richard very long to conclude that he was a bit — shall we say "different" by mainstream standards. He appeared seemingly out of nowhere at our coffee hour in the courtyard, said he was homeless by choice, that he'd spent the previous night sleeping on a piece of "Mrs. Dean's" property near the church, and that he'd grown up in Scituate but hadn't been back to this area in years. He spoke passionately (some might even say maniacally) about his love of Jesus Christ, described rich mystical visions of angelic helpers and divine messages, reminisced about his parents and his childhood, then disappeared almost as suddenly as he appeared — having declined our offers of help, and professing his love for all of us one last time as he waved goodbye.

So when the police called me late the following night to say a homeless man was planning on sleeping on the church's property, and asked if it was okay for him to "set up camp" there, I was — admittedly — a bit flummoxed. But they needed an answer: Did I want this guy — this "other"— removed from our property or not?

It's one of those situations that seminary just can't prepare you for! Half asleep, I asked God for a really quick answer, while hemming and hawing to Sgt. Treanor like the totally clueless and fallen creature I am — until I finally heard myself say: "Why don't we let him sleep there tonight — but be sure he understands it's just for one night, okay?

And with that, after emailing the vestry wardens, I tried to go back to sleep. But I wondered: Had I made the right decision? Was I putting anyone at risk? Was this what James meant when he wrote about mercy triumphing over judgment, or simply a case of liberal guilt? I mean, what would Jesus do? Maybe I should've said something metaphorical and Zen-sounding like Jesus in this morning's Gospel: "Let the children be put to bed first, for it is not fair to take the children's cradles and give them to the dogs to sleep in."

Well, the next day, after making sure our parish secretary wouldn't arrive at church before us, Adam and I met with Richard in the Watermelon Room. And something remarkable happened I couldn't make up if I tried. Something unexpected and mysteriously grace-filled. Something our readings this morning point to: You see, Richard went from being the "other" to being our neighbor — our neighbor as in, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself."

Because despite what we may or may not have been feeling about Richard, by the grace of God, in our actions toward him — in what James would call our "works"— we treated Richard like the human-being he is, like the beloved child of God he is — and in the process we became more human. It was as if through Richard, Jesus laid his hands on our hearts and whispered, "Ephphatha! Be opened!" And Richard was no longer the "other," he was our brother. Mind you, he was still very different...still, I must admit, beyond the boundaries of what I would call "normal." But who was I to judge? He was a fellow traveler on the way and everything was completely different.

Adam made tea, and the three of us sat and talked for about an hour. Richard had a last name, a history, an amazing life story to tell of success and failure, family and friends, addiction and recovery. A story of crime and redemption, death and rebirth. He was filled with amazing faith and gratitude.

And don't you know that when we suggested he go to Wellspring in Hull, he thought it was a great idea — but not for the reasons we intended. No. Richard thought going to Wellspring was a great idea not because he needed help, but because he thought he could help other people there —and what Richard wants to do with his life is help people and serve Jesus.

Now, I wonder — who was the face of Christ to whom here?

You see, Richard was my Gentile woman of Syrophoenician origin. He called me out of my comfort zone; he challenged me to act in concert with what I profess about living in right relationship; he opened me to a more expansive and inclusive reality of what it means to love my neighbor — all of my neighbors — no matter how different or "other" they may seem; and he modeled mission and ministry for me in his desire to serve others selflessly in gratitude for the love of Christ.

Not bad for someone the police log, The Mariner, and I all referred to as "the homeless man" with the kind of cool detachment one usually reserves for an inanimate object.

Maybe I should have invited him to camp out here after all...

You know, the "Gospel Question" that our Biblical Preaching Project asked us to reflect on this week had to do with how we thought the Gentile woman's response to Jesus effected him. You'll remember that in Mark's gospel, when Jesus hesitates to heal the Gentile woman's daughter he says, "Let the children be fed first, for it is not fair to take the children's food and throw it to the dogs, " — and the woman retorts right away, "Sir, even the dogs under the table eat the children's crumbs," at which point Jesus commends the woman's wisdom and does, in fact, heal her daughter.

Now, whether or not Jesus actually referred to Gentiles using a common 1st century ethnic slur the way Americans once used ethnic slurs and told tasteless jokes in ways that now make us shudder — that really isn't the point. The point is that whether or not Jesus used these exact words, and whether or not they were offensive in his 1st century context — the writer of Mark's gospel wants us to notice that this Gentile woman — this unclean, female, "other"— somehow opens Jesus to a more expansive and inclusive sense of his mission and ministry. It is no coincidence that this story appears just after the feeding of the 5,000 — who are Jews — and before the feeding of the 4,000 — who are Gentiles. Mark uses Jesus and the Gentile woman in this story to open his reader's hearts to what was, in the context of 1st century Judaism — the "other." Just as surely as God used Richard to open my heart.

We all have groups or individuals who function as "the other" in our lives. And often we don't even know it. I was, quite honestly, ashamed when I realized I was relating to Richard "the homeless man" that way. But I was equally delighted to learn that with God's grace when I acted differently, the way my faith teaches me to, I was richly blessed and made more human.

At St. Stephen's we take great pride in how welcoming we are, and in particular to the way we not only embrace but even celebrate the breadth and depth of our theological and political differences. It's really quite awesome.

Yet as individuals, I'm willing to bet we each have "others" in our lives — groups or individuals God is inviting us to relate to differently. Groups or individuals God is inviting us to connect with, rather than distance ourselves from. Groups or individuals who might stretch us out of our comfort zone, challenge us to behave differently, open us to a more merciful and less judgmental way of being, and make us better Christians.

For some that "other" might be a religious group or political party, a certain social class, nationality, or demographic. But far more often my guess is that for most of us the "other" is the person we once called a friend, the family member to whom we no longer speak, the neighbor we never bothered to get to know, any number of invisible, anonymous people we walk through life treating as objects rather than human beings, or maybe even the person sitting next to us in the pew this morning.

So your mission this week (should you choose to accept it!) is to ask God for the grace of awareness, so you might recognize one of the "others" in your life. Ask God to show you your own Syrophoenician woman. Then see what happens when your works reflect your faith instead of your feelings. See what happens when your mercy triumphs over your judgment. See what happens when Jesus says to you, "Ephphatha, be opened."

And don't be surprised if you find yourself astonished beyond words! Amen.

Hedlund faces Davis in Nov. 6 election

Low turnout for state primary

By Carol Britton-Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Due to a lack of races, turnout at the Sept. 6 election was low — 7.3 percent in Cohasset. In all, only 410 of Cohasset's 5,626 registered voters cast ballots.

The low turnout could change. With less than two months until the General Election, races are heating up all around. General Elections that include voting for US President tend to draw mega-turnouts in the 80 percent and over range.

Locally, long-time state Senator Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, faces a challenge from Genevieve Davis of Norwell for the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Cohasset.

Hedlund said he looks forward to debating the issues with Davis. "I hope we can get into some issues," he said. Hedlund said he hopes the campaigns would focus on the issues, including transportation, which is at the top of his list, and not degenerate into name-calling or negativity that is occurring in political races around the country.

Davis, who has 40 years of professional financial experience in the non-profit arena as a financial consultant, said she is looking forward to the weeks ahead.

"I feel pretty good about the contest ahead of me, I thought the primary was the harder challenge," she said. Davis says she will "stick to her guns on the issues" and does not have an ego. "I would find a way to get things done without having an ego behind it."

In the Nov. 6 general election:

- President Barack Obama, a Democrat, faces a challenge from former Massachusetts Republican Governor Mitt Romney;
- Democrat Elizabeth A. Warren will run against Senator Scott P. Brown, a Republican;
- Republican longtime State Senator Robert Hedlund will face Democrat Genevieve Davis.
- Democrat incumbent Stephen F. Lynch will run against Republican Joe Selvaggi for Representative in Congress;
- Democrat incumbent John R. Buckley, Jr. will run against Republican Anthony Thomas O'Brien, Sr. for Register of Deeds; and
- Democrat Greg Hanley will face Republican Daniel A. Pallotta and unenrolled candidate MaryAnne Lewis for two Plymouth County open county commissioner seats.
- State Rep. Garrett Bradley, a Democrat, is unopposed.

Looking toward Nov. 6 general election

Republican Town Committee election view: Chair Ray Kasperowicz – "Each election we're facing over the last few years is more and more critical because our national financial affairs are extremely fragile. We're on the verge of insolvency. I'd like to hear our national candidates remind people that we really are close to insolvency, and that's a major problem.

"The Obama administration talks about weeding out fraud and abuse; that starts right in the White House, with vacations and layers and layers of bureaucracy... The state has similar problems. A lot of functions they try to do are quite costly; chief among them is the cost of maintaining the defined benefit plan for government employees... We can't afford this right now; it's unsustainable. These are the battles, and it calls for adult political leadership and mature adult voters who have to finally realize what's going on. And those who are not mature voters have to be convinced that if all they're worried about is their next entitlement check from the government, it could all be gone in years. They have to think, what is the greatest societal benefit? That's the big battle of the decade, and it's going to continue."

The RTC has moved its monthly meetings from the Lightkeepers House to the Library. The committee meets on the last Monday of each month; the next meeting is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 24 at 7 p.m.

Democratic Town Committee view: Member Agnes McCann – "We are probably most concerned with electing Obama President and Elizabeth Warren to the Senate so we have some prayer of controlling the senate and getting something done, and everything good that would go along with that. The economy, the health of the middle class, trying to address that, getting the middle class back on its feet.

"It's a question of, did you watch the conventions, and who are you for? Are we in this together or are you are on our own? The income of a man today is $4 an hour less than was in 1979. We're in bad shape and the Republicans insist the way to fix that is to make life easier on the people who have a lot. It doesn't work, never worked, and it won't work. The Democrats have ideas for getting the engine going again, getting people back to work, generating work by generating demand. The top one percent has soaked up the wealth in this land, the land of good and plenty — they've got the plenty, we've got nothing. Those two catchphrases sum it up: you're on your own with them, or we're working together."

The DTC meets on the first Saturday of each month at the Library. The next meeting is scheduled for October 13 at 9 a.m. October 11 is the committee's Annual Unity Party from 6 – 8:30 p.m. at the Atlantica.

Volume 38 - Report No. 36 September 7, 2012

Y = Yes; N = No, NV = No Vote (President rarely votes) * Not every item is voted on by both House and Senate

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call has obtained the official list from the state treasurer's office of the "per diem" travel, meals and lodging reimbursements collected by the Legislature's 39 state senators from January 1, 2012 to September 4, 2012. The list reveals that senators have collected a total of $33,863.

Under state law, per diems are paid by the state to senators "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." These reimbursements are given to senators above and beyond their regular salaries.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a senator resides and its distance from the Statehouse. The Legislature in 2000 approved a law doubling these per diems to the current amounts. The payments range from $10 per day for senators who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 per day for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 per day for those in Nantucket. Senators who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often collect the highest total of annual per diems.

Supporters of the per diems say the system is fair and note the rising costs of travel, food and lodging. They note many legislators spend a lot of money on traveling to Boston and some spend the night in Boston following late sessions.

Some opponents argue most other private sector and state workers are not paid additional money for commuting. Others say the very idea of paying any per diem is outrageous when thousands of workers have lost their jobs and homes and funding for important programs has been cut.

The 2012 statistics indicate that nine senators, have received reimbursements ranging from $2,052 to $7,470, while 30 senators have so far chosen not to apply for any money. State law does not establish a deadline that senators must meet in order to collect the per diems.

The senator who has received the most per diem money in 2012 is Sen. Benjamin Downing (D-Pittsfield) with $7,470. The other eight senators who received money include Sens. Michael Rodrigues (D-Westport), $4,365; Stanley Rosenberg (D-Amherst), $4,080; Daniel Wolf (D-Harwich), $3,960; James Welch (D-West Springfield), $3,762; Michael Knapik (R-Westfield), $2,904; Jennifer Flanagan (D-Leominster), $2,722; Bruce Tarr (R-Gloucester), $2548; and Michael Moore (D-Millbury), $2,052.

LOCAL SENATORS' PER DIEMS FOR 2012

The dollar figure next to the senator's name represents the total amount of per diem money the state has paid him or her for 2012. The number in parentheses represents the number of days the senator certified he or she was at the Statehouse during that same period.

FUEL STAMPS, TERMINAL ILLNESS AND DISABLED PERSONS - The Committee on Children, Families and Persons with Disabilities has recommended that several bills be sent to a study committee including legislation that would establish a gasoline assistance program that issues "fuel stamps" for free gas for senior citizens and handicapped persons who have owned a small business for six years or longer in which the use of their automobile is essential (H 1864). Other bills include one that creates a pilot program that would provide up to a $10,000 one-time, state-funded low-interest loan to help 30 individuals in Massachusetts pay their expenses incurred as a result of their child being diagnosed with a terminal illness (H 978). Another measure prohibits any state-funded mental health programs or facilities for individuals with disabilities from using any procedure on their patients that denies adequate sleep, food, shelter, bedding or bathroom facilities or causes physical pain like hitting, pinching and electric shock for the purposes of changing the behavior of the person (H 77). Most measures shipped off to a study committee are never actually studied and are essentially defeated.

WELFARE RECIPIENTS AND ELDERLY GAYS - Other proposals that are headed for a study committee include establishing a program for random drug testing of anyone receiving public assistance who has been convicted on any drug-related charge (H 974) and requiring the Department of Elder Affairs to work to improve access to services for lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender elders and caregivers (H 48). It requires all caregivers who receive funding from the department to be trained in the field of providing services to these groups.

HIKE MINIMUM WAGE (H 2291) - The Labor and Workforce Development Committee has recommended that legislation raising the minimum hourly wage from $8 to $10 over three years be shipped off to a study committee. The wage would rise to $8.75 the first year, $9.50 the second year and $10 in year three. The measure also provides that the $10 wage be automatically raised annually to reflect increases in the Consumer Price Index.

BED BUGS (H 109) - The Consumer Protection Committee suggests a study committee be the fate of a bill that would prohibit the sale of bed mattresses without an encasement designed to keep bed bugs from entering mattresses and/or to keep existing bed bugs trapped.

MALE BREAST CANCER (H 4019) - The House and Senate gave final approval to and sent to Gov. Deval Patrick a measure designating the third week in October of each year as Male Breast Cancer Awareness Week to raise awareness of the occurrence of breast cancer in men and to encourage regular screenings.

HOMELESS

Adam Thomas, would offer the man some food and assistance, and that would be that. What she didn't count on was getting to know this man named Richard as someone beyond "the homeless man"— and receiving a blessing in return.

Meeting Richard

Critchfield said that she first came across Richard during the church's coffee hour in between morning services on Sunday, August 26.

"This fellow just appeared out of nowhere," Critchfield recalled. "He had boundless energy and was friendly and outgoing. He introduced himself, said he was homeless by choice and had spent the night at steps near Mrs. Dean's property... I took him to refer to the real estate office on Main Street."

The reverend said that Richard then told her that walking up on the steps, beneath the church tower, was a miracle. Richard went on to talk about seeing angels and being "in love with the Lord," whom he said takes care of him.

"We offered him assistance," said Critchfield. "He said he didn't need any."

The reverend explained that Richard looked like "what we would call a Jesus freak back in the day."

"Margot said it right in her sermon," Thomas chimed in, "if Jesus had lived to be 60, there's a good chance he would've looked like this guy."

Critchfield found out through her first conversation with Richard that he grew up in Scituate and his family was well-known and owned liquor stores in the area.

"He had been quite successful at one point," said Critchfield, explaining that Richard had just arrived back in the South Shore area from Seattle. "How he ended up in Washington State, I honestly don't know," she said. Richard also said that he is on disability and has a bank account.

The man, who was wearing sunglasses that day, also told the reverend that he was nearly blind, "but he definitely doesn't look it," Critchfield said. "His eyes area very blue and clear-looking. I didn't know what to make of someone like that."

Richard asked the reverend if she would be around Monday to chat, but she told him she was off that day and would be back in the office Tuesday.

But Richard got the reverend's attention the next day, through the police call. Richard had evidently gone around to the neighbors and introduced himself, letting them know he would be sleeping behind St. Stephen's that night.

"They took umbrage with that, I guess," said Critchfield.

Sgt. Treanor also told Critchfield that the police had uncovered Richard's criminal history, but they didn't find anything more recent than the late nineties. This gave the reverend some pause.

"I was really weighing, if I let him stay am I putting anyone at risk?" said Critchfield. "What would Jesus do?"

Richard had told police that he "didn't want to go to a shelter, which didn't surprise me," the reverend added. Although there were torrential rains that night, Critchfield agreed to let Richard stay. The following day, she and Thomas went to meet with him.

"When we came up he wasn't here, then he did show up, and we sat down and had a long conversation with him," said Critchfield. "Adam fixed us all tea, and we got to know him as human being and as a person, got to know him and his history. He had been an addict, lost everything, and spent time in prison. He was very honest about his whole life and was a very gentle, loving soul."

"The conversation was very peculiar," said Thomas, "and also very life-giving."

Thomas described Richard as very fast-talking, "the kind of fellow who expresses himself in a different way than most people do."

The reverends asked Richard what his plans were, moving forward. They suggested he head to Wellspring in Hull, which Richard seemed to think was a great idea, for reasons other than what the ministers expected to hear.

"He wanted to go to Wellspring because he wanted to help people there," said Thomas. "He didn't want help — he wanted to be of help."

Both ministers were blown away.

"He modeled Christ to me more than I did to him," said Critchfield, "and that's my job."

She realized that Richard, the man without a home, saw himself as "very blessed." And right then and there, he ceased being "the homeless man" to the two pastors.

"He started out as 'the homeless guy' but became Richard to me and Margot," said Thomas. "He's a person with a background, feelings and a whole life."

Critchfield explained how easy it is to get detached and treat the homeless as objects, not as people.

"We talk about 'those people,' or 'these people,' or 'them,' and yet this is a human being we are talking about," she said.

Thomas agreed. "We're almost desensitized to the term 'homeless.' We use the phrase 'the homeless' a lot, but the phrase is inadequate when we're talking about individuals."

"They are human beings who don't have homes," Critchfield added. "These are men, women and children with no place to live."

After a long conversation with Richard, Thomas helped him gather up his possessions, which consisted of a small backpack, small duffel bag and duvet cover that he used as a sleeping bag.

"It's funny to hear he was 'setting up camp,'" said Thomas. "He didn't have a tent or a sleeping bag and wasn't starting a fire or anything."

Thomas then drove Richard to Stop & Shop (the reverends had given him a card to purchase food).

"I let him out, he said thank you Jesus and God bless you to me, I said God bless you to him, he got out of the car and went into the store," said Thomas. "I keep thinking he'll come back... We both think he'll show up one day, say 'hi,' and 'Jesus loves everyone.' It was definitely an interesting day."

The reverends of St. Stephen's received an important takeaway from their interaction with Richard.

For Critchfield, it was "the importance of taking the time to know each other and relate to each other as human beings rather than as objects or ignoring each other. We were made so much richer and more human ourselves as soon as we started relating to him as a human being."

Thomas said that interactions like this one make him "really want to do something" about homelessness. "We're treating symptoms, not the underlying structural causes of homelessness. It's hard to wrap your mind around everything that needs to happen for people to live in a home. You'd think we have enough homes in the U.S. for everyone to have one, but that's not the case."

Critchfield wound end up sharing the lesson she and Thomas learned with their parishioners. As she prepared her sermon for the following Sunday, Critchfield reviewed the Scriptures from the Common Lectionary as she always does, but was struck by how well they related to what she and Thomas had just encountered.

"I read the lesson from James and hollered to Adam, 'You've got to look at the readings for the next sermon,'" Critchfield said. "The lessons from James are about how we relate to the 'other,' explicitly when a poor person comes to the assembly rather than someone who comes in their finery. The interesting thing about writing sermons from the lectionary, it happens more often than not that the readings are exactly what I need to hear."

Still, that week's passage seemed beyond coincidental to the reverend.

"It's freakishly holy spirit that this reading and Richard came into my life at the same time."

And what about the scripture that says people should be kind to strangers, lest they are entertaining angels unaware?

"Angel or not, we're all human beings, and in my mind the reason that makes us like God is that we were made for relationships," said Critchfield. "That's what being human is all about."

And Richard, it seems, is a very special human being. Critchfield said she wishes him well.

"I hope things turn out well for him," she said. "He certainly is a happy enough guy."

Helicopter landings not allowed in residential districts

Cohasset has a zoning bylaw prohibiting "helicopter landing areas" in a residentially zoned district.

The issue came up recently following a complaint last month about a helicopter landing at an address off Atlantic Avenue. The incident was recorded in the police log that week after a caller complained. Police referred the caller to the Federal Aviation Administration.

But the helicopter incident ended up before the Building Commissioner/Zoning Enforcement Officer Robert Egan who was made aware of it by a concerned citizen.

In a letter to Thomas D. Sullivan, 81 Atlantic Ave, Egan notes that once again there was a helicopter landing at Sullivan's property on Sunday (Aug. 19). "It was reported that the helicopter landed and took off twice on that day," Egan wrote.

He explained the Cohasset Zoning Bylaw prohibits helicopter landings in a residential zoning district and thus the use of Sullivan's property as a landing area is not allowed.

Egan wrote that failure to comply would result in a $100 fine per offense.

In a telephone interview, Egan said the letter he sent to Sullivan was returned so Sullivan may be unaware of the violation. Egan said the helicopter take off and landing also occurred about the same time of year last year so thought it best to alert Sullivan, who owns several properties in the area, about the bylaw. The bylaw prohibits commercial communication antennas and helicopter landing areas in a residential district. They are allowed by special permit in a light industry or highway business district.

Attempts to reach Sullivan for comment were unsuccessful.

Skippers show character in OT win

Cohasset holds off Quincy in overtime

The Cohasset football team showed two strong traits on Friday night – patience and character on the way to a lightning delayed 28-22 overtime win over Quincy on Friday night.

In a game delayed by an hour due to lightning, Ryan Gillis's third rushing TD – a 3-yarder on Cohasset's first possession of overtime – lifted the Skippers to a come-from-behind home win.

Cohasset trailed 22-14 until Ryan Gillis's 75-yard run to the Quincy 3 and Tim Gillis's 4-yard scoring run with two minutes left. Junior QB Chris Haggerty tied it up by diving into the end zone on a rollout for the two-point conversion.

Quincy, which got a huge game from senior tailback Jalen Green (28 carries for 199 yards, plus two catches for 44 yards), was stuffed on four plays from the Cohasset 10 on the first possession of OT.

Cohasset needed only two Ryan Gillis runs to hit the end zone for the win.

So far so good

By William Wassersug

The Cohasset boys soccer team is looking good in the early part of the season.

With a 5-2 win over Hull on Wednesday, the boys improved to 4-0, and for the most part, the Skippers have been winning with the formula that coach Jim Willis felt would get the job done.

Cohasset has relied on outstanding defense and goaltending, along with a focused attack that spreads the wealth.

Seven different players have scored in the team's four wins, led by Nick Tangherlini, who has notched six goals in four games.

McInnis honored

Hingham's Marty McInnis enshrined in Boston College Hall of Fame

By Thomas Burke
Special to the Hingham Journal

Hockey fans might not always remember the best teams, but they never fail to recall the exploits of the best forward lines.

The Kraut Line of the Bruins. The Million Dollar Line of the Black Hawks. The Production Line of the Red Wings. The Punch Line of the Canadiens. And many others, including more than a few starry trios at Boston College such as John Cunniff-Phil Dyer-Jim Mullen; Kevin Ahearn-Tim Sheehy-Paul Schilling, and Ray Chaisson-Elphege Dumont-John Pryor.

Right up there among the finest attack waves in the history of Eagle hockey is the HEM line, with catalyst and stem-winder Marty McInnis of Hingham, Massachusetts patrolling the left wing. Steve Heinze played on the right, and David Emma was in the middle.

McInnis, a member of the Class of 1992, was be inducted into the Eagles' Hall of Fame at a ceremony on campus last Friday. He was also be introduced at halftime of the BC-Maine football game on Saturday along with eight other inductees. They are: football players Mark Chmura and Mike Mamula; basketball stars Antonio Granger and Amy LaCombe; hockey standout Don Fox; soccer great Casey Schmidt; All-America cross country and distance runner Maria Cicero Lindberg; and track sprinter Lucien Tessier.

Though his Boston College career point total was not quite as high as those of his linemates, McInnis was the creative attacker who made the line go. Emma and Heinze were primarily goal scorers; Marty was a superb stickhandler, precise passer, and on-the-fly strategist. He delivered the puck, and they buried it.

As Heinze stated at the time of his own Hall of Fame induction, "Marty could cre-

In the Hull win, Tangherlini scored twice to lead the charge.

John Mills added a goal off the bench.

Monday, Cohasset picked up a huge 1-0 win over Norwell.

Connor Goetz headed in a cross from sophomore Sam Morris with eight minutes left to lead the Skippers.

"Connor put it where nobody could get it," Willis said. "It was a nice goal, a good finish to a hard fought game."

For Willis, the win was a first.

"This is the first time we've beaten Norwell in my six years here," he said. "We've had some ties and one-goal losses. This was the first win."

Willis credits the defense.

"Joe Buckley and Brendan O'Connor have been playing very well defensively. When Joe and Brendan are in with (goalie) Pat Federle all in the game together, we haven't allowed a goal."

Willis is impressed with the way his squad has started.

"We've played some good teams," he said. "I'm very happy. We've had a good mix of defense and scoring from a lot of places. We've been possessing the ball really well. In the middle, Ryan McKeon and Teddy Craven have been moving the ball around."

Before Norwell and Hull, Cohasset improved to 2-0 with a 2-0 victory over Carver last Thursday afternoon.

Nick Tangherlini scored both Cohasset goals, to improve his total to four on the young season.

Cohasset has a big game against Rockland today and faces Scituate on Tuesday.

INSIDE THE 6 - SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Boys on the bubble

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

Week 1 rankings

One week certainly doesn't decide a season, but the first week of high school soccer here in Inside the 6 Nation certainly saw several teams take a considerable step in cementing their contender status. Not too much movement between the preseason rankings and week one as the top three boys' and girls' teams remain the same. We do, however, have two new teams that entered the top six on the boys' side and a new entry for the girls. Here's how it went down in week one (games played through Sunday, Sept. 9):

Boys

1. Weymouth - The Wildcats are the real deal, and we're only one week into the 2012 season. They dispatched Framingham, 4-1, at home to start the season before hitting the road to beat Dedham, 3-0. Two quality wins to start the season.

2. Marshfield - The Rams remain in the second spot after a 1-1 week. After losing, 2-1, to Scituate in their season opener, the Rams pounded Silver Lake (ranked No. 6 in this poll for the preseason). They won, 5-1, at home, avenging two losses last season to the Lakers.

3. Hingham - How's this for a statement game? The Harbormen opened the season with a 5-3 win over defending Division 2 South Sectional champions Sandwich, a team that knocked Hingham out of that tournament last year in the semifinals.

4. Duxbury - The Dragons move up one spot from the preseason rankings. They had one game last week and fought off a tough Plymouth North squad, scoring the game's only goal with 15 minutes to play.

5. Hanover - Making their 2012 Inside the 6 debut, the Indians made a statement to open the season, knocking down Norwell (ranked No. 4 in the preseason) with a 3-1 win. They followed that up with a 6-1 win over an improving Holbrook side.

6. Braintree - The upstart Wamps, another team making its debut in the poll this season, beat two quality teams to open up their fall campaign, beginning with a 2-1 win over Newton North and then a 3-0 blanking of Milton.

On the bubble: Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Plymouth North

Preseason rankings: 1. Weymouth, 2. Marshfield, 3. Hingham, 4. Norwell, 5. Duxbury, 6. Silver Lake

Girls

1. Marshfield - The Rams started exactly as they'd hoped - with a pair of victories to start the season. They scored two late goals to take a 2-0 victory over Norwell before hitting the road and handing Silver Lake a 3-1 defeat to close out the week.

2. Duxbury - The Dragons remain in the second spot. They had one game this past week and easily handled New Bedford, taking a 4-0 win over the road against the Whalers.

3. Plymouth North - The Eagles blanked rivals Plymouth South, 3-0, to start their first season, looking extremely sharp in goal in the win.

4. Carver - Wow. The Crusaders opened up the season by knocking off South Shore League favorites East Bridgewater, 2-1. The Vikings went 16-1-1 last season. Carver then followed that up with a 1-0 win over Cohasset, firmly planting themselves in first place in the SSL after week one.

5. Weymouth - Tough week for the Wildcats after winless week against a pair of worthy opponents. They opened the season with a 1-1 tie against Framingham before losing, 2-0, to 2011 Division 2 South Sectional semifinalists Dedham.

6. Norwell - The Clippers held the defending Atlantic Coast League champions Marshfield scoreless for the first 70 minutes of the match before conceding the 2-0 loss. They then rebounded with a 4-0 win over Rockland.

On the bubble: Pembroke, Braintree, Scituate

Preseason rankings: 1. Marshfield, 2. Duxbury, 3. Plymouth North, 4. Pembroke, 5. Weymouth, 6. Norwell

The Inside the 6 - Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

NOTRE DAME SOCCER

NDA blanks Pembroke for a strong start

The 2012 Notre Dame Academy varsity soccer team started off its season last Friday with an impressive 5-0 victory over Pembroke High School at NDA's home field.

With nine seniors graduating from last years squad, head coach Liz Lima had some pretty big shoes to fill with the new additions to this years varsity roster. Based on the play of the newcomers in the first game, NDA looks like it will be a very competitive soccer club going forward.

Notre Dame didn't wait long to get on the board as junior Allison Zaccheo (Hanson) scored in the second minute of the game on a great assist from junior Gabby Kenyon (Plymouth). NDA added two more goals in the first half with the first goal combination switched as Allie Zaccheo set up Gabby Kenyon on a tremendous goal to make it 2-0.

Freshman Hannah Volpe scored her first career goal with an assist from Kenyon to put NDA up 3-0 at halftime.

Notre Dame finished strong in the second half as both Kenyon and Volpe each scored their second goals on great individual efforts.

Kenyon's goal was assisted by senior captain Amelia Brown (Hingham) while Zaccheo notched the assist on Volpe's goal.

Sophomore Elissa Dukeshire (Scituate) was outstanding on the defensive end as was sophomore goalkeeper Maggie Elliott (Plymouth).

The team includes players from Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, Plymouth, Hanover, Pembroke and Norwell.

ate more than anyone on his line. He could see the ice so well, and saw all the plays developing."

That ability to anticipate the moves of teammates and opponents, and to place himself and the puck in the most advantageous position, led to a career total of 84 assists in three seasons to go along with Marty's 58 goals. His 142 points place him 29th all-time at Boston College. Had he played a fourth season, he'd be well up within the top ten.

Teammate Jason Rathbone adds, "He did so many little things that you wouldn't see unless you really know hockey and watch it closely. You couldn't knock Marty off the puck. He had great strength on his skates. He was unselfish, had poise and patience with the puck. He finished his opportunities. There's a reason he was on all those good lines, and that he was 12 years in the NHL without a day in the minors."

Marty grew up in Hingham. His father, Marty senior, was a wrestler who graduated BC in 1972. Senior coached his son in all the usual sports in town and before Marty enrolled at Milton Academy where he played soccer, baseball, and lacrosse as well as hockey.

It wasn't until junior year at Milton Academy that Marty began to think of a future in Division One college hockey. He recalls watching a Milton-Thayer varsity contest when he was in eighth grade and thinking that there was no way in the world that he could possibly compete at that level.

"Maybe I was naïve," he says. "It's different when you actually get out there and play. It's a little easier."

When McInnis arrived at the Heights, he was a 170-pound kid who'd never been asked to work out with weights. He cites strength coach Wes Emmert as one of the big influences on his development as an athlete.

The fall of 1988 was a good time to be an Eagle freshman. The team had endured a losing season the prior year. The opening of Conte Forum and the arrival of a bevy of fresh talent heralded a new era. McInnis won a regular slot as center of a line between Heinze and senior Tim Sweeney. He scored 13 goals and added 19 assists, and was a strong factor in BC's rebound to a 25-11-4 season and advance to the second round of the NCAA tournament.

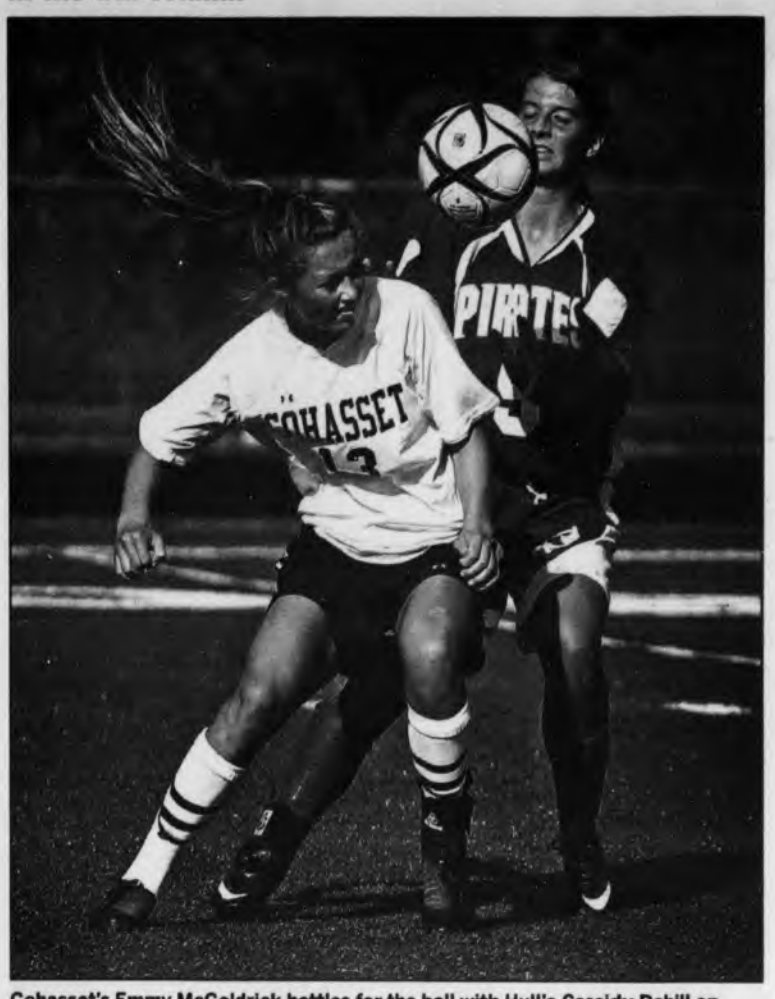
For Marty's sophomore year, coach Len Ceglarski initially tabbed him as a center. But placing him over on the left side, a right-hand shot on his off-wing, just worked better. Playing the off-wing is not the norm in hockey, but it's no longer rare either. It gives a better shooting angle when one's forehand is close to the middle of the zone than to the boards. And playing there, as well as at center, served McInnis well in his hockey career after Boston College.

"Both David and Steve were very hungry to score goals and to succeed. We just had a good chemistry out on the ice.

"As for my stickhandling, I just had a knack for it. I wanted the puck the whole time, not wanting to give it up but to hold onto it," he says.

McInnis served up the puck to teammates 29 times in his sophomore campaign to go along with 24 goals. The Eagles went 28-13-1, won the Hockey East Tournament, advanced to the NCAA's, and lost a 2-1 heartbreaker to Wisconsin in the semifinal.



Marty's junior season was another productive one with 21 goals and 36 assists for 57 points. The team record was 27-12 but the year ended on a sour note with home ice playoff losses to Northeastern and Alaska-Anchorage.

McInnis left school a year early and earned a spot on the 1992 Olympic team. He played on a line with Heinze and present Harvard coach Ted Donato. Sweeney, Emma, Greg Brown, and Scott Gordon also made it through the final cut. The team won its division and made the medal round. They lost 5-2 to Russia in a tough semifinal and were defeated 6-1 by the Czechs for the bronze medal.

After the Olympics, Marty signed with the Islanders, the team that had drafted in senior year of high school. He played five years there and stuck in the league for a total of 12 seasons, with stints in Calgary and Anaheim before finishing his career in Boston in 2002-03. He scored a total of 170 goals and collected 250 assists for 420 points. His best year was 1993-94 when he had 56 points in 81 games with the Islanders.

Marty's wife is the former Melissa Hug, a BC '92 grad and star varsity lacrosse player. They live in Hingham with sons Luke and Chase. When he's not busy with his real estate development firm, Coda Ventures, Marty coaches his sons on his own former youth hockey program, the South Shore Kings.

In the win column

Cohasset's Emmy McGoldrick battles for the ball with Hull's Cassidy Dahill on Wednesday afternoon at home. Cohasset posted its first girls soccer win this season by defeating Hull, 2-1, Wednesday. Senior captain Melinda Dignam and sophomore Emmy McGoldrick each scored for the Skippers, while junior Brianne Crough had a strong game in goal. Stephanie Striglio scored for Hull.

GYMNASTICS

Norwell gymnast TOPs the field

Madison Burke, a 9 year old fourth grader at the Vinal School in Norwell, has been chosen for a national level gymnastics tryout at the USA Gymnastics National Team Training Center through the US Gymnastics Association's Talent Opportunity Program (TOPs).

TOPs is a nationwide talent search and educational program for female gymnasts ages 7 through 10. TOPs identifies talented young gymnasts and offers them training opportunities to develop into elite or international-level gymnasts. Gymnasts who are selected by this program often go on to compete at a high level, with some becoming members of the US National Gymnastics Team or the US Olympic Team.

Burke, a Level 7 gymnast, achieved high marks in local and regional TOPs testing sessions during the months of June and July and was identified as one of the top 100 9-year old gymnasts in the country. She will be going to TOPs National Testing on September 29th where she will be evaluated on physical abilities and gymnastics skills. There, gymnasts will be selected to participate in the National TOPs Training Camp in December.

Madison trains at South Shore Gymnastics Academy in Rockland with Owner/Coach Rett Ware. This is Madison's second year being selected for the national-level TOPs tryouts. In addition to her 15 hours of weekly gymnastics team practice, Madison also participates

Bruins roll in Classics Div. win

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The Bruins had a tough time scoring last Spring in the Classics Div. of the Men's South Coastal Hockey League.

They were able to bust loose this past Sunday with the help of Marshfield's John Zimmer. The Bruins forward scored four goals and assisted on another to lead them to a 7-4 victory over the Maple Leafs.

Mike Martin added two goals and two assists and John Dougenik added a goal for the Bruins, who jumped out to a 5-1 lead in the first period.

Sean Cleaves of Hanover scored two goals, Rockland's Marty DeCourcey and Mike Maher of Marshfield added goal each for the Leafs.

The Black Hawks in what seemed like a snap of the fingers grabbed a Classics Div. win away from the Rangers. Braintree's Vin Joyce capped off a three-goal run in the span of four minutes in the second period to give the Black Hawks a 3-2 come from behind win over the Rangers.

Paul Lyons of Pembroke had a goal and an assist and Dennis Murray of Norwell scored a goal during that four minute span for the Black Hawks, which were down by a 2-0 score in the second period.

Bill Sawtelle of Pembroke and Mike Crisp scored for the Rangers to give them their 2-0 lead.

Kirk Souza helped to set up Pembroke's John MacLellan, who scored the game-tying goal with 21 seconds left in regulation and scored the game-winning goal in the shoot out as the Canadiens pulled out a come from behind, 4-3 win over the Red Wings in a Classics Div. battle. The Canadiens won the shootout by a 2-1 score as Mike Fay also scored for them in the shootout.

Mike Fahie and Mike Martin both of Pembroke scored a goal each and Duxbury's Don Dudley had two assists for the Canadiens.

Pat Burke scored a goal and assisted on two others for Red Wings. Scott Varley scored two goals and Kevin Barnard had two assists for the Wings.

Jonathan Graham's second goal of the game off a feed by James McNeill with five seconds left gave the Saints a 2-1 come from behind win over the Whalers in a Legends Div. game.

Scituate's Steve Concannon scored on a breakaway off a feed by Skip Tufts also from Scituate in the second period to give the Whalers a 1-0 lead.

Pembroke's Dave Christensen scored the lone goal in the shoot out to give the Stingers their second straight shoot out win as they nipped the Crusaders by a 3-2 score.

Norwell's Joe Murray scored twice for the Stingers in the game, The goals by Murray meant that the first time in the South Coastal Hockey League that the father-son combination in the league both scored on the same night. Murray's son scored for the Black Hawks in their win over the Rangers.

Nate Rasmussen of Hingham and Marshfield's Jim Donovan scored the goals for the Crusaders.

Marshfield's Tim Cruz and Norwell's Dana Dolabany scored a goal and assisted on another each in the Sharks' 4-2 Legends Div. win over the Toros. Mike Murphy of Hanover and Harry Denley also scored for the Sharks.

Ray Degaust had a goal in the game for the Toros.

"We showed some moxie tonight," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "We stuck with it and didn't quit. I thought we showed tremendous character."

Quincy led 6-0 on Peter Cedrone's 1yard TD run, but Ryan Gillis answered with a 5-yard TD run for Cohasset. Chris Haggerty threw a two-point conversion pass to Connor Dooley to put the Skippers up 8-6 after one quarter.

Quincy went ahead again, 14-8, when QB James Lam found Alex Heffernan for 37-yard TD and John Cherwek for the two-point conversion.

Shane Haggerty's 35-yard reception set up Ryan Gillis's 7-yard TD run for Cohasset, tying the game at 14 at halftime.

Quincy took a 22-14 lead in the third quarter when Lam scored from a yard out and also ran in the two-point conversion.

Afanasiw was pleased with the way his team responded to pressure.

"I thought our defense in the first quarter was poor," he said. "Then it was a little better in the second. The third quarter was average. The fourth quarter was good and overtime it was outstanding."

Stopping Green in overtime was huge.

"I'll put Green with anybody in the South Shore or Patriot League," Afanasiw said. "He was tough."

Cohasset will have its hands full tonight with a home game against Patriot League Keenan Division Hingham in an annual Border War.

Hingham routed Medway 33-6 last weekend behind a 200-plus yard effort by junior Sam Benger.

Kickoff at Alumni Field is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

LIFE AT CHS

Off to a great start!

Kicking off the school year, last Friday's football game against Quincy had all fans on their feet as the boys pulled out a win after going into overtime.

WHITNEY MALONE

Welcome back Cohasset! I hope you all had an enjoyable and relaxing summer (it just never seems long enough!).

I would first like to welcome to Cohasset Ms. Connolly and Mr. Scott, our new principal and assistant principal! We seniors are especially looking forward to getting to know Ms. Connolly, who has assumed the disciplinary role for the senior class, and will be handing us our diplomas at the end of the year.

Kicking off the school year, last Friday's football game against Quincy had all fans on their feet as the boys pulled out a win after going into overtime. Despite the game's one-hour rain delay start, the Cheerleading squad and the Cohasset Pep-Band persevered to support the team. Cohasset will play Hingham tonight on Alumni field, so come out and show your support!

Thursday morning, National Honor Society members welcomed the new freshmen at the Freshman Breakfast, sharing their knowledge and experience at CHS and answering questions about classes, sports, and after-school clubs.

Now that both students and teachers are back into the swing of things, Back-to-School Night is Tuesday the 18th for the middle school and Wednesday the 19th for the high school. Also, that Wednesday is a Professional Day (a.k.a. an Early Release at 11:30 a.m. for us students!)

I am not only excited to be a senior this year, but also delighted to spend time updating everyone on what's happening in Life at CHS. If you have any suggestions or news you would like me to include, feel free to e-mail me at whitney-malone16@yahoo.com!

Whitney Malone is a senior at Cohasset High; her column appears monthly during the school year.

SEPAC

Basic rights is topic Tuesday

Cohasset SEPAC is sponsoring a presentation on Basic Rights in Special Education at 9:30 am on Tuesday, Sept. 18th at the Joseph Osgood School Library. Maureen Finaldi from the Federation for Children with Special Needs will speak to and provide families with an introduction to their rights and responsibilities under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), Massachusetts Special Education Law and No Child Left Behind (NCLB).

Parents will learn how to be effective partners with their child's school to decide eligibility for special education, and how to plan, make decisions, and monitor their child's progress. They will learn about the language and rights within Individual Education Plans (IEP's), and 504 Plans within the special education process and be able to address questions or concerns.

This is excellent presentation for any family that is coming into the Special Education process or families who want to be more effective in the Individual Education Plan meeting.

For more information on this or other discussions on the South Shore, visit our website www.cohassetsepac.org

Speaker Series

• Sept. 18, 9:30 a.m. at Osgood Library. Basic Rights in Special Education. Guiding parents in the IEP process. Presented by the Federation of Children with Special Needs.

• Oct. 2 – Fluency Factory: Tutoring and Test Prep for all students with presenter Richard McManus.

• Nov. 6 – ABA, Applied Behavioral Analysis. A modern proven model of differential learning.

• Dec. 4 – iPad training for parents with presenter Derry Schwantner, Apple Co.

• Jan. 8 – Transitions: A guide to assist families on the journey from adolescence to adulthood. Presenters Catherine and Mike Mayes, MassAdvocates.

• Feb. 5 – Visual Motor Therapy. Individual therapy prescribed to develop efficient visual skills and visual processing. Presented by Vision Source.

• March 5 – Guidance in Mediation for parents with Children on IEPs.

• April 2 – Alternative Educational Therapies panel. South Shore Conservatory music therapist Eve Montague and art therapist Susan Evans.

• May 7 – Biofeedback Therapy presented by Diane Scott.

HAPPENINGS

Scout signups

Just because the new school year is around the corner, doesn't mean the fun has to end. Girl Scouts of Eastern Massachusetts provides exciting and educational programs, year round, for all girls entering grades K through 12. Cohasset Girl Scouts will kick-off the year by hosting a Girl Scout sign up day, on Tuesday, Sept. 17, at 6:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Library meeting room, 35 Ripley road, Cohasset. The membership fee for 2012-2013 is $12. Stop by, meet new friends and learn about the exciting program options focusing on the arts, technology, outdoor adventure, health, beauty and more.

Girl Scouts is flexible to meet girls' and volunteers' schedules through four pathways: camp, troops a series of activities, and single events. Join Girl Scouts and join the fun. For more information, visit www.hergirlscouts.org.

Gridiron Club Book Drive

The Cohasset High School Football team will be having its annual Football book drive this Sunday afternoon.

Please note that this is our yearly one time fundraiser and the Cohasset High School uniformed football players will be throughout the town offering player programs in exchange for donations.

The Cohasset Gridiron Club thanks you in advance for your continued support and generosity.

Cultural Council funding proposals

Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

This year, Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $3,870 in grants. Previously funded projects included South Shore Art Center's annual Festival on the Common, Cohasset Recreation Department's summer concert series and Cohasset Dramatic Club's musical theater productions.

For specific guidelines and complete information on the Cohasset Cultural Council, call Sarah Wood Torrey at 781-383-3493 or email CohassetCulture@gmail.com. Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available online at www.mass-culture.org/Cohasset. Application forms are also available at the Cohasset Town Hall and Paul Pratt Memorial Library. People can also follow Cohasset Cultural Council on Facebook at www.facebook.com/CohassetCulturalCouncil or on Twitter at @CohassetCulture.

War of 1812 is lecture topic

The Cohasset Historical Society will begin its Wednesday Evening Lecture Series on September 19th with guest speaker Harvey Dickstein exploring "The War of 1812; The Less Remembered War". The October 17th program will feature Henry Cooke as "George Washington's Tailor", and on November 14th Genevra and Charles Higginson will share "The Joys of Collecting Books". This program will be on the second Tuesday due to the proximity of the Thanksgiving holiday.

In December, the Historical Society invites the community to celebrate the Christmas Holiday season with its annual Wassail Party on Sunday afternoon, December 9th from 2 to 4 Pm. All of these Historical Society programs are open to the public and although donations are gratefully accepted, no fee is charged. Light refreshments are planned for each event. Each of the Lectures will be held in the Pratt Building at 106 South Main Street and will begin at 7:30 p.m. We look forward to welcoming you all to these special evenings.

Roundabout is Sunday

Cohasset Maritime Institute ("CMI") will host the Minot's Light Roundabout rowing race this Sunday, September 16 in the waters off Cohasset between Sandy Beach and Minots Lighthouse. This 4.25 mile race will start and finish off Sandy Beach, making viewing the race great for shoreside spectators. The course runs out past The Grampus Rocks, to marks off Minots Lighthouse and back to a finish line off Sandy Beach. The Roundabout is open to a variety of sea-worthy rowing craft, including the sturdy 4-oared CMI shells and smaller craft rowed by 1 or 2 people.

Racing will run from 11-noon, with boats going off in staggered starts, followed by awards and music by the Rusty Skippers Band. Registration is open at 9:00 on the day of the race, but preregistration is recommended.

If you have questions about the Roundabout, please contact CMI Board member and Roundabout Chair Doug McLellan (douglasmclellan@verizon.net). For further information about CMI and its rowing programs, please check out the CMI web site ROWCMI.COM or email ROW.CMI@comcast.net.

Social Dance classes to start

A tradition going back nearly one hundred years ago has returned to Cohasset. Boston Assemblies Social Dance program invites Cohasset students entering the fifth grade to Glastonbury Abby to enjoy learning a lively mix of traditional and contemporary dances as well as etiquette instruction in essential social skills.

The program provides an opportunity for fifth graders to interact socially in the kindest, nicest way. Standing as a sign of respect, offering an arm, escorting and seating a partner are seldom used behaviors but very important when the appropriate occasion presents itself. Learning and practicing social etiquette instills confidence, sensitivity, grace, and poise in social situations, now and in the future.

Every class includes party dances with prizes. The dancing is the vehicle by which we establish habits and practice lifelong social graces all while having fun with peers. All members of the fifth grade class are welcome.

The session consists of eight classes starting in November from 5:30 - 6:30 pm at Glastonbury Abbey:

- November 6 and 13
- December 4 and 11
- January 8 and 15
- February 5 and 12
- Snow date: March 5

Look for an invitation in the mail or contact Renate Devin for additional details: rdevin@bostonschoolofetiquette.com.

Bird man program

On September 19th at 11 am, the Cohasset Elder Affairs will host John Galluzzo as he presents: "Thirty Minutes a Day across the South Shore." John is the adult education and citizen science coordinator for the Mass Audubon's South Shore Sanctuaries, which is headquartered in Marshfield, a co-compiler of the first ever State of the Birds of Massachusetts report, and is currently coauthoring the Massachusetts Breeding Bird Atlas 2.

Trained as an historian, John has written more than 35 books on the history and nature of southeastern Massachusetts, including Half an Hour a Day on Foot: An Obsessive Exploration of the Nature of the South Shore of Boston and his most recent book Half an Hour a Day Across Massachusetts: Finding Open Space in All 351 Towns and Cities in the Bay State. For this project, he sought 30 minutes on nature trails in every community during one calendar year, from the top of Mt. Greylock to Cape Cod's ocean edges, with the goal of proving a nature walk, or a nature experience, is never far away for any resident of Massachusetts. Both of these programs will be presented at Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 N. Main St., followed by lunch at the center. Please call 781-383-9112 for reservations and/or transportation.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF SEPT. 24, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This is a good time for the usually outspoken Lamb to be a bit more discreet. You still can get your point across, but do it in a way less likely to turn off a potential supporter.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Good news: All that hard work you put in is beginning to pay off. But you need to watch that tendency to insist on doing things your way or no way. Be a bit more flexible.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might want to delay making a decision on the future of a long-standing relationship until you check out some heretofore hidden details that are just now beginning to emerge.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your reluctance to compromise on an important issue could backfire without more facts to support your position. Weigh your options carefully before making your next move.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time for ambitious Leos or Leonas to shift from planning their next move to actually doing it. Your communication skills help persuade others to join you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Relationships — personal or professional — present new challenges. Be careful not to let a sudden surge of stubbornness influence how you choose to deal with them.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might need more facts before you can decide on a possible career change. But you should have no problem making a decision about an important personal matter.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You're respected by most people for your direct, no-nonsense approach to the issues. But be careful you don't replace honest skepticism with stinging sarcasm.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A newly emerging situation could require a good deal of attention and some difficult decision-making. However, close friends will help you see it through.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Family matters need attention. Check things out carefully. There still might be unresolved tensions that could hinder your efforts to repair damaged relationships.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Of course you deserve to indulge yourself in something special. But for now, tuck that bit of mad money away. You'll need it to help with a looming cash crunch.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A temporary setback in your financial situation is eased by changing some of your plans. You'll be able to ride it out quite well until the tide turns back in your favor.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for understanding people's needs. You have a low tolerance for those who act without concern for others.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

FERGUSON GREATER BOSTON HOME TOUR

Homes sweet Homes

Latest in design, technology and architectural concepts showcased over two weekends

By Beth Doyle
bdoyle@wickedlocal.com

Even though the words "There's no place like home" conjure up images of Kansas, a more regional vision of "home" will be on display during the 2012 Ferguson Greater Boston Home Tour the last two weekends of September.

Described as the region's largest multi-site tour of show homes throughout Greater Boston, the event will be open to the public from noon to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 22-23 and 29-30. The two homes that are remodels are open only the second of the two weekends.

The 12 projects on the home tour will demonstrate the latest in design, technology and architectural concepts in residential construction, and will include a mix of new construction and remodeling, according to Sue Abt, the executive officer of the Builders Association of Greater Boston, which is coordinating the event.

"This is the second annual event that BAGB has coordinated," Abt said. "We started this last year to basically brand our members and our association in the minds of consumers to understand who we are; that we are a resource to them to find quality builders and any other subcontractors, such as for windows, landscaping, appliances, flooring, etc. Anything that goes into your home, we have a contact for that, as well."

The homes on the tour range from single-family homes, apartments and condos to 55-plus living options, according to Jim Ingram, one of the two co-chairmen of the home tour and district sales manager at HADCO New England.

"We're not limiting our home tour to those who are currently in the market for a new house," he said. "It's a great place to get ideas if people are thinking of remodeling. And, obviously, for those interested in buying a new home, it's a better deal."

There is no obligation for people visiting the homes, he said.

"They can go to one home, they can go to all the homes," Ingram said. "They get to vote on their favorite. The People's Choice award is not necessarily the most expensive or the largest – it's the one they like best."

The more houses they see, the fairer the vote will be, Ingram noted, hoping attendees will visit as many homes as possible.

"I think the home tour is a great opportunity for people to get out and see real, actual and current trends," Paul Sullivan, co-chairman of this year's home tour committee, said. "Not just to see what's in magazines, but to see what people are putting into their homes this year.

"The other really great thing about the tour is it gives people the opportunity to see a builder's or remodeler's work up close and personal rather than just a photo in a magazine or in an advertisement," he said.

Tickets

Visitors will be provided with a "passport" that allows them to tour as many homes as they choose during the event's double weekend run. Tickets have a $10 value but you can go online and register to receive them for free, or they can be picked up at all Ferguson showrooms. Visit www.greaterbostonhometour.com and click on the "purchase tickets" graphic for additional information.

South Weymouth

Four of the properties on the home tour are in sub-neighborhoods within Southfield Highlands in South Weymouth, which is being developed on 1,400 acres of land previously occupied by the South Weymouth Naval Air Station. Of the total, 1,000 acres will be conservation land – preserved as natural green space or recreation – while only 400 acres will be developed, according to Tricia Bruno, marketing director of LNR Property Corp., which is developing the property.

"The idea was to include all four of our options because they appeal to various demographics," Bruno said.

In The Meadows, built by IBG Development, visitors can tour The Oakley, a 2,067-square-foot courtyard townhome, which is one of 13 different plans being offered in this neighborhood. According to Bruno, one of the highlights is the outdoor private courtyard, which provides expanded outdoor living space.

Another model home, one of the 10 single-family and townhome plans being offered by Whitman Homes, is in Parkview Village. Called The Glenhurst, this single-family home features 1,830 square feet of living space, and includes a patio, a great room, a master suite and a study.

"It also has a charming front porch," Bruno added.

In both the Parkview Village and The Meadows developments, the homes range from about 1,300 square feet to 2,300 square feet. Both of the model homes, across the street from one another, are adjacent to Southfield Highlands Park, which Bruno described as "a postcard-perfect, highly landscaped linear park, with large stainless-steel sculptures of stainless steel and stone."

"It's worth a trip just to see the park," Bruno said.

Southfield Highlands is very pedestrian friendly, Bruno said, and all the homes will be within walking distance of the village center and all the amenities, like the golf course.

There is an on-site MBTA station, too.

"It's an eight-minute walk from the MBTA South Weymouth Station to these homes," Bruno said.

A third location on the tour is in The Commons at Southfield Highlands, which provides eco-friendly, luxury apartment living. Highly popular, according to Bruno, the developer is John M. Corcoran and Company.

According to Bruno, The Commons is 100 percent smoke-free and pet-friendly, and it has a fitness center, a saltwater pool, a clubroom, a game room, covered garage parking and chef-caliber kitchens.

"They're really beautiful kitchens," Bruno said.

Another tour destination called Fairing Way, a Rice Eventide/Rogerson Communities project, is a 55-plus community that's in the planning stages. Visitors can view plans at the marketing center and learn about the project, which will offer à la carte services, Bruno said. "That's what separates Fairing Way from other 55-plus communities. You can sign up for what you want," she said.

"They are gorgeous – gorgeously designed," Bruno said of all the properties on the home tour. "They each have their own interior designers do their spaces. Each one is different. It's worth it just to come and see the floor layout and what you can do with a modest floor plan. People say, 'I can easily do this – easily.'"

Builders Association of Greater Boston

According to its website, BAGB serves both the construction industry – builders, remodeling contractors, carpenters, subcontractors or any trade professionals – by helping their business expand, as well as homeowners and new home buyers, by putting them in touch with the best home building and remodeling businesses in Greater Boston.

"We go through a very extensive vetting process to admit members into the association," Abt said. "They have to be sponsored by someone in the association and have to be approved by a board of directors. We have a code of ethics that they're required to follow."

DON'T MISS THIS

Glastonbury Abbey Open House

The monks of Glastonbury Abbey in Hingham invite anyone and everyone to celebrate autumn with a fun-filled day on their grounds at 16 Hull St., Route 228, just across Route 3-A, on Saturday, Sept. 29. This totally free event will take place 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., rain or shine. People of all ages are urged to attend.

The first-time ever event will feature chowder and ice cream donated by area eateries, hot dogs supplied by Frankie the Hot Dog King, rock 'n roll music by Dave Foley, tours of the gardens, hayrides throughout the grounds, walks through the Abbey's one-of-a-kind stone labyrinth, and visits with – and a chance to feed – the monks' herd of goats.

Call 781-749-2155, ext. 200, for more information.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Frank England

SAN DIEGO, CA – Frank Wesson England died peacefully on September 4, 2012 in San Diego, CA. Formerly of East Greenbush, NY, Madison, NJ, Cohasset, MA, Lake George, NY and Las Vegas, NV.

Frank England

Frank was born on May 12, 1920 in Ft. Benning, GA, third son of Col. George Washington England and Dorothea Young England. Frank attended Mohawk Country Day School in upstate New York, and Syracuse University, graduating in 1947 with a B.S. in Business Administration, lettering in lacrosse at both schools.

Like many in the Greatest Generation, Frank's college days were interrupted by WWII. From 1941 to 1946, he served as an infantry officer in the U.S. Army (Fifth Army's) campaigns in North Africa, Sicily, and Italy under Generals Mark Clark and George Patton. He left active duty on 1/20/46 as a captain. Thereafter, Frank served in the Army Reserve, graduating from Command & General Staff College in 1965, becoming the Commandant of the 1037th USAR School in Lowell, MA (5th largest in the country) and receiving many honors and commendations. He retired from the Army Reserve in 1973 as a colonel. Gov. Frank Sargent appointed him a Brigadier General in Massachusetts National Guard in honor of his years of highly commended service.

In 1947, Frank embarked on a stellar career as insurance executive with Aetna Casualty & Surety, serving as bond manager at Aetna offices in Albany, N.Y, Rochester, N.Y., and Newark, N.J. In 1969, Frank became the bond manager at Aetna's Boston, MA office and the family moved to Cohasset. Retiring from Aetna in 1984, he joined Carlin Insurance (Natick, MA, later known as Eastern Insurance) as Vice-President of Surety. Frank retired a number of years later, always maintaining his interest and service in the insurance and construction business.

On January 20, 1951, Frank married Kathleen VanDenHouten in East Greenbush, NY. For a brief time, Frank joined her family's business, Van's Equipment Sales. Frank and Kay raised four daughters, Debbie, Kathy, Terry and Janet, in communities selected for their public school systems: first East Greenbush, NY, then Madison, NJ, and finally, Cohasset, MA.

Frank held many professional licenses and certifications and more importantly, served in many capacities in professional and service organizations. He was president of Surety Associations in Albany, NY and Newark, NJ. He was very active in many contractors' associations on a local, state and national level, especially Massachusetts. A Director for the Construction Industries of Massachusetts and Associated Building Contractors (ABC) of Mass/RI, Frank became a national ABC director, serving as education Committee Chairman of the Mass/RI ABC, and as National ABC Education Committee Chairman. Frank always maintained his interest and service in the construction and insurance industries.

Frank loved politics and political discussions. He served in volunteer capacities in numerous campaigns before running for office himself. Continuing a life of public service, in 1974 Frank was elected and then re-elected to the Cohasset School Committee, eventually serving six years. Frank served as School Committee Chair during the Proposition 2½ referendum. Then Frank was elected to the Cohasset Board of Selectman in 1983, serving total of three years, again serving as Chair in his last year (1986.) Three daughters, Kathy '71, Terry '74 and Janet '80, and one son-in-law (Chris Duggan '72) graduated from CHS. Frank's grand-daughter, Alex Duggan, began her education at Joseph Osgood School. For over thirty years, Frank refereed lacrosse at the high school and collegiate level.

For the past fifteen years, Frank and Kay spent summers in Lake George, NY and winters in Las Vegas, NV. Frank is survived by his wife of sixty-one years, Kathleen V. England, and their daughters: Deborah E. Zepnick (Glen) of Calabasas, CA, Kathleen J. England of LV, NV, Terese E. Duggan (Christopher) of Poway, CA and Janet M. England of Nashua, NH. He is also survived by five grand-daughters, Andrea (Zepnick) Laird (Justin), Valerie Zepnick, Alexandra Duggan, Kara Duggan, and Maura Duggan, and two great grandsons, Trevor Laird and Reid Laird. He is also survived by three nephews and a niece (Sanford England, Michael England, George W. England, III, Nancy Sauls), and many other relatives (with another generation currently serving in the U.S. Army).

Services Info: The family would be honored by your presence at any of the following celebrations of Frank's life: Funeral Mass, Friday Sept 21, 2012 10:00AM St. Gabriel's Church, Poway, CA. Reception to follow - Church . Memorial Mass, Sat Sept 29, 2012 11:00AM Sacred Heart Church, Lake George, NY. Followed by: Celebration of Frank's Life and Reception Sans Souci Bar & Restaurant, Cleverdale, NY. Military Honor Service and Burial: TBD Arlington National Cemetery, Arlington, VA.

John B. Millard

COHASSET – John Bidwell Millard, 80, of Cohasset MA died Aug. 28, 2012.

John B. Millard

He was born in Newton, Jan. 6, 1932, the son of Violetta Bidwell and Norman R. Millard; and the brother of Norman R. Millard Jr., all of whom predeceased him.

He grew up in Newton, attended Hebron Academy in Maine and graduated from Harvard College in 1954, having majored in Physical Sciences. An NCAA champion and one of the five fastest freestyle swimmers in the world, he was invited to participate in the Olympic Trials in California in 1952, but declined because he had to work to earn tuition. After serving in the U.S. Army in New Jersey, he immediately joined Polaroid Corporation in Cambridge, MA where he worked with great pleasure for 40 years in Engineering Quality Control and Reliability. As George Bernard Shaw said, "Happy is the man who makes a living by his hobby," and John did just that, as photography was his lifelong interest from the age of 12. He was granted three patents, including one that moderated the exposure of bright snow and beach scenes to prevent overexposure. Polaroid leased this patent to major SLR camera companies around the world. John studied with Josef Karsh and Ansel Adams at Yosemite and won many photographic prizes including three Best of Show awards at the Quincy Art Festival. Upon retiring, he established Custom Imaging, a small company through which he restored photographs. He was the United States representative to the International Standards Organization (ISO) Committee on Exposure, a member of the Society of Photographic Scientists and Engineers, an avid member of the Cohasset Golf Club and president of the Old Goats.

He was the extraordinary and loving husband of Elizabeth (Betsy) (Jockers) Millard; and the father of a son, Stuart M. Millard of Scituate and his wife Edith, and a daughter, Janice Millard Nykyforchyn of Waterford, CT and her husband John. He is also survived by two step-daughters, Lauren Alemian Saleski of Hingham and her husband Stephen, and Jennifer Alemian Kinscherf of Cohasset and her husband Robert. Eight surviving grandchildren include Christine, Michael and Danielle Nykyforchyn; Katherine, Michael and Kristin Saleski; and Carly and Richard Kinscherf.

He had a deep and abiding love for, and tremendous pride in, each member of his extended family and was truly beloved in return. All who knew John will recall his quiet modesty, his keen intellect, his love of laughter and his generous and kindly, non-judgemental spirit. He always made time to help others, whether to fix a computer glitch or find a pair of errant eyeglasses.

A memorial service was held Tuesday, Sept. 4 at 4 p.m. at the First Parish in Cohasset Unitarian Univeralist Meeting House on Cohasset Common, to be followed by a celebratory reception across the street, 25 North Main St., at the Parish House.

Donations in John's memory may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, whose loving team made John's last weeks so comfortable, 30 Resevoir Park Dr., Rockland, MA 02370.

EMAIL CHAIN UPDATE

Civility policy aired again

Officials discuss code of conduct

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

After an email thread between a former and current town official was copied to the local press and the Boston Globe last week, the Board of Selectmen held a discussion on keeping communications between elected officials, board members, town employees and private citizens on a more civil level.

The issue first came before the selectmen in March, when Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski had the board sign an official document stating that they would try to uphold certain values in their day-to-day communications, and would ask other town officials and employees to do the same. This document is called the Town of Cohasset Code of Core Values for Civil Discourse. Adhering to the code is optional, although strongly encouraged by the selectmen and town manager.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson pointed out at the start of Tuesday's discussion that the town can't exactly censor free speech, however.

"The board has no enforcement power regarding this code," said Carlson. " We are all free to speak our minds without fear of government action. Furthermore, under the libel laws, public officials have little protection from scurrilous, false and inflammatory accusations. People can be as nasty and abusive to me as they want. I have no legal recourse. That is the law of the land. The courts have spoken and I, for one, fully support these rulings."

The reason the selectmen were discussing civil discourse that night was at the request of former selectmen chair Karen Quigley, who engaged in a contentious email exchange with Water Commis-

New juice bar opens on Ripley Road

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Juiceheads, rejoice.

Those looking for fresh-pressed juice and smoothies made from local, organic ingredients need not venture to Boston, Cambridge, or even New York City anymore — now, there's a juice bar right here in Cohasset.

And if Lido Juice Bar owners Stephen Johnson and Alyson Gregory have their way, the Ripley Road location will be the first of what they hope will become an international brand — the Starbucks of the fresh juice world, if you will.

"We want to see a juice bar – our juice bar – on every corner," said Gregory.

Lido is well on its way. The new shop already has regulars who stop in daily to enjoy juices like "The Village Green" (made with kale, spinach, celery, fuji apple and more) or smoothies like "Lunch Date" (strawberries or peaches, bananas, almond milk, dates, vanilla whey protein). Those who are on a cleansing kick can get their fix, too; while Lido's menu offers several different juices and smoothies

VSO sharing

Temporary solution for veterans services

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The town of Hingham will temporarily assist Cohasset by lending a veterans' service officer (VSO). During their Tuesday meeting, the Board of Selectmen unanimously approved a 90-day regionalization program, sharing veterans' services with Hingham while Cohasset officials consider a long-term solution for assisting veterans in town.

Cohasset has gone through a few veterans' service officers over the past few years. Cohasset Police Sgt. Garrett Hunt has most recently served as interim VSO since former VSO Joe McElroy resigned from his post last December.

Hunt was only slated to serve as interim until June of this year; the town was expected to hire a new VSO to start on July 1. Meanwhile, Hunt has joined the Air Force reserve unit and will no longer continue his part-time VSO activities. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that Hunt would continue to assist Cohasset veterans as the town transitions to a new VSO.

While the town has posted the position and received a number of applications, Milanoski said that he is concerned about "getting into a position every 18 months where we have to find a new VSO," since the position requires significant training.

The town manager said that he has been discussing how best to meet the needs of Cohasset veterans with Coleman Nee, the state's Secretary of Veterans' Services who is also a Cohasset resident, Elder Affairs director Coral Grande, Col. Edward Graham, and Tom Wigmore of the Sons of the American Legion. For now, the group has "collectively come to agree" on a temporary solution, Milanoski said.

Milanoski told the Board of Selectmen on Tuesday that

PUBLIC HEALTH REMINDER

First flu clinic next week

What:
The Board of Health will conduct the first flu clinic of the season next week.

When and where:
From 10 a.m. to noon on Tuesday, Sept. 25 at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. (Second clinic is Tuesday, Oct. 30).

Who:
The clinic is open to all Cohasset residents 9 years and older. Everyone over the age of 6 months should get a flu shot as long as they don't have an allergy to one of the components of the vaccine.

What you need:
Please bring your insurance cards and wear a short sleeve shirt. There is no charge for the vaccination, however local Boards of Health are allowed to bill most insurances which is why people are asked to bring their insurance cards with them to the clinic.

Quote:
"We have plenty of vaccine. State supplied flu vaccine allocation has been cut drastically but the Town of Cohasset has purchased vaccine for our residents," said Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin.

Questions:
Call Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin at 781-383-2210.

A New Year at UMass Boston

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

At Fall Convocation, an annual tradition on our campus, I had the privilege of addressing our students, faculty, staff, and community members to kick off the new academic year. I discussed how the improvements we make today fulfill a promise we have made to the future: to make Boston's public university an even better place for students from the Commonwealth, the nation, and the world to learn and grow. We're well on our way.

Earlier this month, nearly 16,000 students returned to our harbor-front campus for the beginning of classes, admiring the progress we've made on our physical transformations while they were away. The frame is in place for the new Integrated Sciences Complex, a facility that will provide much-needed research space, and the renovation of the Clark Athletic Center gymnasium, with a new floor, bleachers, and other amenities, is nearly complete.

There is also more to come. The design of a second new academic building, containing classrooms and spaces for the arts, is complete. Construction will begin this winter.

Our students are the clearest example of the progress we've made. Our first communications and engineering undergraduate students began taking courses in these new majors this year. A new master's program in applied economics held its first classes. And our four new doctoral programs welcomed their inaugural students.

Students returned to an expanded UMass Boston. Over the summer, we founded the School for Global Inclusion and Social Development – the first graduate school in the world to focus on wellness and economic development from an international perspective. The school focuses on groups who are excluded from communities at home and abroad due to disability or other conditions.

We also formed a new partnership with UMass Medical School, funded by a $6.7 million grant from the National Institutes of Health. Working together, researchers from both campuses will establish the UMass Center for Health Equity Intervention Research, a collaborative center that will allow our researchers and faculty members to study and improve health outcomes for minority and socioeconomically disadvantaged populations. It also will allow us to begin offering a minority health scholars program for undergraduates, giving students the chance to be deeply involved in high-level research.

New things are happening at UMass Boston. I invite you to come see the changes afoot at Boston's public university by attending our Open House on Saturday, October 13. All are welcome to attend – please visit www.umb.edu/openhouse to register.

FISH volunteers

Cohasset F.I.S.H. is currently in need of a few more volunteer drivers. This organization provides rides to medical appointments for those in Cohasset without other options. Each volunteer is scheduled to drive (if needed) one weekday per month using their own vehicle. Our corps of drivers has declined over the summer months as a result of relocations, disabilities, or simple aging issues — thus the need for more volunteers.

School Committee cuts public comment period

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"We do allow public comment throughout the meeting on items that are on the agenda."
Jeanne Astino, chairman

This Wednesday's School Committee was a little different than it has been in the past — this week, there was no public comment on the agenda.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that when she was making up the agenda, she was "following the direction of my chair."

Similar to Board of Selectmen meetings, the school committee has allowed public comment for items not on the agenda at the end of every meeting.

The Sept. 5 school committee ended with a public comment from Adrienne McCarthy, who has served on the board in the past and criticized for the superintendent and the committee for not publicizing the district's five-year plan (See commentary, page 13).

School committee chair Jeanne Astino said that eliminating the public comment at the end should better help the committee stay on task, so that meetings are not "derailed" by off-topic remarks that the board is not allowed to respond to, since their portion of the meeting is over. She also said that a separate public comment period was not something the school board has done historically.

"We do allow public comment throughout the meeting on items that are on the agenda," said Astino. "We're going to revert to what is stated on our policy. [Public comment] was just added a couple of meetings ago to try it out."

The committee's policy states that public comment is encouraged at "an appropriate point" in the meeting, "following initial discussion by the school committee on various agenda items."

Members of the public are permitted to speak "at the discretion of the chair." Speakers are allowed three minutes, but the chair is allowed to extend the time limit. People may also present written comments to the board before or after the meeting.

The policy does not allow "improper conduct" or "defamatory or abusive remarks." If someone speaks out of order, the chair can "terminate that individual's privilege of address."

However, members of the public are allowed to "offer such objective criticisms of the school operations and programs," but are not allowed to "make personal complaints about school personnel, nor against any member of the school community."

Furthermore, Astino said that school committee meetings, while held in public, are "not public meetings, technically. Public comment doesn't need to be allowed at all. The school committee wants to allow a public comment, but if the item is not on the agenda, perhaps it's appropriate to place it on an agenda at a future meeting."

Under the state's Open Meeting Law guide, the school committee chair has the right to deny public comment. However, Astino said that members of the public are not "excluded from the process at all,' since the board will still allow on-topic comments throughout the meetings.

"We don't want to discourage people from coming to our meetings," the school committee chair said. "We're just trying to figure out the best way to handle [public comment], and sticking to the agenda is the best way, in my opinion."

What does the Open Meeting Law say?

Under the Open Meeting Law, the public is permitted to attend meetings of public bodies but is excluded from an executive session that is called for a valid purpose listed in the law...

While the public is permitted to attend an open meeting, an individual may not address the public body without permission of the chair. An individual is not permitted to disrupt a meeting of a public body, and at the request of the chair, all members of the public shall be silent. If after clear warning, a person continues to be disruptive, the chair may order the person to leave the meeting, and if the person does not leave, the chair may authorize a constable or other officer to remove the person. – Source: Open Meeting Law Guide, Mass.gov.

Selectmen, Housing Authority appoint new HA member

In a joint meeting with the Housing Authority held during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting, the selectmen appointed Virginia Laugelli Najmi to the Housing Authority. Najmi has experience in program coordinating and grant writing. While she has a cousin on the Housing Authority, this was disclosed during the meeting. Najmi is also a resident of 60 Elm Street; both boards felt that having a resident on the HA would be advantageous so that residents would have an advocate on the board. Ted Carr and Jean Hajjar also applied for the seat, but Hajjar withdrew her application. Najmi was appointed unanimously.

Serious accident near Tedeschi Plaza

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police responded to a serious accident outside Tedeschi Plaza on Route 3A (Chief Justice Cushing Highway) at 4:46 p.m. on Sunday (Sept. 16).

Police said the two-car accident involved a 2000 Mercury sedan, operated by an 86-year-old Scituate woman, who pulled out onto the highway near Pilgrim Bank and attempted to make a left to head south. Police said she failed to yield to a 2007 Nissan sedan, operated by a 33-year-old Dorchester man, who was headed north. The Nissan struck the side of the Mercury that spun around on impact.

The Scituate woman was transported to the hospital by Cohasset ambulance. The Dorchester man and his 11-month-old passenger were transported by Hingham ambulance. None of the injuries were life threatening, police said. Both cars were towed.

The Scituate woman was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

Parking lot

An 81-year-old Hingham woman in a 2007 Toyota sedan caused a ruckus last Friday (Sept. 14) in the parking lot of the medical building off Route 3A. Police said she was visiting the doctor and when she was leaving she put the car into drive and hit a concrete retaining wall in the parking lot. Police said she then panicked, put the car into reverse and floored it, hitting three other cars. The 81-year-old was transported to the hospital with non-life threatening injuries as was a 22-year-old Kingston woman in a Saab sedan, which was one of the cars that was struck. The other two cars involved were a 1999 Volvo wagon and a 2012 Kia SUV; both those cars were unoccupied.

Police filed an immediate threat with the Registry of Motor Vehicles, which revoked the elderly woman's driver's license.

Harassing calls

A 40-year-old Cohasset mother reported to police last week that her 13-year-old son, who is a student at the middle school, has been receiving harassing phone calls that are bullying and obscene on his cell phone. The numbers are blocked so there was no way of telling where the calls were coming from.

Police will be working with the phone company to see if they can find out who has been making the calls.

Ride home

Police responded to a call last Tuesday (Sept. 11) at 5:48 a.m. about a suspicious man walking in the middle of the road on Beechwood Street and who was headed toward Route 3A. He was described as wearing a hoodie and jeans and would not move out of the way for cars. A cruiser arrived and gave the man a ride to his home on Gannett Road in Scituate. The caller suspected the man had put a large rock in the road but there was no way to verify that, police said.

Rude teens

A 49-year-old woman who owns a business on Chief Justice Cushing Highway reported to police last Wednesday (Sept. 12) at 12:58 p.m. that several teens, who were having car trouble and who were waiting for a tow truck outside her business, became rude when asked to leave. They did move along after having words with the caller, who wanted the incident logged.

No permit

Police were unable to locate a solicitor who was selling bundling for Comcast after receiving a complaint last Wednesday (Sept. 12) from a resident of Forest Avenue that the solicitor did not have a permit. Police said Comcast does have salespeople around town with the proper permits. They have been using subcontractors to sell the bundled services, police said.

Racing car

Police will be checking the MBTA parking lot at around 6 p.m. after receiving a complaint that a 2006 Honda Pilot races through the parking lot at the same time every day. The caller, who has complained in the past, said the motorist gets off the 6:02 p.m. train and this time, was able to provide police with the license plate of the car.

Tire slashed

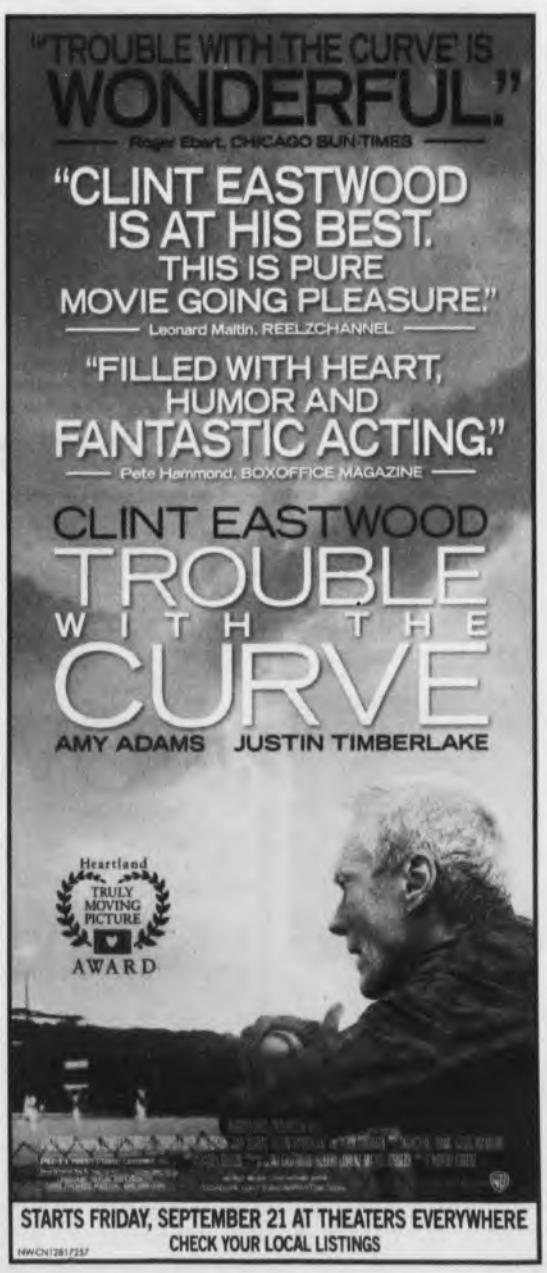
A 53-year-old Braintree woman, who was visiting her 21-year-old son who works at Shaw's, went to the police station at 10:38 p.m. last Wednesday (Sept. 12) to report that her tire was slashed while at Shaw's. The woman, who is estranged from her other son, who is 20, told police she suspects he may have slashed the tire. Police are looking into the incident.

Rope cut

A 61-year-old Jerusalem Road woman went to the police station at 11:47 a.m. on Saturday (Sept. 15) to report that someone had cut her boat loose. Police said it is unclear if the rope the boat was tied to, had been cut with a knife or broke due to wear and tear. The boat was not damaged.

Gas leak

Cohasset fire responded to a report of a gas leak from a 2003 Ford Taurus, that lists to a 39-year-old Weymouth man, on Saturday at around 4 p.m. at the Harborview Apartments off Elm Street. The fire department contained the leak and cleaned it up. The car had to be towed away.



Car keys

The Cohasset Fire Department helped a concern caller retrieve car keys that had been inadvertently dropped into the catch basin by pulling off the cover. The call came in on Saturday at about 7 p.m.

Moving

Police helped keep the peace on Sunday when a caller reported she was moving out of the house on S. Main Street and her landlord was giving her a hard time. Police said the landlord told them he had showed up to ensure that whatever she was taking away belonged to her.

VSO

for now, he would like to share resources with Hingham. Milanoski has been in talks with Hingham Town Administrator Ted Alexiades on regionalizing VSO services for a period of time.

Hingham has a full-time VSO, Keith Jermyn, who also has assistants; one of these will work out of the Cohasset VSO office a few days a week, with Jermyn overseeing the services.

Jermyn "is very proficient in what happens" with veterans, said Milanoski, adding that the VSO "is held in high regard."

The arrangement will last for the next 90 days, giving Cohasset time to evaluate the position and explore options for veterans' services.

"He's willing to come in on an interim basis, assigning an assistant to help us while we take a harder look" at veterans' services in Cohasset, Milanoski said.

Given its small size and population, Cohasset is not required to have a full-time VSO, according to the town manager.

Cohasset's VSO position pays a yearly stipend of $10,400, or $200/week. Milanoski said the town would pay this amount to Hingham for their VSO services.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said that he thought this seemed like a "great long-term solution."

Selectman Leland Jenkins agreed that regionalizing services could be the answer. "We should pursue a group service," he said. "We don't need someone in Cohasset to do the work, as long as they're committed to veterans."

Milanoski said that working with Jermyn and his assistants will provide the stability Cohasset has been lacking in terms of veterans' services.

"What he provides is that continuity," the town manager said of Jermyn, adding that veterans "will always have someone there to go to."

Senior Center survey delayed

The online survey on the town's Senior Center project has been delayed. The survey was initially set to launch last week, but there have been delays with the consulting group from UMass Boston who are conducting the survey.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that a postcard with log-in instructions will still be sent to all residents age 18 and up on the date the survey is live.

Computer assistance will also be available at the town library that day.

Special Town Meeting start time debated

Special Town Meeting will take place on Monday, December 10, starting at 6:30 p.m. at the high school auditorium.

The 6:30 start time was a compromise. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski initially asked that the meeting start at 6 p.m. that night. The town manager explained that the Recreation Department is planning to have pizza and activities for kids during the meeting.

However, some selectmen said 6 p.m. is too early, especially for those who work outside town. The board voted 4-1 to approve 6:30, with selectman Martha Gjesteby dissenting because she preferred the traditional start time of 7 p.m.

SCHOOL BRIEF

School fees compared to other districts

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo discussed school fees with the school board during their Wednesday meeting. She has been comparing the district's fees for all-day kindergarten and bus transportation with those of surrounding towns.

School committee chair Jeanne Astino called the discussion prudent, stating that "we haven't gone up on anything in a while."

Currently, Cohasset charges $2,600 for all-day kindergarten, compared to $3,000 in Scituate, Hull, Hingham and Marshfield. Duxbury, Weymouth and Norwell charge more.

Bus transportation costs $180 in Cohasset, with $540 for the family maximum. While Hingham, Hull and Marshfield do not charge, Scituate, Duxbury, Weymouth and Norwell all charge more than Cohasset.

While Cataldo did not include pre-k fees on the list, she told the board that there is a "substantial difference" between what Cohasset charges and other towns.

Cohasset will not necessarily raise these fees, however; Cataldo said they are merely discussing the issue now before the start of budget season.

"It's not something we look at lightly," said Astino. "We're going to carefully assess what we're charging our families and make sure we're not overcharging."

The matter will be discussed again at an upcoming school committee meeting.

CIVILITY

Selectmen Martha Gjesteby said that she stands by comments she made to the Globe last week, stating that officials should "agree to disagree but not be disagreeable."

sion chairman Peter DeCaprio over her request for information on the planned AT&T cell tower installation at the Bear Hill Water Tank.

The Bear Hill project came before the selectmen when Quigley was on the board, from 2009 to 2011, and led to a 10-taxpayer lawsuit from abutters who were concerned over safety issues with the access road that would be needed to build the tower. Quigley said that she wanted to ensure the contract includes protections for the abutters and also wanted to know if the revenue from the tower would go to the town's general fund or the water department. She told the Mariner last week that she is not a direct abutter to Bear Hill.

When Quigley asked DeCaprio for a copy of AT&T's contract, DeCaprio directed her to the town manager's office or Town Counsel. After Quigley wrote back and thanked him for his willingness to cooperate, DeCaprio wrote that he felt no need to respond to her and that Quigley's efforts to involve herself in town affairs would be better served elsewhere, such as volunteering to drive the meals-on-wheels van.

Quigley said that she was offended by DeCaprio's insults. She emailed the town manager and board of selectmen, telling the board that it was their job to enforce civil discourse between town officials and the public.

"The selectmen may have no jurisdiction over independently elected boards," she wrote. "However, you are the highest elected officials of the town and, as such, set the tone of discourse in town government."

Although Milanoski invited Quigley to meet with him during his office hours and to come before the selectmen with her concerns, she accepted the first invitation and declined the second.

"I will not be summoned before the BoS to submit to their critical judgment," Quigley wrote last week.

Emails

DeCaprio did attend the meeting, however, and came armed with a pile of emails from Quigley and Tinytown Gazette publisher and blogger Tanna Kasperowicz, the two of whom, he believes, are behind an "orchestrated campaign" to "malign" the water commissioner publicly, DeCaprio said.

He also pointed out that Carlson had said Quigley was the one who had requested the meeting, yet she decided not to show. "Am I the only one who sees the irony here?" DeCaprio asked.

Selectmen Martha Gjesteby said that she stands by comments she made to the Globe last week, stating that officials should "agree to disagree but not be disagreeable."

Meanwhile, selectmen vice chair Diane Kennedy said that she was surprised the selectmen were even discussing this issue.

"I think this board has always maintained civil discourse. We're always willing to hear from the other side," Kennedy said. She added that "personal attacks" and nasty emails, "something meant to make a person feel uncomfortable" are "bad form."

Kennedy personalized the issue by saying that "anybody that wants to intimidate me or scare me or try to influence me is just really not playing a very nice came. That is what has come into play lately. It's very distressing to me."

The selectmen chair did not elaborate on who was trying to intimidate or influence her personally.

DeCaprio turned the discussion to bloggers.

"Ironically enough, while the constitution offers protections through the Mass. defamation laws, it's one of the few states where bloggers have the least amount of protection," he said. However, the same laws "afford officials plenty of protection."

That said, the water commissioner said that he would not recant any of the things he wrote to Quigley.

"I'm not going to apologize for anything I said. I meant what I said. I had very good reason for saying it. I'm sick and tired of being abused, the lies and misstatements," said DeCaprio.

Of what he called "malicious emails trying to stir up trouble," the water commission chair said, "I'm not going to put up with it. I work 30 hours a week at the water company; I've had it... This stuff has got to stop. Whether you put a stop to it or not, I don't care."

DeCaprio also said that recently, Gjesteby had gotten involved; he said he had an email to prove it. Gjesteby responded, "I have no problem with you. You're doing your job. I don't like all those emails going back... I agree with you. I agree it's got to cease."

"Where does it start?" DeCaprio responded. "We all know... Everybody in this room knows where it starts."

The water commissioner left his pile of email correspondence with the selectmen to become part of the public record.

Response

The selectmen, meanwhile, seemed fuzzy as to how to respond.

Kennedy said that the town's civil discourse code "is like the honor code in college... It's just there." However, she believes the selectmen "have a responsibility if we adopted something like this as a theory, we have a responsibility to live this."

In the meantime, Kennedy said that she doesn't appreciate it when the press covers the conflict between town officials and citizens.

"We can't get the business of the town done," she said, when people are distracted by "newspapers covering crazy rumors and innuendo."

"It's a very simple message," Kennedy continued. "We are here, whether you like it or not" to "do the right thing" by the town. "People ought to think twice before they try to stick a spoke in the wheels."

Selectman Fred Koed suggested both sides take a "time out" for the next month before engaging in further correspondence in order to "let the dust settle."

Koed said he hopes Cohasseters, officials and otherwise, will uphold the selectmen's code. "The best thing for this town to work effectively would be for everyone to adopt this policy for themselves, whether they're an official... or a blog writer."

Carlson said it would be nice if the dissenting parties could "break bread and shake hands," but acknowledged that it was unlikely to happen.

Boston Mag. ranks CHS 29th in state

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

In its annual survey of Boston area schools, Boston Magazine released its list of top 50 public high schools this month. Cohasset Middle-High School is number 29 on that list; last year, the Cohasset district ranked 13.

In 2010, CHS was number 17. The school had successfully cracked the top 20 and was making strides toward the top 10, so this year's drop is unexpected.

To compile its list, Boston Magazine researched databases from the state's Dept. of Elementary and Secondary Education. They surveyed Boston area schools to determine graduation rates, student to teacher ratios, number of extracurricular activities offered and other factors.

The magazine developed a formula that incorporated 13 different data points in order to rate a school's quality. Performance on standardized tests – the MCAS, SATs and AP exams – had the most weight in the rankings. Next on the priority list was graduation rates and the percentage of students who go on to college. Student-teacher ratio, per-pupil spending, and the number of sports programs and clubs were considered to be important factors, but did not weigh as heavily in the rankings.

Weston High was ranked number one on the list. Bedford High was number 10, with Westwood High taking the number 13 slot that Cohasset occupied last year. Boston Latin made number 20. Duxbury High, which was number 27 last year, dropped to number 33 this year.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that the drop in rank could be "arbitrary in cases."

"My understanding is they changed the way they do the criteria," Cataldo said. "Does it measure the greatness of our students and teachers? Not necessarily. This year we had an outstanding group of students going on to spectacular schools... It's a very broad spectrum."

The superintendent, who is starting her second school year in Cohasset, said that she does her best to stay involved in the day-to-day in each of the district's schools.

"I care about what's going on in the classrooms," said Cataldo. "I'm in my classrooms every single week, and I'll keep that going because that's how I learn best how the district works."

Governance committee resignation received

George Charmillard of the Governance Committee resigned from the board on September 13, stating a potential conflict of interest since he already serves on the Advisory Committee. The next day, Thomas Killilea sent a letter to the town manager's office and was the first one to apply to the committee.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, who chaired the committee before becoming interim town manager, said that the committee is four or five members shy of its original charter.

The governance committee plans to hold its first public hearing, which was part of the committee's charge when it was formed last year. Chair Christine Cunning said in an email that they will hold this public meeting during an evening next month. The committee has historically met at 7:30 a.m. on Thursdays, which is the time that most committee members said is the most convenient time for them to meet.

The governance committee was due to sunset on Dec. 31, 2012, but the selectmen voted Tuesday to extend the committee for another year. However, the committee could complete their duties after Spring Town Meeting.

NEWS UPDATE

Town to renew Our World lease through October

Library Trustees want to share top floor

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The struggle between the town library and children's museum to control the rear of the library building seems to have been resolved, for now.

On Tuesday, the Board of Selectmen voted to authorize the Acting Town Manager to renew the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum's lease of the rear portion of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 100 Sohier Street, which the museum has been using for the past decade. Before Our World, the 7,000 square foot, two-floor space was a condemned wing of the former Joseph Osgood elementary school.

The Children's Global Discovery Museum, Inc. was formally organized in 2001 as a non-profit organization to create educational awareness. The library trustees approached Leah Taylor Roy about using the space for the museum; the Oct. 2000 Special Town Meeting approved leasing the wing to the discovery center. The agreement was for the town to lease the building to Our World for $1 per year until the museum became financially stable. Through private fundraising, the space was renovated and turned into Our World to the tune of $90,000.

The museum's 10-year, $1 a year lease with the town expired this month and was renewed through the end of September at a recent selectmen's meeting. Tuesday night, in order to allow time to revise the museum's response to the town's request for proposal's (RFP), the lease was extended through the end of October. The museum was the only responder to the RFP, according to Our World's attorney, Charles Humphreys.

The selectmen's vote to approve a new lease was pending a few changes to the museum's proposal; the selectmen would like to see a five-year budget that includes paid staff, paying for utilities, and fundraising goals. Our World has relied on volunteer staff people, including director Julie Laugelle, and membership dues, rental payments for events, fundraisers and charitable donations for the past ten years.

Selectmen agreed that while it's impressive the museum has gotten by on volunteerism and donations all this time, this type of business practice is unsustainable.

"I am concerned with the overall stability in the organization," said selectmen vice chair Diane Kennedy, adding that she finds it "mind boggling" that the museum has managed with only volunteer staff for the past 10 years. Our World needs to share more specific financials in their proposal, she said.

"The vision and goals are very admirable," said Kennedy. "All of that is great, but we're tying up town space... I need more [information] to feel good about it and obligated to do right by this organization."

Humphreys told the board that Our World is looking into hiring a part-time staff person to assist Laugelle.

Trustees

Apart from making those adjustments, the renewed lease appears to be a done deal for the museum, to the chagrin of the Library Board of Trustees. Several trustees and library director Jacqueline Rafferty attended a selectmen's meeting held in Our World back in May, stating at the time that their understanding was that at the end of the 10-year lease, the library would get to take control of the back of the building. Trustees argued at the time that due to growth in programs and library usage over the years, the library has outgrown its current space. Last night, trustees said that if they do not expand into the Our World space, the library might eventually have to move elsewhere or build more space.

Two trustees, chair Agnes McCann and member Patience Towle, came to the selectmen's meeting to state that they would like control of the museum's second floor, which Our World and the library have been sharing. The library holds events and programs there every week, including their Sunday Author Talks series and homework center.

McCann said that if the selectmen did in fact agree to execute another 10-year lease with Our World, she hoped they would "remember to look out for the interests of many when negotiating a lease that will benefit the few."

The trustees conceded that while they would like exclusive control over the schedule, they would continue to cooperate with the Our World staff.

"We would rather have it, but if [certain] conditions are part of the lease, we can live with that," said McCann.

However, the library would like the lease to be reviewed again after five years and renewed only if certain "performance measures" are met. The trustees also suggest that if the museum fails to comply and cooperate with the library on the schedule, it should result in default of the lease.

In a letter to the selectmen, the trustees also said that they would like Our World to pay its utility bills, requesting that the town bill the museum for them. They also said the lease should specify the museum's regular business hours, and that "non-business hours should not be shortened considerably such that they deny library usage of the space."

Humphreys said that while the RFP asks for a renewal in five years, followed by another five-year renewal, the town should automatically renew the lease in 2017 as long as the museum continues to sustain itself. Humphreys explained that how much revenue the museum brings in should not be a consideration, since Our World provides a service to Cohasset residents and the community at large without costing the town a cent.

The attorney further argued that before Our World opened its doors in 2003, the back of the library was a vacant space in poor condition. Thus the museum, "who has improved and created the space," should have the right to control the space, said Humphreys.

"It's more than met its charter," Humphreys said of the museum. "It's not only surviving, it's thriving. It's a very healthy organization, used by a number of people, and has a dynamic mother's club."

For the pre-k crowd, Humphreys added, the museum provides a "stimulating, exciting, safe environment."

Second floor

As far as allowing the library "unfettered access" to the second floor, Humphreys was reluctant.

"The use of the second floor for birthday parties and events is an essential part of the museum's revenue stream. The library or any other organization can have it if the time is not already taken by Our World. It requires some advance planning, but it hasn't really been a problem."

Director Laugelle added, "We try to accommodate everybody."

The library trustees begged to differ. While saying that communications have improved between the museum and library staff over the past several months, Towle said that there have been many scheduling conflicts over the years.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski suggested creating an electronic calendar that both the library and museum can share; that way if someone books an event, the date and time will be blocked on the schedule. If that party chooses to cancel the event, they would need to let the other party know if and when the slot becomes available again. This language will be added to the museum's proposal, the town manager said.

While the selectmen voted to approve Milanoski executing the museum's lease, they seemed split over what will happen in five years.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said that the lease should be reviewed again by selectmen in five years. "It's a town building," she said. "That's our jurisdiction."

However, selectmen chair Paul Carlson said that if Our World is "performing, they ought to be able to continue" operating in their current space.

The selectmen will review the revised proposal at their next scheduled meeting.

Political discourse

Hey Cohasset...it has been an up and down week, with sun, wind, rain, and sun again, only in New England as they say. Fall is here with the beauty of all the colors that it brings in the leaves that are changing, the decorations of pumpkins, scarecrows, and so much more.

One thing I learned kind of the hard way the other night, is that the deer and other animals are already starting to come out and get themselves ready for later in the Fall and Winter and they don't stop for us or our cars. Keep your eyes open, buckle up, and slow down a bit, especially around sunrise and sunset.

Another point I want to mention and share with you all is in regards to one if my least favorite topics, politics. We all have opinions and of course, we are all entitled to them. What is not OK in my opinion is when the opinions become those of anger, attacks on others views and when grown men and women choose to show our children, exactly how to use the rule, "two wrongs don't make a right!" Have your opinion and share it or not, in a way that is respectful and adult-like, because the children who are hearing and watching are the ones who are affected in the years to come. Now, on with this week's news.

Scholarship

Rockland Trust awarded five $2,500 scholarships to high school graduates in communities from Cape Cod to the South Shore and Watertown, including Isabel Robinson, a graduate of Cohasset High School.

The bank selected winners within its footprint based on academics, extracurricular activities and community involvement. Each applicant was also asked to submit an essay about why community service is important to them.

The bank received more than 350 applications from students in Plymouth, Barnstable and Bristol counties, as well as Cohasset, Randolph, Braintree, Quincy, Wellesley and Watertown. Congratulations, Isabel!

BC High

Congratulations go out to a number of Cohasset students who attend Boston College High School. The following earned High Honor's for the fourth quarter last spring. They are: Taylor Golz, Kyle Healey, Patrick Kearney, and Jay Salerno, all 2012; Michael Fegreus, Andrew Fontaine, Trevor Schramm and Zack. Strecker, all 2013; and William Goldwater, 2015.

Earning Honor's were: Matthew Swanborg 2012; Robert Hillman, Blair McGowan, and Michael O'Brien, all 2013; Zachary Coggins 2014; and Tucker Antico, Charles Blackington, Justin Fein and Conor Sheehy, all 2015. Great job to all these young men!

Democratic unity

Here is some news from the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee: Cohasset Democrats and Independents, it's that time again. All are welcome to attend the 5th annual Democratic Fundraiser where one can mix and mingle with like-minded locals and meet Democratic office holders and candidates while helping to raise funds for democratic candidates on the state and national levels and finding ways to volunteer.

The event will be held at Atlantica on Oct. 11, from 6-8:30 pm. Come and enjoy the views of Cohasset Harbor, enjoy hors d'oeuvres, drinks, a silent auction and live music by the classic rock band, Blind Ambition. There wil be plenty of spirited conversation and some rousing speeches so invite a friend or come on your own. For more information, contact Kevin McCarthy at Kevin@cihassetdemocrats.org or Sally Sisson at salsisson@comcast.net

RE workshop

On Monday, Oct. 1, at 5:30 pm, the Cohasset Elder Affairs will be presenting a one-hour Real Estate workshop for those considering the sale of a home. Janice L. Crowley, owner and Melissa J. Browne, realtor, CPM, of Coastal Countryside Properties will be discussing various aspects related to home selling, home purchase and downsizing. Making the decision to move us never without complication and Janice and Melissa will help alleviate the burden for you. Reservations are required and you may call 781-383-9112 to reserve your space.

Walkie-talkies

Also, being announced from the Cohasset Elder Affairs is the formation of a weekly senior walking group. Led by Beth Ahearn, a retired physical education teacher and coach for Weymouth, Cohasset, Hull and Plymouth, walks will start at 1 mile and may increase in length, depending on interest. Please note that the meeting date has changed! Meet at the Town Hall Parking Lot on Thursday mornings at 9 am, starting on Sept 27. Sneakers, comfy walking clothes and friends all work well for a very productive walk.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

HOLLY HILL

Trail race is Oct. 14

Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset will host its fifth annual Discover the Woods 5k Trail Race and 1 mile fun run/walk on Sunday, Oct. 14. The 5k race will begin at 1 p.m. and the 1 mile fun run will start at 2 p.m. The course is rolling hills through 130 acres of woods that surround the farm's 4 acres of organically grown vegetables, flowers and herbs, past open meadows, grassy field edges, a brook and a pond. This year the first 100 to register will get a reusable organic cotton produce bag. Number and bag pickup are available at the Greater Boston Running Company at the Derby Street Shoppes in Hingham on Saturday, Oct. 13 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Proceeds will benefit the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center that uses the farm as its outdoor classroom. Holly Hill Farm is at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. Online registration is available on the website, www.hollyhillfarm.org.

• The Wednesday workshop series will continue with an organic gardening workshop on Wednesday, Sept. 26. Extend the growing season well into fall by choosing a variety of leafy greens and produce to over-winter for months of healthy eating in the fall and winter. Learn how to feed the soil with compost and cover crops. Cost is $12 for members of Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $15 for non-members.

• Bring preschoolers to the farm for Baby Spinach, the pre-school program that will be offered Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in the mornings or afternoons, Sept. 25 through 27. Meet the animals, plant in the garden and explore the woods, make a craft, and read a story. There might even be some baby spinach to eat.

• Holly Hill Farm will also offer two after school programs this fall. Autumn Secrets is an opportunity for children ages 5 through 8 to discover the changing seasons around the farm's diverse habitats – fields, woodland trails and the pond, on Tuesday afternoons from 3:30 to 4:30. Goodnight Chickens, Goodnight horses, Goodnight Farm is a chance for children 7 through 12 to visit and care for the animals living in the barnyard; collect eggs, bring food, water and care as the animals are tucked in for the night on Thursday afternoons from 4 to 5. Cost is $12 per day.

Pre-register for all programs and workshops as space is limited. Proceeds will benefit the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the nonprofit education center that uses the farm as its outdoor classroom. Holly Hill Farm is at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. For directions and more information, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

AT THE REC

Yoga holds key to flexibility

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

"I really loved all the different styles of yoga and I got in the best shape of my life. Prior to that I could not even touch my toes, I was in my early 20s but had little or no flexibility."
Amy Di Lillo, instructor

If you cannot touch your toes, have never tried yoga, or feel you're too inflexible to try, the Cohasset Recreation Department might have just the solution. There are classes taught by Cohasset newcomer, Amy Di Lillo and a class taught by returning teacher, Carol Anglin. The Rec. Department schedule offers classes for everyone from the very young, to the young at heart.

A teacher for 10 years, Di Lillo, was introduced to yoga in Singapore where she and her husband once lived. It was there that she took her first class and it was "instant love" and she has practiced every day since.

"My teacher was Indian, and I have no idea how old he was...maybe 70, maybe 20...could not tell," recalls Di Lillo. "He had such a lightness as he moved his body through the poses. I knew then that I was missing something from my life and yoga was it."

After that first experience she took every class she could with teachers of all ethnicities and backgrounds.

"I really loved all the different styles of yoga and I got in the best shape of my life," she says. "Prior to that I could not even touch my toes, I was in my early 20s but had little or no flexibility."

Di Lillo has Scoliosis — an abnormal curve to the spine, which sometimes causes her pain. Through yoga, Di Lillo says she and others can nurture and care for their back, even enhancing back health, in a very gentle way.

"You do not have to come to class being able to put your foot behind your head," she laughs.

Di Lillo became certified through Yoga Fit, an American company based in California. According to her it's an "eclectic blend of many styles of Hatha yoga packaged in a very user friendly and safe way. She is a registered Yoga teacher with 200 hours and is currently working on her Yoga Alliance accredited 500-hour certification with a therapeutic yoga focus.

Yoga Instructor, Carol Anglin has also been a student of yoga for 10 years. She received her certification in March 2011. Anglin, a familiar face in the Rec. Department teaching roster, has taught yoga there for nearly a year. Her class focuses on yoga for Seniors.

"My purpose in teaching is to ensure that women and men continue to keep their bodies as flexible as possible. As we mature, we lose bone mass and yoga is recognized as an effective remedy for prevention," says Anglin. "My yoga practice concentrates on breathing, balance, mental concentration and relaxation. When I speak with my class I try to emphasis that yoga is not about perfection."

Both teachers acknowledge that some people are intimidated by yoga but shouldn't be.

"The practice is about increasing strength, flexibility and stimulating bone development," says Anglin. "I would encourage everyone to try a class (or more) and then they can decide if it is for them," says Anglin.

The Yoga for Back Class is held on Saturdays at the Recreation Center, all other classes are held in the Town Hall Auditorium. Visit cohassetrec.com for registration information and full class descriptions.

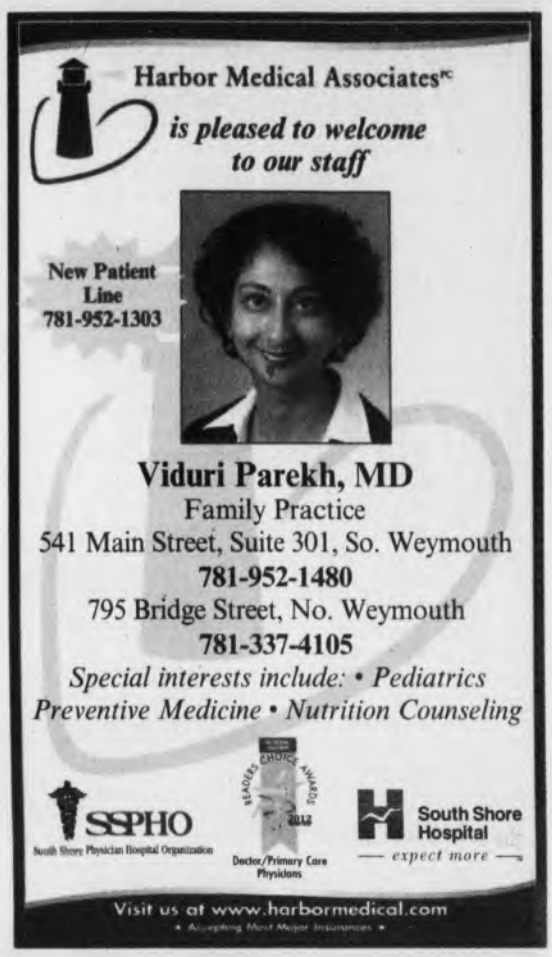
Hingham church hosts Oktoberfest Sept. 29, 30

The 27th annual Oktoberfest festivities begin on Saturday, Sept. 29, at 11 a.m. at 916 Main St., continuing until 5 p.m. On Sunday, Sept. 30 the festivities begin all over again from noon until 4 p.m. Parking and admission is free, but a donation of a non-perishable food item for local food pantries is encouraged.

King Ludwig's Bavarian Band will provide the entertainment. Authentic German food and beverages generously donated by The Smokehouse in Norwell and Boston Brewery's Oktoberfest Beer will be available throughout both days.

Under a festively decorated tent on the church lawn other events at Oktoberfest include a children's corner, a raffle, silent auction, and a bake table. In the church's foyer and fellowship hall local artisans will display and sell an eclectic array of craft items.

The Oktoberfest Committee and members and friends of House of Prayer volunteer their time and talent to insure all who attend will enjoy a wholesome and entertaining day, from youngsters to senior citizens.



Oktoberfest is House of Prayer's biggest outreach program. Over 80 percent of the profits from this year's event will be donated to Lutheran World Missions, Habitat for Humanity, the Hingham Food Pantry, Wellspring Multi-Service Center in Hull, Lutheran Social Services and The Dianne DeVanna Center in Braintree.

House of Prayer, founded in 1964, part of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America offers two worship services during the week, on Saturday at 4:30 p.m. and Sunday at 9.30 a.m. with Sunday School at 10:45 a.m. from September to June. The church is handicapped accessible and nursery service is available at the Sunday Worship Service. For further information visit www.houseofprayerhingham.org.

Members of King Ludwig's Bavarian Band pose on the Lawn of House of Prayer while enjoying the authentic German food and beverages served at Oktoberfest.

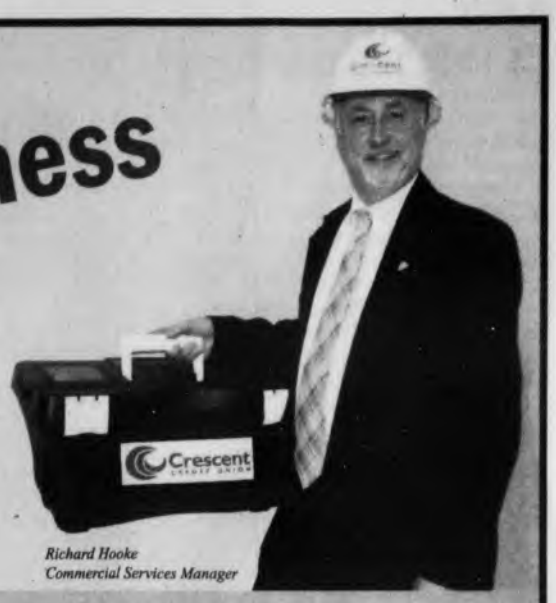
Try to get forms in soon

Cohasset Appalachia Service Project held its informational meeting on Sunday night, complete with a PowerPoint presentation. "We passed out about 100 Cohasset ASP 2013 Handbooks," according to trip administrator, Irene Vafides. The applicants were urged to return their completed four-page application forms by October 1st to receive priority consideration in their center of choice. Project coordinator, Rev. Gary Ritts, explained that the larger group of an estimated 105 volunteers (teens + adults) would be divided into three smaller groups of 35 volunteers each, referred to as "centers." Any applications received after October 1st would simply be placed in the center, which still had open slots.

Center leaders, David Clinton and Jack Dane offered a walk-through of the Handbook, complete with the Project's "guiding principles," and the 2012-2013 Schedule.

Center leaders, Phil and Jo Lehr explained how to volunteer to work the upcoming Pumpkin Patch (opening Saturday, Oct. 6 at 10 a.m. at Wheelwright Park off North Main Street). Jo also covered day-by-day details of the 9-day trip (June 28 – July 7, 2013).

Center leaders, Barbara and Janet Hoyler explained the registration process for teenagers and also for any adults who would like to join them as "advisors" on the trip.



Co-center leader (with Gary), Judy Ritts concluded with inspiring words: "This trip will change your life. You will never forget the new families and friends you meet. And you will be amazed by and so proud of the work you will accomplish. I hope you'll all go and bring friends!"

The Cohasset ASP 2013 Handbook is available in the Cohasset High School Main Office. And also by stopping by or calling 2nd Congregational Church (781-383-0345).

The current schedule and all registration forms are available on line at www.cohassetasp.org.

LIDO

to select, customers can also bring in their own cleanse menu for a customized blend.

If that isn't enough, the juice bar will soon expand the menu to include solid food. Starting in October, Lido will offer a "light food menu" of raw, vegan and macrobiotic meals, such as kale salad, miso and bean soups like lentil, "comfort food for the colder months," as Gregory put it.

All this from a shop that's been open for less than a month. Lido had a "soft opening" on Friday, Sept. 7; a grand opening was planned, but since the juice bar has already taken off in popularity, it might never actually happen.

"We've been so busy!" said Gregory, who works alongside Johnson every day. So far, the owners and business partners are the only employees.

With its proximity to health food store All the Best, Balance yoga studio, and natural/organic sandwich shop The Fresh Feast, it seems Lido Juice has struck gold in terms of location. Their prominent location on Ripley Road, across the street from the post office, allows them to catch the yoga crowd, runners, moms pushing strollers, and teens lining up for an after-school smoothie.

Stephen Johnson, co-owner of the new Lido Juice Bar in Cohasset, serves Johnny Farren juice with fresh apples in it.
PHOTOS/K.A. MACDONALD

The location was an "obvious" choice, said Johnson.

"This is exactly right," he said of the Cohasset space. He and Gregory, who started dreaming up their business plan four years ago, also considered opening up shop in Boston's Beacon Hill. But the Ripley Road storefront spoke to them.

"We didn't want to be in a corporate building," Gregory explained. "This is idyllic and charming."

Johnson said it took about five months "to get the interior right. We wanted an atmosphere we'd be happy in all day."

Customers seem happy with it, too; the store's bright, open layout certainly draws in visitors. With calming turquoise walls, rustic tables and white chairs, customers may think they wandered into a juice bar in San Diego. It turns out Johnson and Gregory were going for a "California meets South of France" aesthetic. Johnson added that this should prove especially appealing to Lido's "well-traveled" customers who are "educated on the juice movement."

"They're familiar with juice bars, just not in our town," said Johnson.

Lido is already filling that void, and copycats will likely follow. However, Johnson and Gregory "wanted to be the first to bring it to the South Shore," she said.

However, the two business owners aren't limiting their scope to just the South Shore, Boston or New England — one day, they hope to make Lido a household name, all over the world.

"The end game wasn't just to make a mom and pop store on the South Shore," Gregory explained. "We want to really grow the brand, grow the business and open up stores nationwide and internationally... Why can't we be the first international juice bar?"

For now, the juicing pair is focused on offering "healthful food that's portion-controlled, tasty and reasonably priced" for the "instant client base" they've already attracted.

"We're in the middle of this wellness movement," said Gregory. "It's fun and trendy, but it's all about being preventive and medicinal."

Lido allows both owners to share their healthy lifestyles with their clientele. Gregory has worked as a yoga instructor, while Johnson grew up eating a macrobiotic diet, which he said cured his mother's cancer.

Recycling and composting also lends to the juice bar's earth-conscious vibe; Lido works with South Shore company EOMS Recycling to dispose of waste. The juice bar owners also keep their carbon footprint low by shopping for local and organic produce whenever possible.

"It's important to support our local growers," said Gregory.

It's one way Lido helps boost the local economy; that, and by opening up shop in what has been a vacant retail space for the past six months.

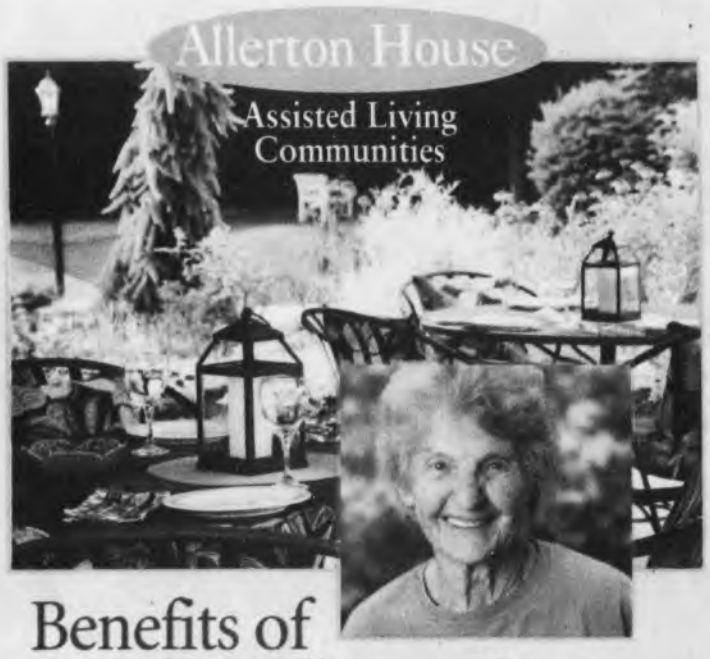
"We're very focused on revitalizing the retail space" on Ripley Road, Johnson said. "It's a fun, progressive, funky part of town."

And if health food freaks you out, the Lido owners say that's ok, too.

"There's something here for everybody," said Gregory. "You don't have to be a vegan or a juicehead; but if you indulge too much and need a detox, that's ok... You can be both things. We're all a lot of things."

Lido Juice Bar is located at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For more information, call 781-383-3030 or visit Lido online by searching "Lido Juice Bar" on Facebook.

Drinks at the Lido Juice Bar are made with fresh, natural ingredients.



Key terms: Wellness diets

Macro, raw, vegan... These might sound like trendy diet terms, but they are actually lifestyle regimens that have been practiced for centuries. The idea is that eating fresh, local foods and avoiding processed items helps the body better fight off disease, and has much greater benefits that lead to a long, healthy life. Here's a breakdown:

• Macrobiotic (macro): A dietary regimen that places an emphasis on whole grains, especially rice; seasonal vegetables; sea vegetables; nuts and seeds; beans and legumes. The diet largely avoids processed foods with added chemicals/preservatives, sugar, foods high in sodium, hot spices, coffee, alcohol, eggs, red meat and poultry

• Raw foodism, or rawism: The practice of eating uncooked, unprocessed and organic foods. This could include raw fish or non-pasteurized, non-homogenized dairy products, although many raw foodists are also vegan . Those eating a raw vegan diet do not believe in cooking food above a temperature of 40 degrees Celsius (104 degrees Fahrenheit). Like macrobiotic eaters, raw foodists place an emphasis on consuming grains, raw fruit and veggies, nuts and seeds.

• Vegan: A diet and lifestyle that calls for the avoidance of all animal products and by-products, including all meat, eggs and dairy. Many vegans also eschew honey, wool, leather, glue, and cosmetics that contain animal ingredients or have been tested on animals. Health-conscious vegans often incorporate aspects of the macro and/or raw diet into their eating habits, while there is a market for meat-free processed food, from tofu dogs and veggie burgers to vegan "chick*n," soy sausage, "Tofurky" and more. Raw vegans, however, avoid processed "faux meats."

'Women 360' exhibit at Art Center

South Shore Art Center has mounted an exhibition of work by 10 New England artists in an exhibition entitled "Women 360." "Women 360" will continue through Nov. 4.

Artists in the exhibition include Myrna Balk, Lora Brody, Karen Davis, Carol Daynard, Ellen Feldman, Randy Goldberger, Felice Mendell, Michael Seif, Kim Roderiques, and Andrea Rosenthal. As curator Andrea Rosenthal mentions in her concept statement, "This exhibit presents a narrative about women's bodies that shows them in varying situations but always with strength and a kind of grace."

The Dillon Gallery will showcase the work of Gallery Artists: Karen Cass, Barbara Hillier, Dianne E. Miller, Diana Barker Price, and Eileen Rotty in a show titled "Inner Nature." The faculty feature is Sarah Roche, an instructor in botanical drawing and painting at the Art Center.

South Shore Art Center is located at 119 Ripley Road. Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m.

Historical Society lecture series

The Cohasset Historical Society has begun its Wednesday Evening Lecture Series. The Oct. 17, program will feature Henry Cooke as "George Washington's Tailor", and on Nov. 14, Genevra and Charles Higginson will share "The Joys of Collecting Books." This program will be on the second Tuesday due to the proximity of the Thanksgiving holiday.

In December, the Historical Society invites the community to celebrate the Christmas Holiday season with its annual Wassail Party on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 9 from 2 to 4 p.m. All of these Historical Society programs are open to the public and although donations are gratefully accepted, no fee is charged. Light refreshments are planned for each event. Each of the Lectures will be held in the Pratt Building at 106 South Main St., and will begin at 7:30 p.m. We look forward to welcoming you all to these special evenings.

Health insurance discounts talk

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will hold an educational discussion on health insurance discount for chamber members.

Discussion topics include:

- Benefits of moving to the Chamber plan
- Plan options available
- Cost savings example
- Requirements of the plan

The presentation takes place at the Cohasset public library at 35 Ripley Road on Wednesday, September 26 from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. Check-in is from 8 to 8:30 a.m.

Those interested in attending are asked to RSVP to Matthew Cunningham by Sept. 20. Contact matthew-cunningham@thebulfinchgroup.com or call 781-681-1510.

Farmers Market more than food

Cohasset Farmers Market is known for its fresh produce, home-made baked goods and other food treats, but there are also more than 15 artisans selling handmade items such as jewelry, baby items, clothing, art, plants, soaps and more as well. Why not do some early Christmas shopping at the Market this year? How about a hand-crocheted shawl, a baby outfit, pressed flowers in a wooden frame or an unusual plant? And don't forget to bring little ones down for a pony ride. Music by local musicians will be featured as well.

The Market is open from 2 to 6 p.m., on Thursdays, through Oct. 18, on Cohasset Common.

OUR VIEW

Civil discourse

There has probably been enough time and ink spent on the subject of civil discourse in Cohasset. The Board of Selectmen adopted a Code of Civil Discourse earlier in the year but have little or no power of enforcement. Unlike private companies that can discipline or fire people who do not follow certain ethical standards – Selectmen are left with the "bully pulpit" in an effort to enforce polite conversation and mutual respect.

While it does not make it right – our society has become more crass. Whether commenting anonymously on the web or railing at the driver in front of you on the road – many of us have become headstrong, impatient and rude to anyone who questions us or gets in our way.

In Cohasset, when tempers flare – it makes big news outside the confines of Cohasset and its hometown paper, the Mariner.

Selectmen certainly have the power to keep discourse civil in their meetings. They should not squash healthy debate but should wield the gavel when the back-and-forth heads down the road of personal attacks. Mature people should be able to air their views without becoming hotheaded or rude but sadly, that is often not the case.

No one serving in public office in Cohasset whether elected or appointed, those who have served in the past, or regular citizens should be the subjects of personal attacks whether delivered through emails or anonymously via a blog post

In the case of the back-and-forth between former selectman Karen Quigley and Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio, one thing is for sure: they both care deeply about Cohasset. However, there is little hope they will ever see eye-to-eye on the issues.

At times we yearn for the days before email, when one penned letters and "slept on it" before trekking to the Post Office. The reply button on computer email is way too fast and much too easy. Unfortunately, no Code of Civil Discourse can change that.

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Why, why, why all the micromanaging?

After reading the Cohasset Mariner Sept. 14, 2012 headline "Embarrassing e-mail gets statewide attention," my suggestion would be to the Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski to provide a copy of the Cohasset Manager Act to any interested parties and have them actually read it so they can get their factual acts together in order to move on to more important issues of the town.

I'd also like to comment on how our ex Town Manger Michael Coughlin can express his opinion about upholding the town's code of conduct civil discourse policy when his professionalism has been called into question resulting in his removal from the position of Town Manager.

So every who has a problem or questions, the town officials' decisions get yourself a copy of the Cohasset Manager Act, it could save you some embarrassment.

Transmitters for school buses

In my walks about town since school started, I have noticed the clusters of parents awaiting the school bus, at times for some time it would seem. In London, public bus stops have electric signs that show the number of the bus route and the time of arrival of the next bus. I would think that a similar system would be helpful in Cohasset.

If every school bus had a transmitter of some sort, I would think that the technology exists that parents could have a smart phone app that would show when their child would arrive and would not need not to out in the rain if the bus was running behind schedule.

Am sure some IT savvy high schooler could implement such a system at minimum cost!

Following prescribed permitting course

CHRIS FORD

Your recent article on the ConCom re-opening the hearing relative to 559 Jerusalem Road reported that Tanna Kasperowicz asked the question "How does re-opening of the hearing hurt the ConCom if the Ford's do not withdraw their lawsuit?" What wasn't reported was the response of Peter DeCaprio, an abutter to the property, who muttered loud enough for those around him to hear (including me 7 seats away) "it is like negotiating with terrorists!"

It is a bit un-nerving to have yourself likened to a terrorist during a public meeting. My brother Ted Ford and his wife have owned the property in question for over 18 years (and lived in the abutting property for over 40 years) and are now going through the process of seeking a building permit for the lot in question...a lot which once held a separate residence as well as a major portion of the famed Black Rock Hotel and now has the remains of a 17 car parking lot covering much of the lot. Because Ted is currently living in California, I volunteered to help him with the permit process.

Terrorists we are not. We are just citizens following the prescribed course for seeking a town-issued permit.

Having once served on the Town Planning Board and the School Committee, I know something about permitting and town government. I know that permitting efforts can sometimes spawn disagreements between neighbors. Mr. DeCaprio has repeatedly referred to us publicly as liars and now has stooped to likening us to "terrorists." Civil discourse just doesn't seem to be part of his nature.

Terrorists we are not. We are just citizens following the prescribed course for seeking a town issued permit. When a permit application is denied the prescribed recourse is to file an appeal with the Department of Environmental Protection and the Superior Court. The DEP has begun to review our case but has encouraged us to try to resolve our differences locally. That is what we are trying to do at this point. All legal actions on our part have been put on hold pending the outcome.

We look forward to working with the Commission to fully examine any outstanding concerns that they may have. Like the Town, we are not eager to spend unnecessary funds in a legal action if we can resolve this matter by working together, in a civil manner, towards a

Stakeholder participation needed in strategic plan

ADRIENNE MACCARTHY

At a recent School Committee meeting, I heard all about the opening days of schools and had the pleasure of hearing from the new administrative team charged with ensuring a "commitment to excellence."

My reason for attending this meeting was twofold. To clarify the fact that a development and passage of a 2012-2017 Strategic Plan had taken place and to clarify the process under which this could have taken place without public participation.

Over the past school year, I along with many others, waited to hear the School Committee direct Superintendent Cataldo to begin initiating and developing a process for the strategic planning process; this did not happen, as reflected by the minutes and agendas of past meetings. For those who may not know, a strategic plan identifies the goals and objectives of all the stakeholders of the public schools and gives a clear road map to our Administration and School Committee for the next five years. Parent and stakeholder participation and collaboration is a key.

The long and short of it is: Yes the School Committee had a presentation of a Strategic Plan from Superintendent on June 22, however, it was not posted as a presentation on the agenda so know one would have reasonably known this discussion was going to take place and yes, the plan was approved with little to no public comment. This should be a huge red flag to all. This plan was developed without input from a broad and varied stakeholder pool. Know where in any agenda or minutes of the past school year is it discussed that our district was undergoing a strategic planning process. So whose plan is it? Who was at the table? These questions remain unanswered.

We have a new administrative team. They need a school committee that puts in as much time and discussion around the academic direction of our schools as it does surrounding the potential of solar powering our schools. It is time for all stakeholders to participate and communicate on the issues concerning our schools, i.e. block scheduling, differentiated instruction and funding. These are your schools.

You need to be at the table. With at Special Education budget exploding and unanticipated increases in class sizes at the elementary level, don't wait for the invite!

Cohasset Public Schools was recently ranked #10 among national public schools. This ranking is based on the Strategic Plan of 2004-2009 and years of changes in professional development, assessments, holding higher expectations of all students, earlier interventions, etc. Past School Committees worked openly with the Superintendent to set and articulate clear goals and objectives and invited stakeholders to the table, robust discussions took place; meetings were long; consensus was met; staff and teachers rose to the occasion; and at the end of the day, we have seen the results of their labor.

I ask you to please tune in and participate to ensure a continued "commitment to excellence."

Adrienne MacCarthy, 85 Doane St.

Civil discourse urged but cannot be enforced

PAUL CARLSON

We all owe the volunteers and the employees a round of thanks for the great work they do. I do not believe that they should be subject to continual attacks.

Below are the comments I made at the September 18 Board of Selectmen meeting.

After an exchange of emails between Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio and town resident Karen Quigley, she asked the Board of Selectmen to respond to the alleged lack of civility on the part of Mr. DeCaprio.

Back in the winter, the Board of Selectmen passed its Code of Core Values for Civil Discourse in response to numerous rancorous and corrosive emails and blog posts. In the Code's preamble, we stated that: "The Town's government values hard work, honesty, integrity and an earnest desire to work collaboratively to best serve our residents."

This Board has no enforcement power regarding this Code. The First Amendment to the US Constitution forbids us to exercise any censorship, prior to or after the fact. We are all free to speak our minds without fear of government action. Furthermore, under the libel laws, public officials have little protection from scurrilous, false and inflammatory accusations. People can be as nasty and abusive to me as they want. I have no legal recourse. That is the law of the land. The courts have spoken and I, for one, fully support these rulings. Better that people speak ill of me than for government to have the power to crush dissent and unpopular views.

Nevertheless, I am free like everybody else to disagree strongly and vehemently with public statements or to ignore them.

Our town has numerous dedicated volunteers who give us all countless amounts of effort, wisdom and their precious free time.

Cohasset also has many hard-working town employees that make our government function at a high level every day.

We all owe the volunteers and the employees a round of thanks for the great work they do. I do not believe that they should be subject to continual attacks.

At the end of my prepared remarks, I invited Ms. Quigley and Mr. DeCaprio to discuss their concerns with the board so that we could begin a dialogue and reduce the rancor. Ms. Quigley chose not to participate, but Mr. DeCaprio did present his thoughts and experiences to us. In addition, the other board members shared their observations and some unpleasant experiences. Fortunately, such incidents, while unsettling, are rare and generally participants in town governance do treat each other with respect. At the end of the discussion, the board asked the participants to be careful with their rhetoric and to continue to discuss town business civilly. We all hope this discussion will have an impact.

Paul Carlson, Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, lives at 18 Old Coach Road. The views presented are his and do not represent the position of the board or its individual members.

Community Garden Club meets Tuesday

September means the start of a new season for the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. We welcome incoming President, Linda Fraker, whose focus for the next two years will be involving the entire Cohasset community in events that will stimulate an interest in learning more about all that our natural environment has to offer.

The Club was originally founded in 1959 with Polly Logan as President. That was in the days when members wore hats and white gloves to meetings and the Club offered babysitting services at a cost of 50 cents, to include a cookie and juice. How times have changed.

Our first meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 25, at 9 a.m. at the Second Congregational Church is open to the public. Featured lecturer will be Betty Sanders, a Lifetime Master Gardener, National Flower Show Judge and member of the Landscape Design Council. Betty will show us how to create exciting and successful fall container gardens from the bottom up. You might be the lucky recipient of one of Betty's gorgeous container arrangements which will be raffled off at the end of the presentation!

FOR THE RECORD

Stage is set for big election

GREGORY MATHIS

Galvin suggested as many as three million Bay State voters will cast ballots in the election. If that happens, it will be the second time ever eclipsing the three million mark.

The primary election barely registered a blip on the interest meter in most communities a couple of weeks ago, but that will likely change come November.

Secretary of State William Galvin predicted last week that more than 70 percent of registered voters would make their way to the polls on Nov. 6 to vote in the presidential election. In fact Galvin suggested as many as three million Bay State voters will cast ballots in the election. If that happens, it will be the second time ever eclipsing the three million mark.

Presidential elections understandably draw a lot of interest. This election will be no different as there's a lot at stake. But as supporters of Romney or Obama or Jill Stein plan to voice their choice, there are several things to consider before taking a ballot Nov. 6.

1. Register to vote. Simple enough, right? In order to vote Nov. 6 you have to be registered to do so. The deadline for registering for the November General Election is Oct. 17. People around the world fight – and die – for the right to vote. Enough said.

2. Know the local candidates. The primary was really about setting the table for the local races as the big contests (president, U.S. Senate) were already established. If the low turnout and lack of interest from the primary is any indication, there's some catching up to do here between the end of September and the beginning of November.

3. Study the ballot questions. Voters will be asked to weigh in on three statewide ballot questions.

Question 1 on the ballot would "prohibit any motor vehicle manufacturer, starting with model year 2015, from selling or leasing, either directly or through a dealer, a new motor vehicle without allowing the owner to have access to the same diagnostic and repair information made available to the manufacturer's dealers and in-state authorized repair facilities."

Question 2 "would allow a physician licensed in Massachusetts to prescribe medication, at a terminally ill patient's request, to end that patient's life."

Question 3 "would eliminate state criminal and civil penalties for the medical use of marijuana by qualifying patients."

For more on these questions, visit the Secretary of State's website.

4. Don't be fooled by the hyperbole. Each major political party's national convention may be over, but "hype" is still very much a part of the campaigns. As educated voters, we need to see our way through catch phrases and sound bytes to reveal the truths that are important to each individual. Sometimes easier said than done, but important nonetheless.

5. Vote on Election Day. None of this really matters if you don't take the time to vote Nov. 6. Sure it's a Tuesday, and Tuesdays can be weird. The weather might be bad; you might have an early-morning meeting or have to work late. Regardless of the obstacles or challenges, make sure you're registered to vote, know the candidates who will be directly representing your town, learn the pros and cons of the ballot questions, and cast your vote Nov. 6 for the candidates who best represent your interests.

After all, there's a lot at stake.

OCT. 15 DEADLINE

Cultural Council seeks funding proposals

Cohasset Cultural Council has set an Oct. 15 postmark deadline for organizations, schools and individuals to apply for grants that support cultural activities in the community.

According to council spokesperson Sarah Wood Torrey, these grants can support a variety of artistic projects and activities in Cohasset – including exhibits, festivals, field trips, short-term artist residencies or performances in schools, workshops and lectures.

Cohasset Cultural Council is part of a network of 329 Local Cultural Councils serving all 351 cities and towns in the Commonwealth. The LCC Program is the largest grassroots cultural funding network in the nation, supporting thousands of community-based projects in the arts, sciences and humanities every year. The state Legislature provides an annual appropriation to the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency, which then allocates funds to each community.

This year, Cohasset Cultural Council will distribute about $3,870 in grants. Previously funded projects included South Shore Art Center's annual Festival on the Common, Cohasset Recreation Department's summer concert series and Cohasset Dramatic Club's musical theater productions.

For specific guidelines and complete information on the Cohasset Cultural Council, call Sarah Wood Torrey at 781-383-3493 or email CohassetCulture@gmail.com.

Application forms and more information about the Local Cultural Council Program are available online at www.massculture.org/Cohasset. Application forms are also available at the Cohasset Town Hall and Paul Pratt Memorial Library. People can also follow Cohasset Cultural Council on Facebook at www.facebook.com/CohassetCulturalCouncil or on Twitter at @CohassetCulture.

Cohasset shop owner scales mountain

By Erin Dale

Tracy Cameron poses on the summit of the Grand Teton.

What did you do on your summer vacation?

This August, a Cohasset business owner tackled a long-held goal — to climb one of the tallest mountain summits in the U.S.

Tracy Cameron, owner of Cohasset village's sporting goods store Outside In, took a step outside of her comfort zone. Cameron, an avid runner, hiker and climber, normally hits the local trails; but this summer, she was looking for a challenge and a bit of adventure when she decided to take on the Grand Teton.

Scaling a mountain that rises nearly 14,000 feet above sea level is no easy feat. But given her already outdoorsy lifestyle that includes a few years spent living in Jackson Hole, Wyoming with her father, an authentic cowboy, Cameron was ready to rise to the occasion.

"I always wanted to climb the Grand," said Cameron. "I thought it was a good time before the fear factor took over."

Cameron's climb took two days – August 7 and 8 – before which she spent two days in training classes with Exum Mountain Guides, a climbing instruction program through the Grand Teton National Park. Even for experienced outdoorsmen and women like Cameron, training is par for the course.

"Everybody who wants to climb the Grand has to take climbing classes," Cameron explained. "They test your skill level and see if you're in shape."

Classes also offer a chance to bond with fellow climbers before the adventure starts — for social and safety reasons.

"It's very important to get to know the people you're climbing with," Cameron said. "They have your life in their hands."

Cameron, who scheduled her climb around a business trip to Utah for a trade show, had another mission in mind when she set out to take on the Teton; to scatter the ashes of her beloved mutt, Berkeley, who passed away at age 15 in January. Berkeley used to accompany Cameron on her hikes and runs, during which the shop owner sought out "dog-friendly" locations. Because of this, she had never attempted a major climb like this one before.

"As scary as it is, it's very mentally relaxing. You don't think about anything but what you're doing in the moment."
Tracy Cameron, Outside In

The outdoor fitness enthusiast and Scituate resident upped her training ante in order to get ready for the big climb. This mainly consisted of running up and down the hills on Norfolk Street wearing her backpack. Cameron, who has twice competed in the Cohasset Triathlon, was already in fighting shape before taking on the Grand Teton.

When it came time for the climb itself, Cameron and the other climbers were split into groups based on skill level; she was placed in small group with a 20-year-old man and a guide.

Day one of the trek involved a lot of hiking to reach the lower-saddle, which at 11,000 feet above sea level is hardly what one could call "low."

"It was a great view," said Cameron.

The group camped out overnight and "hit a drastic temperature drop" at that height, but still enjoyed mild weather, although Cameron knows from experience that the weather in Jackson Hole is hardly predictable. This is why packing layers is key, she said.

"It can be a nice day, then the clouds roll in and it's snowing," Cameron said of mountain range weather.

She was more prepared for these changes than some of the other folks on the trip. As the guides went through individuals' backpacks, Cameron was told she had over-packed; it turned out to be a good thing for those who hadn't brought enough.

"They didn't have any layers or insulation," she recalled. "I lent out jackets, sweaters and socks, so everything I packed was used."

Everything was from Cameron's store, as well, which served as a "good way to test the products," she said.

Day two of the climb started with a 3:30 a.m. wake-up call. Cameron and her group left the camp around 4:20 and were halfway to the Grand's summit by 5:30.

"We started climbing in the moonlight, which was pretty cool."

Cameron watched the sun rise around 5:30, snapped a photo on her phone to share with her family and friends, and texted her husband and mother. By 7:40, she had reached the summit.

"I got up there, said 'hello' to the world and spread my dog's ashes," said Cameron. Then she began her descent. "I was in Doornan's in Moose, Wyoming with a pint of beer by 2 p.m."

Talk about a whirlwind. But as physically demanding as the climb was, Cameron said it was still a relaxing vacation.

"As scary as it is, it's very mentally relaxing. You don't think about anything but what you're doing in the moment."

Standing on the mountaintop also gave Cameron some time to reflect.

"It's refreshing because of its beauty," she said of the mountain. "I came back reminded of what's important. You get so caught up in day-to-day life, you forget how simple you can keep it [by] looking at what's in front of you instead of what's behind you. It's a nice mental break when you have kids, a business and a family."

Cameron lives in Scituate with her husband, Jason, a Cohasset native, and their two boys Henry, 6, and Emmett, 4. The boys just might join her on her next westward journey, Cameron said.

"I'm looking forward to taking them out to Jackson next summer."

As for another climb?

Said Cameron, "I would definitely do it again."

It's one way for the shop owner to embrace her western roots. But don't count on her abandoning her sporting goods store to follow in her cowboy father's footsteps any time soon. Unlike her dad, "I didn't go the cowboy route," Cameron said with a laugh. "I went the ski bum route."

Volume 38 - Report No. 37 September 14, 2012

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 313C

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Beacon Hill Roll Call has obtained the official list from the state treasurer's office of the "per diem" travel, meals and lodging reimbursements collected by state representatives in 2012. The list reveals that representatives have so far collected a total of $160,572. Beacon Hill Roll Call reported a few weeks ago that state senators in 2012 have collected $33,863 in per diems. The combined 2012 total collected by representatives and senators at this point is $ 194,435.

Under state law, per diems are paid by the state to representatives "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse." These reimbursements are given to representatives above and beyond their regular salaries.

The amount of the per diem is based on the city or town in which a representative resides and its distance from the Statehouse. The Legislature in 2000 approved a law doubling per diems to the current amounts. The payments range from $10 per day for representatives who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 per day for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 per day for those in Nantucket. Representatives who are from areas that are a long distance from the Statehouse often collect the highest total of annual per diems.

Supporters of the per diems argue that the system is fair and note the rising costs of gas, food and lodging.

Some opponents say most other private sector and state workers are not paid for commuting. Others argue that the very idea of paying any legislator a per diem is outrageous when thousands of workers are losing their jobs and their homes, and funding for important assistance programs has been cut.

The 2012 statistics indicate that 75 representatives have received reimbursements ranging from $270 to $6,660 while 84 representatives did not list any days and did not request any per diems. This should not be construed to mean that the latter were never at the Statehouse in 2012. It simply means they so far have chosen not to apply for them. State law does not establish an application deadline.

The representative who received the most money in 2012 is Rep. William "Smitty" Pignatelli (D-Lenox) with $6,660.

Representatives rounding out the top ten are Reps. Michael Finn (D-West Springfield), $5,544; Patricia Farley-Bouvier (D-Pittsfield), $5,220; Sarah Peake (D-Provincetown), $5,106; Ellen Story (D-Amherst), $4,620; Timothy Madden (D-Nantucket), $4,300; John Scibak (D-South Hadley), $4,260; Nicholas Boldyga (R-Southwick) and former Rep. Michael Kane (D-Holyoke), tied with $4,224; and Demetrius Atsalis (D-Barnstable), $3,850.

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES' PER DIEMS FOR 2012

The dollar figure next to the representative's name represents the total amount of per diem money the state has paid him or her in 2012. The number in parentheses represents the number of days the representative certified he or she was at the Statehouse during that same period.

IN-STATE TUITION RATES FOR ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS (H 2109) - The Education Committee has recommended that a study committee be the fate of a bill allowing illegal immigrants to pay the reduced in-state tuition rates and fees at Massachusetts colleges and universities if they have attended a high school in Massachusetts for at least three years and have graduated or received the equivalent of a diploma. The measure also requires these students to provide the college with an affidavit stating that he or she has filed or will in the future file an application to become a citizen or permanent resident.

Supporters say many of these students were babies when they were brought here by their parents and had no choice about entering the country illegally. They note these hardworking students are currently required to pay out-of-state tuition rates that are up to five times higher than the in-state rate. Some argue many are unable to afford the higher tuition and end up skipping college and working in low-pay, low-skill jobs rather than contributing to the economy in a more meaningful fashion.

Opponents say the state should not offer financial rewards to anyone who has broken the law and is in this country illegally. They note it is also important to point out that these students would not even be able to legally obtain a job in Massachusetts following their graduation from college. Some say it is outrageous to offer low tuition rates to these students while legal citizens from outside Massachusetts, including war veterans, are required to pay higher rates if they attend a Massachusetts state school.

Most measures shipped off to a study committee are never actually studied and are essentially defeated.

MORE COLLEGE TUITION - The Higher Education Committee has also recommended that legislation prohibiting colleges from imposing a surcharge on a student who pays for his or her tuition by credit card rather than by check or cash be shipped off to a study committee. Another measure on its way to a study committee would waive the fee and allow all the state's public school teachers to attend any state university at no cost (H 353).

EKGS, FEES, CPR, FOSTER KIDS - The Education Committee has recommended that several bills be sent to a study committee, including legislation that would require every public school student who participates in an interscholastic athletic program to undergo an electrocardiogram (EKG) test (S 206). Other bills would require all cities and towns to develop a plan for exempting foster children in state custody from the payment of fees for school-sponsored after-school activities (H 1094); create an 11-member special commission to study and report on how to maximize the use of digital textbooks for public schools and universities (S 224); impose a moratorium on all new mandated education programs and expenses until July 1, 2015 (H 3637); and require all public high school students to learn CPR and the use of automatic external defibrillators as a prerequisite for graduation (H 1920). The state would pay the cost of the instruction.

TRANSPORTING AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS (S 2118) - The House gave initial approval to a Senate-approved bill that would allow vehicles with farm plates to carry goods with a total weight up to the vehicle's rated capacity. Current law restricts the weight to 60,000 pounds, including the truck, even if the vehicle is rated to carry more. Supporters said the current restriction makes no sense and results in more use of fossil fuels and damage to the environment.

Official statement on contract negotiations

To: Members of Cohasset school community, citizens and public officials
From: Chairperson Jeanne Astino, on behalf of the Cohasset School committee
Date: September 19, 2012

Some of you may have learned by now that contract negotiations between the Cohasset School Committee and the Cohasset Teachers' Association have not yet resulted in a signed agreement. You may also have noticed concerted activity on the part of teachers in support of their collective bargaining representatives at the negotiating table. We are releasing this statement to outline our thoughts on the current circumstances, particularly as the union's activities may become more public, perhaps prompting questions and concerns from students, parents and community members.

We have had a number of formal negotiating sessions since January 2012. The Committee's negotiating team has reached tentative agreement with the Teachers' Union on many of the issues raised at the bargaining table. However, we have not yet been able to finalize a complete agreement. We plan to utilize the procedures available under state law in seeking the appointment of a mediator to assist us in bringing these lengthy negotiations to a close.

In the meantime, please note that the terms of the teacher contract that expired on Aug. 31, 2012 will remain in effect, thus ensuring continuity of operations for our schools. Many Cohasset teachers will still realize increases in their salaries, even without a signed contract, due to movement from one "Step" to the next on the 16-step salary schedule. This is true even before any percentage increases to base salaries are applied.

Teachers on the top, or 16th step, do not receive an increase by virtue of step movement, since they have already reached the maximum step. The Committee has attempted to reach agreement with the Union that would translate into fair, yet fiscally responsible, terms that would allow for an increase in the base salaries for senior staff members as well as those still advancing on the steps of the salary schedule.

We cannot make a promise to pay salaries that we ultimately will not be able to afford. Otherwise, we might face painful and deep staff cuts that could weaken, not maintain, the quality of education in Cohasset.

Despite the difficult negotiations, our teachers have continued to work hard on behalf of students, and are a highly valued resource. They deserve our full support. However, in an era of fiscal challenges, valuing teacher contributions does not justify ignoring economic reality. We are advised that, over the next few years, the town as a whole will face many economic challenges, including a still-weakened economy, slow growth of tax revenue, increases in utility costs, and the funding of a substantial reserve account in the coming years for post-employment benefit funding, as a result of 2012 Annual Town Meeting action taken pursuant to state health insurance laws. Therefore, we do not expect any significant increases in the size of our school budget. We must offer contract terms that reflect these economic circumstances. We cannot make a promise to pay salaries that we ultimately will not be able to afford. Otherwise, we might face painful and deep staff cuts that could weaken, not maintain, the quality of education in Cohasset.

In light of this information, we believe our proposals strike a fair balance among competing factors.

As the teachers have indicated in their welcome letter to parents, health insurance coverage for all town employees underwent a change last year. The Town elected to adopt a change in the design of health insurance plans. Although co-payments for such things as prescription medication and doctor visits increased, the cost of insurance premiums decreased. As teachers have informed you, this change resulted in a savings to the Town. In addition, employees saw their premium contribution costs decrease. Cohasset school employees were also able to offset co-payment increases by accessing a mitigation fund that the School Committee established.

We are proud of the fact that Cohasset performs comparably with high performing districts, and the fact that we have been able to attract and maintain teachers of the highest quality. When reviewing the compensation packages of high-performing districts that the teachers have identified in their welcome letter to parents, one must be mindful not only of salary figures, but other factors including the amount of instructional time within the workday, contributions toward health insurance premiums, and the town's ability to pay salary increases. Salary is one factor, but it is not the sole factor that we consider when looking at the overall equity of a contract. Taking into account all relevant factors, we believe that we have proposed a contract that is equitable and recognizes, in a fiscally responsible fashion, the hard work of teachers in providing services to our students.

We believe that teachers will continue to deliver quality services on behalf of the school district, and that Cohasset students will continue to be taken care of, despite the differences that have arisen at the bargaining table and the outward displays of support that union members may exhibit on behalf of their negotiating team in the coming days. We are confident that our staff will continue to act professionally, even though we are currently in disagreement as to how to bring contract negotiations to a fair and reasonable conclusion.

Mariner election policy detailed

Between now and the Nov. 6 general election – on a space available basis — the Cohasset Mariner will publish a weekly Candidates' Corner and Politics column based on submissions from the candidates themselves or their campaign staff.

Candidates' Corner is available for announcements such as dates for coffees and meet-and-greets, as well as fundraisers. Announcements for Candidates' Corner will be limited to no more than 150 words per week from candidates. Submissions are subject to editing and will run on a space available basis. There is no guarantee of when and where the Candidates' Corner column runs.

Politics allows candidates to submit position statements on issues of relevance in the race. Statements should focus on the candidate's position and not addressing the opponent's position. Word limit for the Politics column is 250. Submissions are subject to editing and will run on a space available basis. There is no guarantee of when and where the Politics column runs. Submissions for the Politics column will not be accepted the week before the election.

Candidates may send submissions via email to editor, Mary Ford at: mford@wickedlocal.com; or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham. Deadline for submissions is noon Wednesday for that week's publication.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election. Letters are subject to editing and may be refused for publication at the editor's discretion.

For questions about campaign advertising, call Claudia Oliver at 781-837-4519.

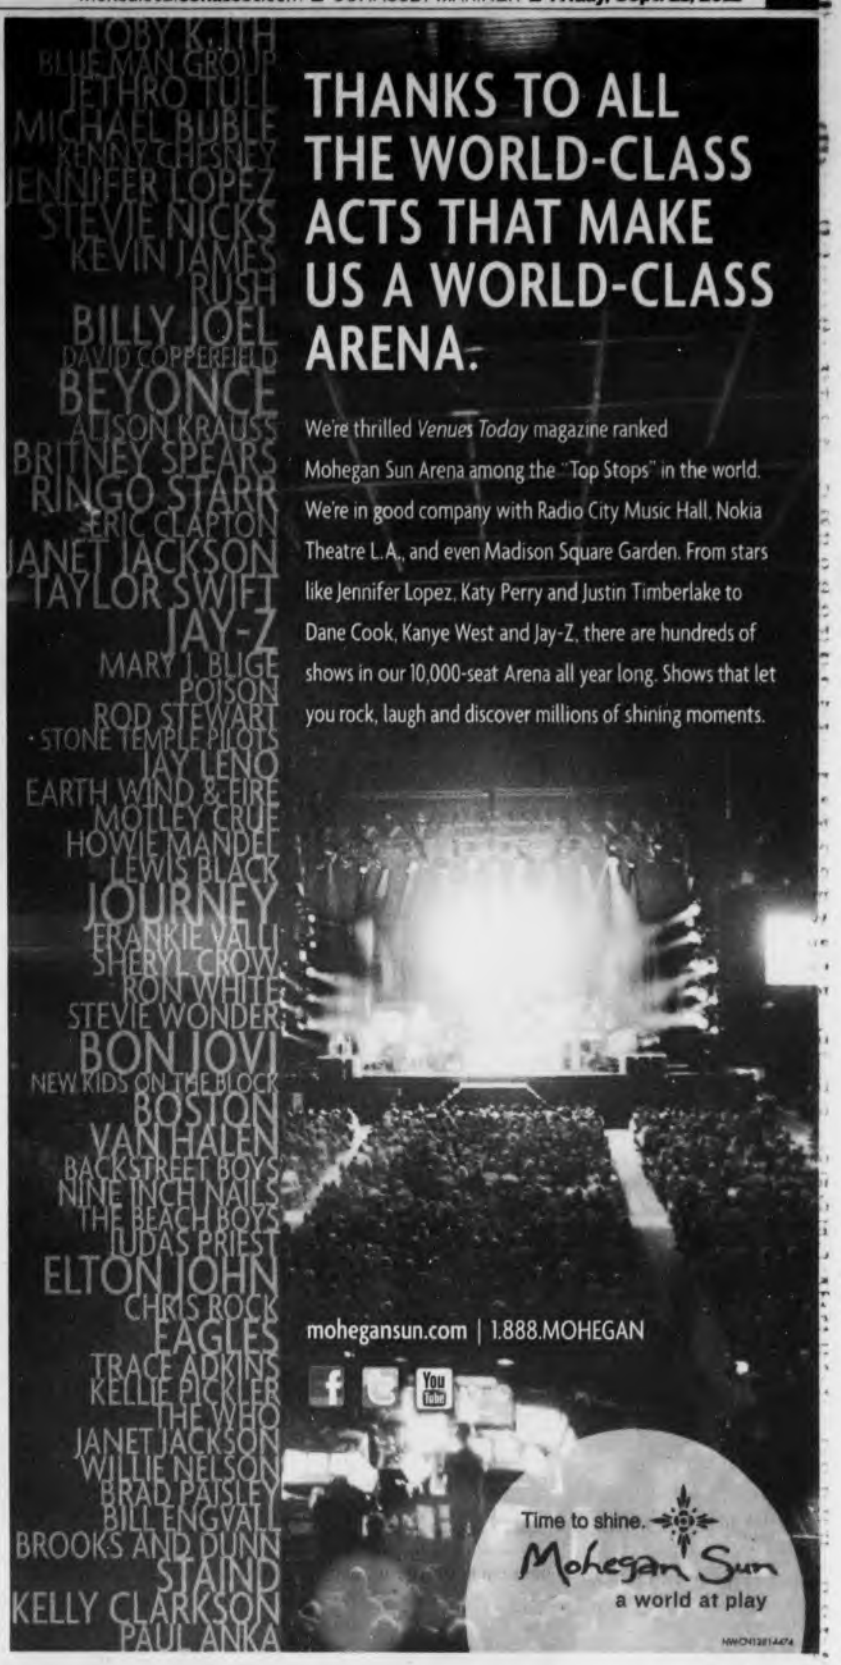
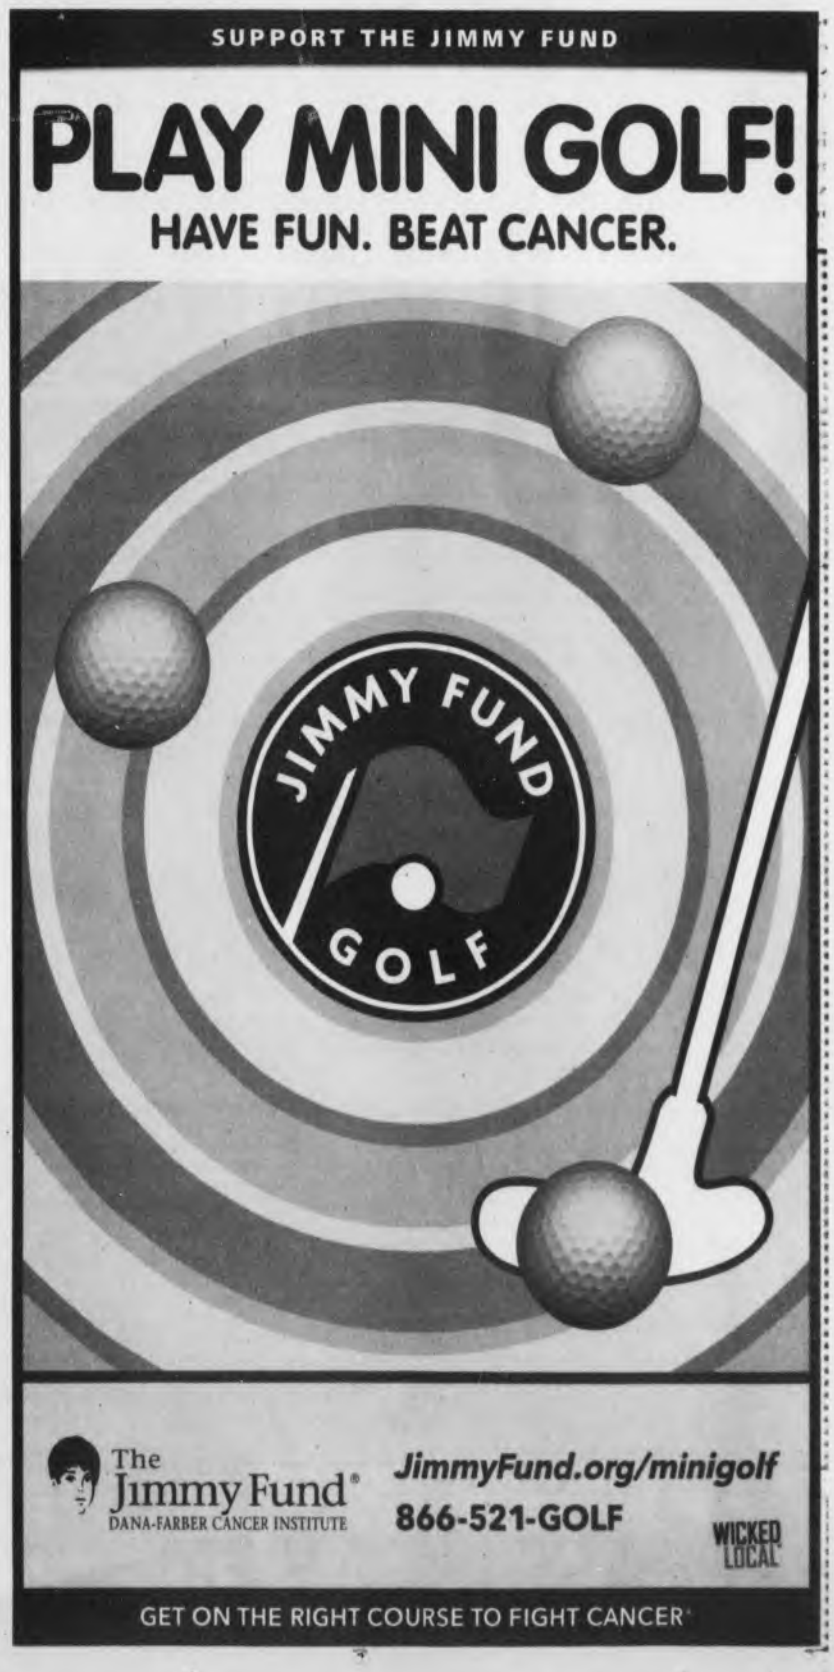
Open Meeting Law regulations finalized



New Open Meeting Law regulations, laid out by Attorney General Martha Coakley, state that "deliberate ignorance" is akin to deliberately setting out to violate the law.



The state's top law enforcement officer finalized two Open Meeting Law regulations on Tuesday seeking to add greater clarity to the rules that govern how municipal boards and commissions can hold meetings.

Coakley's finalized regulations clarify that an "intentional violation" of the law comprises acts intended to violate the law, carried out with "deliberate ignorance," or done after being informed by a court or the attorney general that the action violates the Open Meeting Law.

Coakley also updated the regulations for how members of public bodies can participate in meetings remotely, making clear that local boards of selectmen can set consistent restrictions for remote participation in public meetings.

INSIDE THE 6 - SOCCER POWER RANKINGS

Week 2: A shakeup in the standings

Cohasset's Alex Kent controls the ball during a recent game against Carver at Cohasset High School. Cohasset won the game 2-0 and moved into our Inside the 6 rankings PHOTO/K.A. MACDONALD

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

Two weeks into the 2012 high school season, and we already have clear-cut front-runners on both the boys' and girls' sides. Will that momentum continue throughout the season? That's to be determined, but the strong teams clearly continue to rise. There was a lot of movement Inside the 6 this week, with three new entries combined, a new No. 1 in the girls' rankings, and some repositioning. The rankings reflect games played through Sunday, Sept. 16:

Boys

1. Weymouth – If anyone doubted the Wildcats, and there's hardly a reason they should've (I certainly didn't), doubt them no more. After two big wins in week one, the Wildcats notched a pair of quality shutouts in game-week two, including a 2-0 victory over Wellesley, ranked No. 10 in the state. They opened the week with a convincing 3-0 win over Newton North.

2. Hingham – Tally two more wins for the Harbormen, taking them to 3-0 to start the season. They scored victories over Silver Lake, a 2-1 triumph, and Middleboro, a 5-0 thrashing. They are certainly knocking on Weymouth's door, but need to remain consistent and knock off another top team to claim the No. 1 spot.

3. Duxbury – Under the direction of first-year head coach Brian Johnson, the Dragons are having a tremendous start to their season. They made it four in a row and remained unbeaten with two wins and a draw this past week. They opened with a 3-2 win over Whitman-Hanson, then fought off Pembroke, 1-0, before a scoreless draw against Scituate.

Skippers one pass short of epic comeback

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

If there's one thing we've learned about the Cohasset High School football team in the early part of this season, it would be that this is a team that plays with a lot of heart.

"We showed some moxie tonight," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said after last week's 28-22 overtime win against Quincy. "We stuck with it and didn't quit. I thought we showed tremendous character."

The same could be said about Friday night's Border War with Hingham, a school just four miles down the road, although the results were different, with Hingham hanging on for a 3.

Against Hingham, the Skippers dug themselves into a 17-0 hole early and were unable to claw their way out – although they made a valiant effort.

In the second half, Cohasset cut the lead to 23-20 and were driving for a chance to take the lead when Hingham's Stewart Fay changed the landscape with an impressive leaping interception in the end zone, pulling the ball out of Roco Laugelle's hands in midair.

One play later, Hingham's Tim Wood blasted through a gap in the line and went 80 yards for a touchdown that made it 30-20 with the conversion.

The Skippers kept fighting though, and with 11 seconds left to play, Haggerty connected with brother, Shane Haggerty

Nantasket Grom Prix surf contest

On Saturday September 8, more than 120 kids from all over the South Shore descended on Nantasket Beach for the first annual 2012 Grom Prix surf contest.

It was the first of its kind surf contest for boys and girls ages 7-to-14. The day was sunny the waves were from 3 to 6 feet tall and the beach was wall-to-wall spectators and competitors. It was an amazing event.

Ten boys and 10 girls from the 7-to-10 age group and 10 boys and 10 girls from the 11-to-14 age groups advanced to the finals to compete for top prize a brand new surfboard.

The kids were judged by the one best wave score of the heats. Cohasset's Jackson Roberts won the Age 11-14 division.

Whalers edge Crusaders

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

The second period proved to be a shoot out between the Whalers and the Crusaders in a Legends Div. matchup in the South Coastal Hockey League.

The two teams combined for all seven goals in the second period of the game after a scoreless first period which included two by Hanover's Jim Toner to lead the Whalers to a 4-3 win over the Crusaders. Norwell's Bob Ferzoco and Chuck Morrison also scored for the Whalers in the second period.

Scott Mondeau and Mike Simon each had a goal and an assist while Hingham's Nate Rasmussen also scored a goal for the Crusaders.

Paul Brinkman exploded for four first period goals as the Toros rolled to a 6-2 Legends Div. win over the Saints. Ray Degaust added a goal and two assists for the Toros. Norwell's Mark McGreenery had a goal to go with an assist and James Ward also of Norwell had two assists.

Jonathan Graham and Marshfield's Mike White scored for the Saints.

The Stingers had won games by shootouts to start the season and they nearly had a third straight shoot out. Paul Smyth brorke a 2-2 tie with 2:45 left to give the Stingers a 3-2 Legends Div. win over the Sharks.

Ken Wingate and Scott Kelly both of Pembroke also scored and Michael Cashin of Norwell had three assists for the Stingers.

Dana Dolabany of Norwell and Art Riccio scored the goals for the Sharks.

Rockland's Marty DeCourcey scored three goals and had an assist as the Maple Leafs rallied from a 3-1 deficit for a 4-4 Classics Div. tie with the Red Wings. Marshfield's Mike Maher had a goal and an assist and Dave Evans also of Marshfield had two assists for the Leafs.

Scott Varley scored two goals, Duxbury's Harry Mathews and Mark Tedeschi of Hingham had a goal apiece for the Red Wings.

Mike Martin for the third staight game scored multiple goals in a game as he scored three and assisted on another in the Bruins 7-1 Classics div. win over the Rangers. John Zimmer of Marshfield added two goals and two assist John Dougenik had a goal and an assist for the Bruins. Steve Anzuoni also scored a goals and Peter Fallon of Hanover had three assists for the Bruins.

Bob Sideropolous scored for the Rangers in the second period.

Marshfield's glen harnisch scored two goals and Kirk Souza had two assists to lead the Canadiens to a 4-1 Classics Div. win over the Black Hawks. Tom Lema and Brian Geddes both of Marshfield also scored for the Canadiens and Kevin Parrish scored for the Blackhawks.

For the second consecutive year the U14 Massachusetts Premier Soccer (MPS) Lady Crusaders, featuring players from Scituate and Cohasset have earned an invitation to the Super-Y North American Championship tournament.

The USL Super Y-League Championships is the premier event of the summer for the Super Y-League. After competing during the regular season from April to August, the top teams from across North America convene at the IMG Soccer Academy in Bradenton Florida in December to battle for the championship.

The Lady Crusaders, comprised of a select group of girls from the Massachusetts and Rhode Island, along with their sister team the 2012 Massachusetts State Champion MPS Renegades, and the 2012 New Hampshire State Champion Seacoast United Soccer club will all represent New England in the tournament.

After months of hard work and extremely competitive league matches across New England and Canada, the Lady Crusaders season came down to the final week where, in the 90+ degree August heat, they achieved close victories over determined teams from Vermont and Maine to edge out out Ottawa, Ontario Canada in the standings and advance to the national tournament.

Coach Gavin MacPhee added, "I am very proud to be taking the U14 Lady Crusaders to Super-Y Nationals for the second year running. The girls success is entirely down to hard work and effort and they deserve the opportunity to compete against some of the top teams in the USA and Canada."

The Lady Crusaders team members are:

- Kelly Blanchard, Amelia Burke, Nicole Geraghty, and Grace Thomas of Bridgewater, Noelle Henderson, Kaitlin Brown, Alyssa Rosen, Julia Sandquist, and Alex Stockman of Walpole, Emily Damrell and Kaitlin Forsyth of Scituate, Madeline Smith of Rhode Island, Abby Osmanski of Cohasset, and Sarah Crofts of Medfield.

RANKINGS

4. Marshfield – A two-step drop in the rankings for the Rams after a 1-1 week. It began with a narrow, 2-1 loss at Nauset, followed by a win on the road against Falmouth. This team still looks sharp, though, despite a couple early bumps in the road.

5. Braintree – The Wamps jump up one from No. 6 in the rankings, largely due to a pair of wins last week. It started with a two-goal victory over Brookline and ended with a win in their home opener against Norwood.

6. Cohasset – Week two marks the Inside the 6 debut for the Skippers, a well-deserved one at that. Wins over Norwell, Hull, and Rockland this week kept Cohasset unbeaten and proved that this team is has what it takes to win the South Shore League.

On the bubble: Scituate, Norwell, Hanover

Last week: 1. Weymouth, 2. Marshfield, 3. Hingham, 4. Duxbury, 5. Hanover, 6. Braintree

Girls

1. Plymouth North – The Eagles leapfrogged their rivals Marshfield to take over the top spot in the rankings, outscoring their opponents last week, 9-2, and notching two shutouts. That's now three clean sheets on the season (entering play this week). The Eagles beat Sandwich, 1-0, Nauset, 4-0, and Natick, 4-2, to remain perfect.

2. Marshfield – The Rams played two games and got two results, but fell a notch this week after Plymouth North's phenomenal form. For the record, the Rams meet the Eagles Sept. 28 at home. Could be the matchup of the season to that point. In action last week, the Rams toppled Nauset, 4-1, before blanking Falmouth, 2-0.

3. Duxbury – The Dragons fall one notch in the rankings this week. They opened last week with a heartbreaking, 1-0 loss to Whitman-Hanson, but rebounded with wins over Pembroke and Scituate to improve to 3-1 on the season.

4. Carver – Did anyone expect a team comprised largely of underclassmen to start the season at 4-0-1? The Crusaders sure did, and now they have the rest of the league feeling uneasy after their commanding start. This past week, they tied rivals Norwell, 2-2, getting a goal late in the game to secure the draw, and then beat Hull, 3-1.

5. Scituate – One of two new teams in the rankings this week and a team making its 2012 debut Inside the 6, it's the Sailors of Scituate. Despite ending the week with a tough, 1-0 loss to rivals Duxbury, they made a statement with a pair of 3-0 wins (at Pembroke and at Quincy) in the days prior.

6. Braintree – From the bubble to a spot in the top six. The Wamps make their Inside the 6 debut after going unbeaten last week to remain on one of the hottest starts in the Bay State league. They tied a top Brookline team, 4-4, before beating Norwood, 3-1.

On the bubble: Weymouth, Norwell, Hingham

Last week: 1. Marshfield, 2. Duxbury, 3. Plymouth North, 4. Carver, 5. Weymouth, 6. Norwell

The Inside the 6 – Soccer Power Rankings are decided based on a number of criteria: record, strength of schedule, performance against teams in and out of their divisions, goals scored, and goals conceded. The public schools in our coverage area include: Abington, Braintree, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Marshfield, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth North, Plymouth South, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake, and Weymouth. Check out your town's Wicked Local website to see the rankings and to comment on them, and feel free to email Ryan Wood at rwood@wickedlocal.com.

for a touchdown that cut the lead to 30-26 with 3.9 left to play.

"We let them hang around. They are a good team and are well coached and when you let them hang around you are asking for trouble," Hingham's veteran coach Paul Killinger said. "Momentum switched to them in the second half and they outplayed us in all three phases of the game. We had chances to put the game away. We got the ball at their three (after a pass interception) and we go backwards because of penalties and have to kick a field goal. We dropped a couple of touchdown passes. We left too many points on the field."

Cohasset is now in preparation for another Border War.

Friday night, the Skippers will head to Scituate and try to avenge last year's 14-10 loss in Cohasset.

The Sailors are 1-1 this season.

In their opener, Scituate used two fourth-quarter touchdowns to beat Rockland.

Mike Stewart threw a 38-yard touchdown pass to Dante Sacchitella with 8:40 left in the game, and Dawayne Kirton ripped off a 50-yard touchdown run to ice the win for Scituate.

Francis Donovan kicked both extra points

Friday night, Scituate wasn't as fortunate, losing 8-6 at Norton.

Kickoff for Friday night's game is 7 p.m.

CROSS COUNTRY NATIONALS

34th Annual Foot Locker Cross Country Championships Northeast Regional returns to Van Cortlandt Park

Foot Locker announced Wednesday that the 34th Annual Foot Locker Cross County Championships Northeast Regional race will return to Van Cortlandt Park (251st St. and Broadway) in Bronx, N.Y., after relocating for three years. Van Cortlandt Park was the home of the Northeast Regional from the race's inception in 1979 until 2009, when the park underwent construction.

"We are thrilled to return 'home' to Van Cortlandt Park, where it all started," said Jeanine Zocks, vice president of strategic alliance and events. "Thousands of runners began their cross-country careers with us at Van Cortlandt, including Olympic medalist Shalane Flanagan, American 5,000m record holder, Molly Huddle, and most recently, Olympian Donn Cabral. We look forward to hosting this year's Foot Locker Cross Country Championships there once again."

Thousands of the nation's top runners are expected to compete in the 34th Annual Foot Locker Cross Country Championships. The series consists of four regional 5K races across the country. The Northeast Regional (Bronx, N.Y.), South Regional (Charlotte, N.C.) and Midwest Regional (Kenosha, Wis.) will be held Nov. 24. The West Regional (Walnut, Calif.) will take place Saturday, Dec.1.

The top 10 boys and the top 10 girls in the seeded races will qualify to compete against runners from the South, Midwest and West Regional meets in the Foot Locker Cross Country Championships National Finals, on Saturday, Dec. 8, at Morley Field, Balboa Park in San Diego, Calif.

Minot Light Roundabout rowing race

Sixteen boats from across New England converged on Cohasset's Sandy Beach on Sunday morning to participate in the Cohasset Maritime Institute's Minot Light Roundabout open water rowing race. Whaleboats, pilot gigs, livery boats and sliding seat singles, doubles and fours gathered to test their skills against the waters off Cohasset and each other.

Rowing conditions were ideal, with blue skies and moderate chop as the Selkie, a six-person pilot gig from Come Boating in Belfast, Maine, finished with a winning time of 40:08 for the 4.25 mile course. It is a scenic course past Brush Island along the ledges off Cohasset to Minot Light, with the Boston skyline in the distance as the boats round back to Sandy Beach.

The race was highly competitive, with all 16 boats and 57 racers finishing in under an hour. Local rowing clubs included Hull Lifesaving Museum with the pilot gigs Sacred Cod and Kittery, Saquish Rowing Club, and host Cohasset Maritime Institute with its Antoine, Hubbard and Wilson sliding seat fours.

Post-race festivities at the beach included a barbecue for racers and spectators, Nona's Ice Cream, the Rusty Skippers in concert, plus t-shirts and medals for all racers. It was a great day for rowing, as well as enjoying another beach day in Cohasset. The Cohasset Maritime Institute is already looking forward to the 2013 event.

The Cohasset Maritime Institute is a community organization that offers boat building and recreational rowing opportunities for youth and adults, plus the chance to participate in ocean races up and down the coast of Massachusetts. Visit rowcmi.com for more information or stop by 40 Parker Avenue.

It takes an entire team to get boats in the water for the Roundabout.

The Cohasset Maritime Institute had multiple boats compete in the event.

LIVING WELL

Healthy habits help aging process

JOAN F. WRIGHT

Little steps make a big difference. Speak to your doctor, who knows your medical history and can point you towards the best nutrition, diet, and exercise options for you.

Healthy Aging Month isn't reserved just for the senior set.

Regardless of our age, we all should be focused on aging well through our early, middle and senior years. A recent beach walk during low tide was a perfect illustration of this. People of all ages were walking, swimming, body surfing and playing various beach games under a blue, cloudless sky. Walking the water's edge I encountered a line of 8-year-old boys waiting their turn to skimboard one by one down a gulley of shallow water emptying into the ocean. Boys of summer: freckled and tanned, giggling and elbowing each other in their ribs so distinctly outlined in each of their lean frames. I sucked in my breath so as not to give away my less than taut stomach as I eased my way by, envying their carefree youth and enthusiasm.

Further along, a group of 60-plusers whose stomachs had also seen better days were nonetheless matching their bocce skills against a younger gaggle of men and women sporting far better toned bodies. Footballs and Frisbees punctuated the beach sky. Skirting around Whiffle ball baselines etched in sand as games pitted families against families, I smiled at all the activity and the numbers of people so happy to play in the sun and sand. The sounds and sights were so inspiring I powered on to walk an extra half-mile.

Yet I couldn't help but wonder about the people I saw who weren't moving about, whose bodies were stretched well beyond their normal weight. Sadly, I noticed several were children. What would the future hold for them, facing such challenges now at such young ages?

Obesity is nothing new, but we've certainly been hearing about it more and more. While the overall rate for all ages has grown considerably in the last 40 years, obesity among children has grown at an alarming rate. With more than 23 million children and teenagers in the U.S. obese or overweight, medical experts are calling childhood obesity an epidemic. What's worse, this puts one-third of America's children at early risk for high blood pressure, heart disease, Type 2 diabetes, and even stroke.

But we all have the power to change this. With September also National Childhood Obesity Awareness Month it's an opportune time for everyone, regardless of age, to step up and move toward healthier aging. The key is starting small with simple, realistic steps. For example, if soda is part of your daily diet, cut out one soda a day; or the bag of chips after school every other day. Work your way up to eliminating more junk food and empty calories every two weeks.

Move around more. Invite family or friends to join you in walking after dinner or bicycling on weekends. Don't get dropped off at the door or park close to the store - park at the end of the lot and walk to the school, store, or office building. When the weather forces you indoors, don't stop. Do a lap around the inside of the house every time a new television show begins, then increase to every commercial. Do leg lifts or lift small hand weights as you sit in the chair.

Little steps make a big difference. Speak to your doctor who knows your medical history and can point you towards the best nutrition, diet, and exercise options for you. This September don't fall into sedentary mode. Move forward to healthier living that enables you, and those you love, to age well.

LIFE AT CHS

Homework club to start next week

WHITNEY MALONE

Hi everyone! I hope you all had a great week; it has certainly been a busy one at CHS.

Monday, members of the committee for the school newspaper, The Spinnaker, met at lunch to discuss possible news topics and features articles for the first issue, coming out October 31st. While only seniors are allowed to be staff, students from all grades are welcome to write for the paper! If you're interested in submitting your writing, contact the chief editors, Andrew Barrett, Bobby Nahill, and Matt Gregory.

Now that the school year has begun, the National Honor Society will be continuing Homework Club on Tuesday nights at the library, beginning next week. All elementary and middle school students are welcome to come for help from NHS members on their homework and for pizza afterward!

For seniors, this first semester of school is a busy one as we prepare for college application deadlines in November and January. Fortunately, this week the Guidance counselors met with the senior English classes, which have been partially devoted to developing college essays, to discuss the application process and make sure that we are staying organized (and not too stressed-out!). For parents, there is a High School Grade 12 Parent Coffee next Thursday, the 20th, where the Guidance department will answer your questions.

Tomorrow morning, there is a mandatory workshop from 9 to 11 am for all Peer Leaders. The Peer Leaders program, run by Ms. Gordon in the middle school, is continuing to train high school students as leaders by meeting with middle school classes throughout the year to discuss social issues, such as bullying, and make the school a safer environment for all students.

That's it for this week in Life at CHS! Again, I welcome any feedback or news you would like to have included in the column!

Whitney Malone is a senior at CHS; her column runs weekly throughout the school year.

Social Dance classes to start

A tradition going back nearly one hundred years ago has returned to Cohasset. Boston Assemblies Social Dance program invites Cohasset students entering the fifth grade to Glastonbury Abby to enjoy learning a lively mix of traditional and contemporary dances as well as etiquette instruction in essential social skills.

The program provides an opportunity for fifth graders to interact socially in the kindest, nicest way. Standing as a sign of respect, offering an arm, escorting and seating a partner are seldom used behaviors but very important when the appropriate occasion presents itself. Learning and practicing social etiquette instills confidence, sensitivity, grace, and poise in social situations, now and in the future.

Every class includes party dances with prizes. The dancing is the vehicle by which we establish habits and practice lifelong social graces all while having fun with peers. All members of the fifth grade class are welcome.

The session consists of eight classes starting in November from 5:30 - 6:30 pm at Glastonbury Abby:

- November 6 and 13
- December 4 and 11
- January 8 and 15
- February 5 and 12
- Snow date: March 5

GIMME SHELTER

Mandy is a very special girl

PAULA FATERSIK

Since coming into the shelter, Mandy has shown just how loving, gentle and peaceful she is. With traits like these, this beautiful six-year-old would be a wonderful addition to the right person's home and family.

It has been a few months since Mandy arrived at Hull Seaside, and we are hoping that she will be packing her kitty carrier and moving to a new, forever home soon. Sadly, Mandy's owner passed away and you can tell that she found this change in her life one that we all know to be very difficult. For a little while, Mandy quietly watched us, wanting to be close, but holding back a little. Just like any one of us losing a family member, animals, too, have feelings of loss and separation. Things are looking up for this beauty though and she is hoping for a bright future.

One of the most wonderful things is that Mandy is strolling around with us now, purring, and letting us know that she's ok with things. What a great feeling. The very best situation for her would be to meet and be chosen by a loving family or single, going back into a home where she can flourish. Mandy was very lucky pet. Cared for beautifully and loved so much. What could be more perfect? Well, a second chance with another devoted owner would be heaven for her! A taste of turkey on Thanksgiving Day? Fabulous.

Since coming into the shelter, Mandy has shown just how loving, gentle and peaceful she is. With traits like these, this beautiful six-year-old would be a wonderful addition to the right person's home and family. No, she is not a kitten, but she is a perfect lady, very well behaved and has passed through the crazy kitten and wild side, teenage years that some owners find very stressful. Her sweet, calm and reserved personality really is a big plus! It is her gift to give.

In a new home, it is very likely that she will play and purr up a storm. It will be a real treat for her to relax and enjoy petting and brushing with her new family. Being spoiled a little would be great for Mandy! She deserves that, especially now.

It would probably be nice for Mandy to be an only cat. While she coexists well with other cats in her room at the shelter, she does love to have one-to-one attention and observes more than interacts with her roommates. However, if you already have a calm and happy pet who needs a new friend, there is a good chance that she may just bond with that animal as she seems to take things in stride once she gets comfortable. For the person who wants a really special young girl, Mandy would be a perfect choice.

You can visit Mandy at Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, located at 50 L St. Open Hours are Monday evening from 6:30-7:30 and Saturday from 2-3 p.m. Our office number is 781-925-3121. You may also contact Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902 for an appointment. To see more of our wonderful kittens and cats who are waiting for loving homes please visit www.HSAR.org and click on Available Pets.

A big thank you from all of us here at the shelter to all of the merchants, business owners and generous people who visited our booth at Endless Summer last weekend. We can't do it without you, and every donation and ticket sold helps to house, feed and provide veterinary care for animals like Mandy in our shelter. Also, it was great to see some of our adoptive families and hear about our great cats who are now enjoying their forever homes. We were thrilled to have your continued support and hear your stories of HSAR kittens and cats who have happy endings!

And don't forget, the holidays are right around the corner and that means it is Kittendale's Calendar season! You can purchase your 2013 calendars featuring our hunky guys and cute kittens at the shelter, conveniently order them online at www.kittendales.com, or on our website, www.hsar.org. Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is a nonprofit, no kill shelter and we appreciate your continued support!

HAPPENING SATURDAY

Ultimate lawn party for a great cause

Think the game of croquet died with Queen Victoria? Think again. It is alive and well and hilariously competitive at the annual Croquet Classic in Cohasset on Saturday, Sept. 22. It is the most fun you can legally have on someone's front lawn and it is all to support pediatric programs at South Shore Hospital.

The Friends of South Shore Hospital LINKS group invites you to join them for the ultimate lawn party at a private, waterfront home in Cohasset. Croquet is the main attraction, but a raffle with great prizes like Patriots tickets, a wonderful spread of gourmet food and adult beverages, and a relaxed and entertaining atmosphere also highlight the event. The point is—you don't have to know how to play croquet or even step on the croquet court to have a great time!

The LINKS members are young professionals with families of their own who live and work on the South Shore. They hold multiple events each year to raise funds in support of pediatric programs at South Shore Hospital. To register for the Croquet Classic and obtain additional details, please log onto southshorehospital.org/events or call 781-624-4170.

BUSINESS NOTES

Jeramie DiBona promoted to director

Kirkland Albrecht & Fredrickson LLC, a CPA firm, announced that Jeramie DiBona, CPA, of Cohasset, has been promoted to director of the Tax Compliance & Business group.

In this role, DiBona, who formerly held the title of senior manager and has been with KAF for 13 years, will lead the five-person group responsible for servicing companies that do not maintain a chief financial officer. Services provided by the TCB group include accounting, bookkeeping, tax strategy and compliance, business advisory, financial statements and analysis.

DiBona graduated from UMass-Dartmouth with a degree in accounting. He is presently working toward his masters in taxation degree at Suffolk University. He holds membership in the CPA & Business Professional Group; Associated Builders and Contractors of Massachusetts; and the Massachusetts Society of CPAs Inc.

DiBona makes his home in Cohasset with his wife and their two sons. He is an avid hockey enthusiast and is on the Board of Directors of the Cohasset Soccer Club.

"It is with pleasure that we announce Jeramie's promotion to director," said Kenneth Kirkland, managing partner of Kirkland Albrecht & Fredrickson LLC. "His knowledge, leadership skills and general commitment to excellence make him the perfect choice to head our Tax Compliance & Business group."

Bixby named a top lawyer

Burns & Levinson LLP has announced that Cohasset resident Brian D. Bixby is one of the Firm's 26 attorneys selected by their peers for inclusion in The Best Lawyers in America 2013 (Copyright 2012 by Woodward/White, Inc. of Aiken, S.C.), the oldest and most respected peer-review publication in the legal profession.

This is the fourth consecutive year in which Mr. Bixby has received this honor. Additionally, he is one of only twelve attorneys in Massachusetts to be recognized in the "Litigation – Trusts & Estates" category. He is also included in the "Family Law" and "Trusts & Estates" categories.

Mr. Bixby is a Partner, member of the Executive Committee, Chairman of the Probate & Trust Litigation Group and Co-Chair of the Private Client Group at Burns & Levinson. He works with clients out of each of the Firm's Massachusetts offices, including those in Hingham, Boston, Waltham and Andover.

For more information, visit Burns & Levinson at www.burnslev.com.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF Oct. 1, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Someone has some suggestions to offer regarding your new project. You might find them helpful. Remember to avoid speculation and to stick with just the facts, Lamb.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An old friend suddenly reappears. Whether this proves to be a boon or a bane in the Bovine's life depends on the reason for this surprising reappearance. Be cautious.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Vital information finally emerges, allowing you to make that important personal decision. You can now move your focus to an upcoming professional development.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might not like seeing so many on-the-job changes. But some of them could open new opportunities for the Moon Child's talents to shine to your best advantage.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An apparently solid-gold opportunity beckons the Lion. But check to see if all that dazzle isn't just a sprinkling of surface glitter. Check it out before making a commitment.

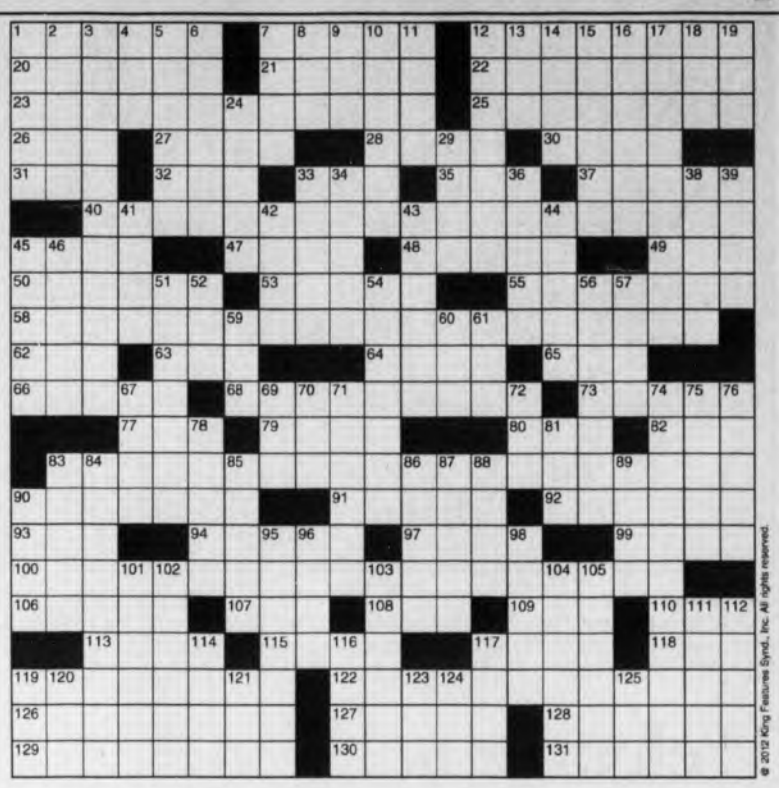
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A close friend could offer advice on how to handle a difficult family matter. But in the end, the decision has to be made based on what is best for you and those you love.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Family problems are best worked out with all those concerned contributing suggestions that will ease tensions. Stay with it until a workable solution is found.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Expect to hear more about an offer that has piqued your interest. You earn respect for insisting on solid facts, not just a fancy talk about potential opportunities.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) What seemed to be a reasonable workplace request might need to be defended. Don't fret. You have both the facts and a surprise ally on your side.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A bit of capriciousness might be just what you need. Plan to kick up your heels in a round of fun and games with family and friends this weekend.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Although some of your plans might have to be put on hold, things do begin to take a turn for the better by midweek. Your financial crunch also eases.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your financial picture begins to brighten by week's end. There are also favorable changes in your personal life. Someone you care for has good news to report.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You seek balance, but not at the expense of justice. You would make a fine judge.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

OPEN HOUSE SEPT. 29

The monks and members of the Glastonbury Abbey community raise baby goats right on their grounds, and often introduce them to curious children, such as Emma Savage of Albany, pictured here. At the Open House on Sept. 29, all will be invited to meet and feed the goats. COURTESY PHOTO

Welcome mat out at Glastonbury Abbey

By Kathleen McKenna
Special to the Journal

Judy Dwyer knows that many people have no idea what goes on at Glastonbury Abbey on Route 228, even if they drive by its blue and gold signs several times a week. She was once one of those people.

"I was one of those who didn't appreciate how much was there, until a friend encouraged me to explore the stunning grounds of Glastonbury on a beautiful fall day a number of years ago," she said.

Since she's become part of the extended Glastonbury Abbey community, she's eager to spread the news. That's why she helped organize the first annual Glastonbury Abbey Open House at 16 Hull Street (Rt. 228, just past the intersection of Rt. 3-A) on Saturday, Sept. 29, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"I am continually amazed by the depth and breadth of the rich spiritual, intellectual, social and cultural world at the Abbey," she said. "Yet so many folks really have no concept of what the Abbey is and all it has to offer."

The nine Benedictine monks who live at the Abbey are eager to open their grounds next Saturday. The activity-filled event is in keeping with the monks' mission of hospitality.

"We hope this will let people know that they are always welcome to take part in our events, and to make use of our grounds," said Brother Dan Walters. "We look forward to meeting many new and old friends at the Open House."

He said there will plenty to do for people of all ages, and all of it's free. Local restaurants are donating chowder and ice cream. Frankie the Hot Dog King is supplying free hot dogs. And rock 'n' roller Dave Foley, along with other musicians, will entertain the crowd from the Abbey's open-air stage in the center of the grounds. Also, hayrides will run throughout the day.

Visitors will be encouraged to tour the Abbey gardens, walk the winding, one-of-a-kind labyrinth, feed the herd of baby goats, and experience the unique landscape of the grounds.

The first time she visited the Abbey, Dwyer said, she "discovered the stone labyrinth at the edge of a quiet wood, where I felt touched by the peace and beauty. Someone was walking a dog while other people were walking the grounds or sitting in reflection. That was my introduction to a rare place in our otherwise crazy world."

As Roman Catholics, the monks of Glastonbury Abbey offer daily mass and pray regularly. But part of the monks' mission is promoting understanding and tolerance among people of all faiths and backgrounds. Everyone, they say, is invited to pray with them or enjoy the Abbey grounds and learning opportunities.

Those opportunities come from the Glastonbury Abbey Institute, a continuous series of classes, films, retreats, lectures designed for and open to people of all faith. Topics range from exploring Islam to understanding art history to practicing yoga, and much more. Also part of the Glastonbury Abbey Institute is the long-running Thursday night lecture series, "Listening to Other Voices."

"We are eager to share our beautiful grounds and buildings," Brother Dan said. "We want people to be aware of all the spiritual, educational, and cultural events that take place at Glastonbury during the year."

Since she first discovered the Abbey, Dwyer said, she has broadened her worldview by taking a variety of classes, attending lectures delivered by prominent speakers, and participating in the monks' many community-service activities.

"I'm always meeting people who tell me that the Abbey has been life-changing for them," she said. "That has been my experience as well."

A sign at the entrance to the Abbey grounds greets visitors with the words, "All Are Welcome."

"Indeed, this is the case," Dwyer said. "An open house is the perfect opportunity to share with others the rich traditions of this remarkable community."

ELECTION 2012 BEACON HILL

WOMEN, MINORITIES UNDERREPRESENTED

White men hold office in a disproportionate number of districts

By David Riley | driley@wickedlocal.com

Do your state lawmakers look like you? For white men in Massachusetts, the answer usually is yes. Minorities and women are far less likely to find a familiar face on the floor of the House or Senate, even as the state becomes more diverse. Women comprise just over half the state's population, but men outnumber them 3 to 1 on Beacon Hill. Combined, blacks and Latinos hold only 5 percent of the state's 200 legislative seats, despite making up 6.6 percent and 9.6 percent of the population, respectively, in the 2010 Census. Asian-Americans are more than 5 percent of the state population, but there only are three lawmakers of Asian descent on Beacon Hill. Two are just completing their first terms.

When it comes to reflecting diversity, Massachusetts government falls short of its progressive image, said Paul Watanabe, a political science professor and director of the Institute of Asian American Studies at UMass-Boston.

"The view is held by many people that those who govern should look like those who are governed," Watanabe said. "There's no question that in Massachusetts, if we look at the Legislature, there is a huge disparity between those two groups of people." That gap is not limited to the Legislature. With an obvious exception in Gov. Deval Patrick, minorities have held few top elected offices in the state. Attorney General Martha Coakley and State Auditor Suzanne Bump are the first women ever elected to their roles.

Political observers and advocates said minorities and women can offer unique perspectives and a firsthand understanding and passion for issues that affect them directly. With too little representation, these voices sometimes go unheard in public policy debates.

Michael Curry, president of the Boston NAACP, recalled a white lawmaker who said he only learned about and decided to tackle racial disparities in health care after an African-American staffer's mother experienced the problem firsthand.

Women

Women make up 51.6 percent of the population in Massachusetts. Yet they hold only 24.5 percent of the seats in the state Legislature. To look at it a different way, women hold 49 of the 200 seats in the Legislature — 38 out of 160 seats in the House, and 11 out of 40 seats in the Senate.

LOCAL PERSPECTIVE

Weighing in on representation

By Mariner staff

Local legislators say that despite data that indicates discrepancies in representation based on gender and race specifically, as well as other demographics, they say they follow the principles of good government and adhere to what is best for their constituents, which is generally in line with decisions that will also have a positive impact statewide.

Men outnumber women 3 to 1 on Beacon Hill, even though women account for more than half the state's population. Blacks and Latinos hold only 5 percent of the 200 legislative seats and there are three lawmakers of Asian descent serving on Beacon Hill despite growing populations amongst those races.

Here's what local legislators have to say about the district they represent, as well as what their opponents in the November General Election think about the issue.

3rd Plymouth District (House)

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, has been representing the Third Plymouth District (that now consists Hull, Cohasset, five precincts in Hingham, and one precinct in Scituate) for the past 12 years. Unopposed in the Nov. 6 General Election, Bradley, 42, who is white, a Hingham resident and an attorney, will soon embark on his seventh term.

He's the first to admit that while Hull may have the Regional dispatch meeting expectations

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

While not without its share of challenges, it appears that the transition to regionalized dispatch emergency call services is going as smoothly as possible.

Cohasset Fire Chief Robert Silvia, who serves on the state's 911 Commission, said that so far, "the transition has gone fairly smoothly. We've had some growing pains, some hiccups here and there... But it seems to be going well."

Condos floated

But abutters oppose plans

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

During two informal discussions with the Planning Board, the Red Lion Inn has proposed a new development project, adding two timeshare condominium units consisting of 40 one-bedroom and studio apartments to be located up the hill behind the Inn along James Lane and South Main Street.

Although each discussion so far has been preliminary and informal, with no permits yet filed, the proposed project has already garnered some neighborhood opposition.

The Red Lion Inn, a popular Cohasset Village destination for weddings, events, or just a home-style meal, has long courted controversy with a few of its neighbors, who have complained of noise and drunken guests.

Several letters have been filed at Town Hall; both residents and the Red Lion Inn's owners and attorney have appeared before the Board of

Coco

COCO is a very cute little dog that we believe is a Chihuahua mix.

He can be a bit shy when first introduced but is a very friendly boy.

Once he gets acquainted, he loves a good cuddle and is eager to give you lots of affection. Coco is about 1 year old and he weighs about 6 lbs.

We believe he would be a good match for an adult home or a family with children 10 years old or older (as he is a very small dog and we do not know if he has any experience with young children). A fenced yard is not required.

Call (781) 544-4533 for more information or stop by the Scituate Animal Shelter during open hours to meet Coco!

Senior Center study: community survey

The town-wide, online community survey that will include the proposed Senior Center project will be under way on Monday. The town hired consultants from UMass Boston to create the electronic survey.

All Cohasset residents aged 18 and over should receive a postcard in the mail with log-in information and instructions to access the survey. The survey should be completed no later than Oct. 19.

During normal work hours, internet access is available at the town library and at the Council on Aging office. UMass volunteers will offer assistance from 10 a.m. to noon on Wed., Oct. 10 at the Cohasset Housing Authority off Elm Street; Thurs., Oct. 11 at the Paul Pratt Library; and Sat., Oct. 13 at the South Shore Community Center (Elder Affairs), 3 N. Main St.

The survey's results are confidential and survey takers are not required to enter an email address or other personal information.

For more information, call 617-287-7361.

COHASSET UPDATE

WNV, EEE surveillance

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health (MDPH) and the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Program are performing ongoing surveillance of mosquitoes for incidence of Arboviruses (such as Eastern Equine Encephalitis [EEE] and West Nile Virus [WNV]) throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as part of the Massachusetts Arbovirus Surveillance and Response Plan. In addition to receiving weekly surveillance updates from MDPH, the Town of Cohasset regularly participates in conference calls with MDPH and other municipalities throughout Southeastern Massachusetts and the state, as well as receives email updates from MDPH.

Earlier this week, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health notified communities throughout the state that a positive human case of EEE was identified in a young male in Marshfield. Although the risk levels of Marshfield and Scituate have been raised as a result of the positive human case, Cohasset remains at a "moderate" risk level, which MDPH defines as "multiple cases of human disease caused by EEE or WNV are considered moderately likely at this time."

Given the recent findings, Cohasset, in consultation with the Acting Town Manager strongly urges residents and visitors to take the following personal precautions in order to avoid mosquito bites and the illnesses that they may cause:

• Repairing screens in windows and doors. Mosquitoes may enter a dwelling or commercial establishment if doors are left open and if screens are defective. Chapter II of the Massachusetts State Sanitary Code requires that all windows below the fifth floor of a dwelling must have screens that are at least 16 mesh per square inch and that all doors opening directly inside the dwelling unit have doors with similar screens installed from April 1 through October 30, both inclusive;

• Avoid standing water, including on private property. Mosquitoes are attracted to areas containing standing water, and lay their eggs in the standing water. Bird baths, rain gutters, drains, flower pots, wading pools and other sources of standing water should be drained twice weekly;

• Avoid evening and nighttime outdoor activities. The Cohasset Board of Health recommends that residents stay indoors between one hour before dusk and one hour after dawn in order to minimize the risk of mosquito bites.

• Apply mosquito repellant when outdoors — especially from dusk to dawn. MDPH recommends using a repellant with DEET or IR3535 as the active ingredient. All insect repellants should only be used in accordance with the instructions on the product's label. Per MDPH, "DEET products should not be used on infants under two (2) months of age and should be used in concentrations of 30% or less on older children". For more information about mosquito repellants, please refer to the MDPH fact sheet about mosquito repellants, which can be found at:mass.gov/eohhs/docs/dph/cdc/factsheets/mosquito-repellents.pdf;

• Wear long sleeves and long pants when performing outdoor activities during mosquito peak hours. In addition to using appropriate mosquito repellants, wearing proper clothing (i.e., long-sleeved shirts, long pants and socks) when outdoors will help keep mosquitoes from biting your skin; and

• Use mosquito netting on infant carriers and outdoor play areas. This netting should allow the infant and/or toddler to breathe while still block any access points for mosquitoes to enter the area and bite the child.

More information can be found on the MDPH Arbovirus Surveillance Information web page at www.mass.gov/dph/wnv, by calling the MDPH recorded information line at 866-MASS-WNV (866-627-7968), or by calling the MDPH Epidemiology Program at 617-983-6800. POLICE BEAT

OUI, wedding incident and check fraud among reports

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

OUI arrest

An officer on patrol on Sunday (Sept. 23) at around 5:30 p.m. noticed a gray BMW sedan driving on Jerusalem Road near Nichols Road that was speeding up and slowing down, coming close to stopping. The BMW turned right onto Red Gate Lane and continued operating at an inconsistent speed. Police pulled the car over on North Main Street by Wheelwright Park.

Police said the woman who is 55 and from Cohasset, had alcohol on her breath and slurred speech. Her eyes were bloodshot and glassy and she failed field sobriety tests.

She was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol, negligent operation, and operating an unregistered motor vehicle.

Wedding incident

The Red Lion Inn reported on Friday night that one of the servers at a wedding had been grabbed on the hips by one of the wedding patrons and asked to "hug me, hug me" while cleaning a table. She reported the incident to the manager and was able to identify the man who placed his hands on her hips. Police talked to the man, who was with his girlfriend and denied the incident. He was intoxicated, became agitated while being interviewed. He was told he was no longer wanted at the wedding. A taxi was called for him. The man is 28 and from Framingham, police said.

Hit by rock

A Hull Street caller wanted it logged last Monday (Sept. 17) that his truck was hit by a rock. Police said officers read the calls before starting their shift and would pay extra attention to that area. No other incidents were reported.

Bike mishap

Police responded to a report of a bicycle-car accident last Monday (Sept. 17) that was called in at around 8 a.m. They determined the call was unfounded after going to the scene and finding nothing. Police said the caller might have seen someone fall off a bike and thought it was an accident.

Roofers

A South Main Street caller notified police last Monday (Sept. 17) at around 9 a.m. about two men in her backyard who claimed to be there to do a roofing job. The caller was not having any work done; she thought it might have been a mistake but was wary because the men did not knock on her door first. The men left the area in a white van.

Check fraud

Police are investigating a report of check fraud. They said a Milton woman, who is a former resident, who has a local business and a local Post Office box believes that an ex-boyfriend may have accessed her box and cashed a check that belonged to her.

She contacted a client about payment that had not been received and was told by the client that a check for $1480 had been sent to her and cashed. The victim is getting more information from her bank that she will provide to police.

Equipment

A Sohier Street resident found construction tools in his yard hidden in the bushes last Tuesday (Sept. 18) and reported that to police. An officer spoke with the construction company, which advised its employees not to store the equipment on the neighbor's property, police said.

Not stalking

A worker in the bakery section of a local supermarket reported to police last week that his neighbor was stalking him and had just showed up at his work. Police talked to the caller and provided advice. They said it was not a case of stalking.

MVA

A 71-year-old Hull woman was cited for failure to yield the right of way following a two-car accident on Hull Street near DiNero's last Tuesday (Sept. 18) at around 7:21 p.m., Police said the woman, who was operating a 2007 Mercury Grand Marquis, pulled out of the DiNero's parking lot into the path of a 2005 Nissan Pathfinder, operated by an 18-year-old Pembroke man. The Hull woman was transported to the hospital with minor injuries. Her car was towed and she was issued a citation.

Warrant arrest

A 22-year-old Braintree man in a 2005 Nissan Altima was arrested on a warrant on Wednesday (Sept. 19) on S. Main Street following a traffic stop. The arresting officer recognized the operator as having an active warrant and made the stop. The warrant was for aggravated assault, police said.

Expired license

Police responded to a report of a Dodge Ram pickup truck that was being operated erratically in the area of Brewster Road last Wednesday (Sept. 19) at around 6:38 p.m. An officer was dispatched to Wood Way and Brewster Road where a witness described the black Dodge pickup and provided the plate number. The witness reported the vehicle went east on Brewster Road and made a right onto Ledgewood Farm Drive. The officer pulled the pickup over on Ledgewood Farm Drive. A check on the license of the operator came back as his license being expired, non-renewable. He was cited for operating with an expired license and the pickup was towed, police said.

Intoxicated

Police responded to a call from a taxi driver on Jerusalem Road on Thursday (Sept. 20) at around 2:55 p.m. who was having problems with an intoxicated female customer. The woman's husband took custody of her, police said.

Unwanted

A Fairoaks Road woman notified police Thursday (Sept. 20) about a business associate that she wanted to leave her home. Upon arrival, police found the unwanted party getting into a taxi in the driveway. They ID'ed him and talked with the caller who said they had had a dispute over money that culminated in her asking him to leave. There was no physical contact, police said.

Road rage

A woman notified police last Thursday (Sept. 20) at around 9:06 p.m. that after she cut a motor vehicle off on the highway, the operator followed her home and sat in her driveway behind her for about five minutes before taking off. She refused assistance but wanted the incident logged.

Dumpster

Police responded to a report from a Mohawk Way resident who saw a man going through her Dumpster on Sunday (Sept. 23). She gave police a description of the man who left but was not able to provide the plate number of the dark gray Trailblazer he was driving.

William Quigley agreed. "There's been some bumps in the road but nothing that was insurmountable. We've been working very closely with the leadership at the SSRECC to make the transition smooth."

Cohasset's public safety dispatchers relocated to the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC) in Hingham at the end of August, nearly four years after the town inked an agreement to join in regionalization. The SSRECC opened its doors in January 2012. The dispatch center also serves the towns of Hingham, Hull and Norwell, providing emergency call answering and dispatch services for the towns' police and fire departments. All SSRECC dispatchers are E-911 and Emergency Medical Dispatch (EMD) certified.

Right around the time Cohasset's dispatchers were joining the other three towns at the center, the SSRECC dealt with three simultaneous emergencies that displayed just how regionalized services are supposed to work.

On the morning of Wednesday, August 29, four subsets of dispatchers at the SSRECC received three different emergency 911 calls and dealt with each one simultaneously. One of the calls was for man who had been electrocuted on Lafayette Avenue in Hingham when a ladder he was using came in contact with a power line.

The two dispatchers who handled the three calls were commended at a recent Hingham Board of Selectmen's meeting along with five members of the Fire Department. The dispatchers, Laurie Croke and Francis Bowler, immediately dispatched rescue personnel, while at the same time instructed civilians on the scene on how to perform CPR. The Fire Department members, Captain John Haley, Lt. Michael Vento, Firefighter Paramedics Nichole Pinkus, Michael Woods, and Thomas Jacintho revived the patient and took him to South Shore Hospital. According to reports, the man was expected to recover.

Lt. Governor Tim Murray (L) is shown one of the new dispatch stations by dispatch center manager Al Wallace during a tour of the new facility in August of 2011. STAFF PHOTO/CHRIS BERNSTEIN

Chief Silvia called this recent life saving a team effort.

"It wasn't just the two dispatchers who were recognized, but the entire shift," said Silvia. "I've been over there and watched what goes on, and it's nice to have the ability for multiple people to share the workload when something big happens. We never had that before."

Having only person to handle multiple emergency calls is "mind-boggling," the fire chief continued.

Calling 911

According to reports, the 911 calls that come in ring loud and twice as fast as calls on the center's business line. Emergency calls also come in on four positions, and show call information on the screen. Calls from cell phones, which have GPS systems, can also show the location. Calls on the 911 system must be answered within five seconds, where business line calls are not required to be prioritized this way. Cell phone calls initially go to the State Police dispatch, which routes them to the SSRECC.

As of July 31, the SSRECC has handled a total of 62,965 calls, according to a Hingham Journal report. Of those, 54,381 were made to the business lines, and 8,584 were made to 911. Total calls that required personnel to be dispatched amounted to 27,847 in the same time period, although less than a third of those calls for service came in on the 911 emergency lines.

The new and improved level of services the SSRECC can offer is "something that we had expected and hoped for," said Silvia. "From that standpoint it seems to be going well, [but] we have a long way to go."

One of the biggest challenges for the center, according to Cohasset's Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, is drawing up a union contract. Workers have made anonymous complaints about shift differences and hours worked on a Hingham Internet blog.

"I have [SSRECC] board of directors or subcommittee meetings twice a week," said Milanoski. "We're in the process of dealing with union negotiations... There are a lot of hardworking people interested in doing the right thing, and we're looking forward to helping them do their job."

The acting town manager has chalked these issues up to "growing pains."

"Whenever you're starting a new organization, there are just bugs and challenges. The big issue we're working through right now is creating a union contract."

Milanoski assured that he and the other town managers are working to resolve the issue.

"All four town managers have a great working relationship, and it's our job to solve problems and make sure the system is running as efficiently as possible," he said, adding, "not only the four town managers, but the eight police and fire chiefs are also meeting on a regular basis to continue to move the organization forward."

Working alongside the other three towns is nothing new for the fire department, said its chief.

"We've been dealing with mutual aid for a long time," said Silvia. "For us to get along in a regional effort from the fire side of the house is not that difficult, I think. We have a lot of experience with it."

Staffing challenges

Deputy Police Chief Quigley said that his department is also doing their best to ensure a smooth transition to regionalized dispatch, especially since moving the dispatchers out of the police station has led to a few changes.

For one thing, the police station lobby is being turned into a "safe room," which requires security upgrades, including a video monitor that links to the SSRECC. The large window in the lobby is also being removed and an smaller window installed on an adjacent wall.

After negotiating with the town's police union, the force must have three officers on duty at night and on the weekends (one in the office, two on the road) in order to keep the station staffed around the clock. This has required some flexibility and creativity on the department's part.

"We're working through the issues as well so we can get the station fully locked down and all the security updates installed," said Quigley. "It's challenging, but we're doing it. It's a sign of the times, being asked to do more with less, but it's no different than any department."

Both of Cohasset's public safety departments are dealing with an inflated overtime budget. According to a finance department report for fiscal 2013, from Jul. 1 2012 to Aug. 31, the police department has expended over $80,000, or 30 percent of its $265,000 overtime budget.

Quigley said his department is expending between $7,000 and $10,000 a week on overtime. He explained that while all of the force's positions are currently filled, two officers are currently enrolled in the police academy, leaving eight shifts open per week.

"I have to fill each shift because people are in training," said Quigley, adding that he is often in on the weekends. The overtime issue can be chalked up to a matter of staffing, and is something the town of Cohasset has to review.

"We have to take a long-term look at the services the town wants and the manning issues, what level of service do they want, and what are they willing to pay for," said Quigley.

On the fire side of the house, overtime is just as big of a problem, but then the department is five men short. The department already had one vacancy, but since the first of the year, two people have resigned while two others retired.

The department has expended over $88,000 of its $215,000 overtime budget (41.12 percent) from Jul. 1 to Aug. 31.

Silvia said that the fire department also has two men in the fire academy who are due to complete their training in the next few weeks, which will help with the staffing issue. The fire chief also said that "it's not so much an overtime problem as a staffing problem.

"We're operating with five fewer people than we need," said Silvia. "We only have 22 to start with and when you lose a portion of the force, it affects overtime greatly. Again, I'm hoping we will come in on budget because we managed to do it last year in a similar situation... We have managed to come in on budget for the last two years when we dealt with the same type of situations."

Another issue on the mind of town officials, chiefs and citizens alike is whether the SSRECC will help the towns save money. The expected budget savings from the regionalization of dispatch services has not been realized yet, according to reports. The center was built largely using state grants and is funded partly by 911 surcharges on cell phone bills. The center is built to accommodate a few more towns, so the idea is that cost savings will be realized once other towns come online, officials said.

The fire chief said that while saving money would be nice, in the end, that's not the most important part of regionalized dispatch.

"As far as the money issue goes, one of the very first things I brought up [when Cohasset considered regionalization] is that if we could provide a much improved service for the same amount of money, that would be a win for us. Any money we save, especially as additional towns transition... We're well ahead of where we once were."

Milanoski agrees that the bottom line for the SSRECC is offering improved services.

"As was demonstrated two weeks ago, the system works, and works better than the towns on their own," he said.

Hingham Journal correspondent Maryellen Dever contributed to this report.

Sue Reagan and Dolores Roy help Amelia Joyce, Caroline Donohue and Natasha Arnold plant crocus bulbs in the courtyard at Deer Hill.

Junior Gardeners plant tree at Deer Hill

The Junior Gardeners Club at Deer Hill School kicked off the school year by planting a beautiful Purple Fountain Weeping Beech in the corner of the Deer Hill courtyard. Chris Kennedy led twenty-seven students and eight Community Garden Club of Cohasset volunteers in planting the new tree. In addition, the Jr. Gardeners planted bulbs and spread mulch, donated by the PSO, around new and existing trees.

Principal Jennifer deChiara praised the ongoing collaboration between the Jr. Gardeners and Kennedy's. "We are especially grateful to Kennedy's Country Gardens for providing us with expert consultation and plantings to create a beautiful outdoor space, including a dogwood tree, witch hazel, and purple weeping fountain beech – a tree for every season!"

After the hard work in the courtyard, each student created a "word leaf" to describe the new beech tree. Ranging from "colorful" and "exquisite" to "mysterious" and "magnificent," the leaves formed a poster-sized tree of thanks for Chris Kennedy. As one word leaf declared, "mission accomplished!"

Isabella Hess and Elise Regan display the thank-you poster for Chris Kennedy featuring descriptions of the tree: "wise," "dazzling," "tall," "fairytale"

CHS senior is top equestrienne

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Equestrienne

Lauren Nolan of Cohasset recently claimed top honors in the $2,500 Equifit Hunter Derby at the 2012 Summer Showcase at Fieldstone Show Park in Halifax, Mass.

Lauren and her mount, Wiz, surpassed 34 competitors with a cumulative score of 363 for the win. The derby scores were calculated based on first- and second-round averages put forth by four official judges.

The winning mount, Wizardry CBF, is a nine-year-old Dutch warmblood owned by Claybrook Farms of Ithaca, MI.

Lauren, who began leasing Wiz in July, said Wiz was amazing. "He would literally jump the moon."

She spent the summer showing in both hunter and equitation divisions. Lauren, a senior at Cohasset High School where she is president of the Equestrian Club, hopes to qualify for the national USEF Pessoa Medal and the ASPCA Maclay Finals in 2013.

New arrival

Jen and Bob Edgar of Hanover announce the birth of their third son, Zackary Ryan Edgar born Aug. 16, 2012 at South Shore Hospital. Zackary was 9 pounds, 3 ounces and 19-inches long. His siblings Jacob, age 4 and Luke, age 2 are excited to have another brother.

Zackary is the grandson of Pat and Bob Edgar of Hanover and Judy and Dan Cellucci of Cohasset.

If you see Judy and Dan around town smiling more than usual, be sure to congratulate them on their new grandson!

Volunteers wanted

As a result of a change in the way Meals on Wheels will be delivered for distribution, Cohasset Elder Affairs seeks a dedicated volunteer for one hour on Friday mornings to organize and package meals.

This important program provides assistance to those most vulnerable in our community. Generous volunteer drivers use their own vehicles to deliver daily meals to those who otherwise might go without. This additional volunteer is required in order to ensure Meals on Wheels clients maintain the same level of superior service. If you or anyone you know can help for a short time each Friday, please call Cohasset Elder Affairs at 781-383-9112.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

Meditation master to visit Second Congregational Church

By Laura DeSisto
Special to the Mariner

Dr. Schrager will give a one-night workshop on meditation on Oct. 10 at Second Congregational Church. COURTESY PHOTO

Five minutes per day. That's all it takes to increase your focus, lift your mood, lower your anxiety, decrease chronic pain and even lower your blood pressure. One simple discipline has the power to produce all these benefits and more. Yet, most Americans have never even tried it. This simple, but powerful discipline is the practice of meditation.

The Reverend Dr. Susan Schrager, the spiritual head of the Vedanta Center (a non-sectarian place of worship with ashrams located in Cohasset, California and India), has seen firsthand the profound impact that meditating can have. She has been practicing and teaching meditation for over 50 years and in that time, has seen the habit of meditating for just a few minutes a day transform the lives of countless individuals.

Says Dr. Schrager, "Many people are under the misconception that in order to meditate effectively, they must spend hours every day in the lotus position. Yet in my experience, spending just five minutes each morning in quiet meditation can dramatically increase the quality of your day and ultimately, your life."

Dr. Schrager says that meditation is "90 percent simply learning how to concentrate, to control the mind and focus it in full attention, at will." She likens the mind to an unruly toddler that if left undisciplined, will have us running around in unproductive circles and leave us emotionally and physically exhausted. When trained through meditation, however, the mind can become our ally and a highly powerful tool.

"Obviously, as with anything, the more you practice, the better your results will be," says Dr. Schrager. "But, if I can get you to commit to even five minutes, if you are really disciplined, you will see the benefits. From there, many people choose to go deeper with their practice."

While the mind-body connection has recently been validated through science and such popular books as Benson's "The Relaxation Response," meditation is actually thousands of years old and has been a part of almost all the major religious traditions including Hinduism, Christianity, and Buddhism. In fact, Dr. Schrager was first introduced to it when she became an Episcopalian nun at the age of 17 and was required to meditate for one hour each day.
